As the world said goodbye to the year 2001, 12 countries in Europe welcomed not only 2002, but also a new currency: the euro. On January 1, more than 300 million people gave up their national currencies. Twelve members of the 15-country European Union joined this historic move towards a more united Europe. At first, the euro will circulate with each national currency.

But from March 1, those currencies will belong to the past. The size of the coins and banknotes and the designs are the fruit of small compromises between member countries. Yet not everybody accepts the money. "It doesn't look real. It's small and it's a funny colour," said one Irish tourist, who had just taken a 50-euro note from a cash machine in Amsterdam in the Netherlands.

The euro was officially launched on January 1, 1999, for inter-bank transactions. Britain, Denmark and Sweden are the only members of the EU who have chosen not to join the single currency. But even in these countries, the euro could become a second currency as it is expected that many stores will accept it.

European leaders hope the euro will help the European economy and make it easier and cheaper to do business between single currency countries. The EU also hopes that the euro will bring Europeans closer together and make life easier for tourists.

I. Choose the best answer according to the passage.

- From the passage, we can infer that _____.
A. it's easier for people to travel in Europe.
B. people find it hard to buy things in Europe.
C. it's easier for European leaders to _____.
D. people will do business easier but expensively.
- According to the passage, we can know that _____ doesn't use the new money.
A. Germany B. France C. Sweden D. Italy
- The size of the designs of the euro is _____.
A. the fruit of fighting B. the result of trade
C. the beginning of fighting D. the final result of discussion
- Which of the following is right according to the passage? _____.
A. France will belong to the past since March 1, 2001.
B. Twelve members of EU don't at all accept the new euro.
C. The new euro in Britain could become the first currency.
D. All the members of EU expect that the new money will make Europeans closer.

Mr. Guppy was a very large man. He had a loud voice and a bad temper. He was much bigger than most men. Life was not easy for Mr. Guppy. He could seldom find clothes big enough. His feet were too large for most shoes. In buses, trains and planes, he could not stand up straight. The roofs were too low. In cars he could not move his legs. There was not enough room. At home, his bed was too short. Chairs were always too small.

In fact, wherever he went and whatever he did, Mr. Guppy had problems because of his size. These problems were so bad that Mr. Guppy stayed at home most of the time. Life was easier at home.

Then one day, a friend said, "You spend too much time at home. You should go out more. There's a good movie at the theater."

"I can't sit in theater seats," Mr. Guppy said. "I am too big." "That is no problem," his friend said. "I'll buy you two tickets. You can get them at the theater when you go."

The friend sent money to the theater for two tickets. When the day came, Mr. Guppy put on his best clothes and went to the theater.

"You have two tickets for me," he said to the woman in the ticket office. "My name is Guppy."

"Oh, yes, Mr. Guppy," the woman said. "Here you are, seats C4 and P12. I'm sorry, you and your friend can't sit together because we are very full this evening." Poor Mr. Guppy, he smiled sadly, walked out of the theater and went home.

Matt grows the best vegetables in the village. He grows fruit, too — sweet apples biggest and the prettiest flowers.

Things grow in Matt's garden all through the year. He cuts some flowers for his sitting-room table, and of course, he eats some fruit and vegetables. But he sells everything else in the market. Matt is not a poor man.

He knows a few other gardeners; but he does not have any friends. You might ask, "Why is that? Why doesn't he have friends?"

I will tell you. People do not understand him. And they do not understand his garden. "Why not?" you will ask. "It's a very good garden, isn't it?"

It is a wonderful garden. Matt plants things in spring, summer, autumn and winter. But he does very little work. He sits in the garden with his small radio. And everything grows.

People ask, "How does Matt grow these wonderful things? He waters the plants sometimes, but he doesn't do anything else. He just sits under an orange tree with his radio. He listens to music nearly all day!" And that is all quite true. People cannot understand it, and so they don't like it very much.

Matt likes music. But what about the garden? Who does the work? I will tell you another true thing: the music does the work. All plants love music, and Matt knows that. Do you want big vegetables and the loveliest flowers? Well, just give your plants a lot of music.

I. Choose the best answer according to the passage.

Martin Luther King was a black minister, who became a great leader of the civil rights movement in the 1950s and 1960s.

King was born on January 15, 1929 in Atlanta, Georgia. When he was young, he was strongly influenced by Thoreau and Indian leader Mahatma Gandhi's idea of non-violent resistance. Having received a Ph. D (Doctor of Philosophy) from Boston University, he became a political and religious leader of the non-violent civil rights movement in 1955. On August 28, 1963, he led over 250,000 Americans on a march in Washington D. C. to fight for the Civil Rights Law to guarantee equality for all people, and delivered his best-known speech "I Have a Dream" before the Lincoln Memorial. The "dream" is a dream of brotherly love and equality for black and White. Thus he was awarded the Nobel Prize for peace in 1964, but he was murdered four years later.

Though he died, he was greatly respected and loved by the Americans, both white and black. By vote of Congress in 1968, the third Monday of every January is now a

Almost everyone accepts the fact that crime can never be wiped out entirely. Thus, control of crime becomes the focus of police and governments around the world. The question lawmakers must answer is, "Which system of criminal punishment works best for society?" Each country has developed its own ideas for solutions to this question, and these solutions then determine how criminals are punished under different systems. However, none of the current systems in use has proven 100 percent effective.

There are many ideas regarding punishment of criminals. Some systems look only to go against criminals. These systems work to frighten criminals away from repeating a crime in the future. These systems also try to deter others in society by using the criminal as an example of what can happen to a person if he or she is caught committing crimes. Rehabilitation is another philosophy by which many systems of punishment operate.

The goal of these systems is to return a former criminal to society after he or she acquired a period of treatment and training, usually in prison. The idea is to try to help change the person's behavior and approach so that he or she becomes a law-abiding citizen.

Capital punishment is another form of punishment which systems use in extreme criminal cases, sometimes involving such crimes as murder, rape, and violent theft. In these cases, the person is put to death. Today, capital punishment is used in relatively few countries. Many countries have done away with it. In others, capital punishment remains only officially in law books but is rarely used. However, capital punishment remains in use in some countries, including the United States.

When we look at the number of crimes committed, the effectiveness of any of these forms of punishment comes into question.

In the United States, for example, 80 percent of the people arrested each year are male, and the majority of these are young men or boys. One-third of all auto thefts, robberies, and burglaries are committed by young men under the age of 18. Generally, young people have less responsibility in society, so they risk losing little if they are caught in a criminal activity.

However, it can also be argued that today's youthful criminals do not fear the punishment they will receive if caught by police.

Current methods of criminal punishment do not serve the purpose of deterring young criminals in the United States.
