November 2, 1914.

My dear Miss Williams:

Yesterday morning in our discussion on the subject of "toleration", I have presented only the oriental point of view in which I was trained in my early years of life. Time did not permit me to present the modern and occidental point of view. I wish to state this latter view in writing. Before doing this, I shall summarize what I consider to be the oriental view in brief outline.

The oriental view may be characterized as an "altruistic toleration", that is, toleration based on consideration or regard for
