College of Economics and Management Northeast Agricultural University Harbin City, Heilongjiang, China

Dear College of Economics and Management

I am writing this letter at the invitation of Dr. Guo Xiangyu, a visiting scholar at Cornell University to help celebrate the 60th anniversary of the establishment of Northeast Agricultural University. I commend the College for your contribution towards advancing the academic disciplines critical to the success of rural communities and the agricultural industry of Heilongjiang Province and the whole of China.

As we have learned in our Department of Applied Economics and Management in the College of Agriculture and Life Science at Cornell University, teaching, research and outreach functions of a University can create great benefits to students, businesses, communities, and society as a whole. Generating cutting edge research and knowledge applied to solving contemporary issues can play a critical role in advancing the goals of society.

During times of significant social and economic change, evidence based research and learning becomes all the more important for making the best choices to remain competitive and prosperous in today's global economy. Your College can play an effective role in assuring that profitable economic strategies and sustainable environmental practices are adopted by students and practitioners.

I applaud your Colleges interest in learning more about how other Colleges and Universities in distant parts of the globe work towards addressing common issues in today's world. I encourage the College to increase its efforts in reaching out to farmers and rural communities during these times of economic re-adjustment. Your College can be an important catalyst for increasing agricultural productivity and improving the economic vitality of rural areas. Good luck in continuing to build even more successful curricula and research efforts over the next 60 years...

Congratulations,

William H. Lesser Professor and Chair

To the Faculty, Administration, and Students:

Please accept my congratulations on your 60th anniversary. For more than two generations your University has prepared students to become leaders in China, to live productive and progressive lives, and to solve the problems that face everyone on our constantly shrinking planet. There exists no more noble and honorable mission than adding to our collective knowledge and imparting that knowledge to others.

Agriculture and all of its associated disciplines will always remain at the heart of any civilization. In all disciplines of crop and animal production, food science, marketing, finance, economics, environmental stewardship, rural development, and national and international relations, those of you who study and teach agriculture will continue to make a profound difference in the world.

I send my sincere good wishes and highest hopes for a successful and dynamic future for Northeast Agricultural University.

With very best regards,

Jame R. Bocerca
