PREFACE

Mr. Qian Songyan (1899—1985) was one of the most outstanding chinese landscpe painters. All his life was assiduously devoted to art. In his later years he even became more enthusiastic about art. His notable contributions, which have opened up a broad road for the development of modern Chinese landscape, will forever be remembered.

Mr. Qian was born of a painter's family in Yixing, Jiangsu Province Early in his childhood, influenced by his father, he began to cultivate a special interest in art, which later became an inexhaustible source in his artistic life. In his youthhood he studied the styles of Shi Tao and Shi Xi. His researches covered the masterpieces of the Tang, Song, Yuan dynasties. His unyielding spirit and extensive reading enabled him to explore the depth of life for a better obsevation of reality, endowed with natural gifts he finally obtained the truth of art from nature, thus making realizable his will to be an artist. In the depth of nature he procured her secret, and before long grew up to be a brilliant painter on the fertile soil of Chinese culture. It was his unique way of painting and artistic style that potentiated him to successfully grasp the core and substance of art, which was to be embodied by the things around, thus perfectly effectuating the combination of the spirit of age, national style and individuality. Nature's romantic charm, the tone of formal beauty and the spiritual flow and expression, presented in thousands of his works, have won him radiant splendour in the world.

Inspite of the great achievements in his peinting career, Mr. Qian set a shining example for the younger generation: straightforward and honest, lofty and industrious all his life. "Mr. Qian also struck me as a gentleman, severe in appearance and enthusiastic in the heart, quiet and stoid, cautious and diligent," commented Mr. Lai Shaoqi.

Surely, Mr. Qian's talent is vital to the history of art. His genuine exploration of the artistic form of Chinese landscape and bis extraordianry successes have deeply influenced not a few painters of his time and after him, all of them devoted to the creation of watercolour.

Undoubtedly the publication of this collection is a geat event in the publishing circle. It will not only mark but cherish the deepest memory of the supreme painter. The publisher will exert all its efforts to expand the excellent cultural and artistic tradition of the Chinese nation.

Mr. Qian, who was an old friend of mine for many years, rendered considerate care and earnest support for the establishment of Gu Wu Xuan Publisher (Ancient Suzhou Studio Publisher). I visited the old gentleman a few times and had long hearty talks with him. His living image is still fresh in my mind; his likeness and smiling expressions still vivid in my memory. And what impressed me most is his profound absorption in art. In commemoration of the seventh anniversary of his passing away I have written this preface.

A cordial acknowledgement is extended to Qian Xinmei, Qian Xinlan and the Municipal Museum of Wuxi for their tremendous assistance in the course of collection.

Suzhou June, 1992
