Mr. Smith had a friend. The friend lived in a quiet place in the country. He asked Mr. Smith to go over and stay with him for a week. When Mr. Smith got to the house, he wanted to open his bag and take out his things, but suddenly he found (发现,找到;创办) that he had no key. "How foolish (愚蠢的,可笑的) I am! Now I must go back to the city to get my key," he said with regret (后悔,歉意).

"Oh, never mind," his friend said. "I'll call somebody to help you open your bag. But next time, don't forget your key! Now, let's have lunch, and after lunch, you must lie down and have a rest. Your bed is in the next room."

Some time later (后来,过一会儿), when Mr. Smith came (来,出现) to see his friend again, he remembered the key. On his way to his friend's house, he thought (认为,考虑), "This visit will give me a chance (机会,可能性) to show him that I don't always forget things!"

When his friend met him at the door, Mr. Smith said proudly, "Look here. I have the key."

"And where is your bag then?" his friend asked. But Mr. Smith had no bag in his hand.
