Mr. White was the owner of a newspaper. He always tried to bring his readers the latest news.

One day, he received a telephone call from someone. Mr. White was told that there was a sudden flood somewhere in the north and several people had disappeared. Mr. White quickly wrote it down. That evening the story was printed in his newspaper. Mr. White was glad to see that no other paper had known the news.

But the next day, another person telephoned him and told him he was tricked. So in the next day's paper he wrote, "We were the first and only newspaper to report yesterday that the village in the northern mountain was caught in a flood. Today, we are proud to tell you that we are again the first newspaper to bring our readers the news that yesterday's story was not true."

Nobody likes staying at home on a holiday — especially if the weather is fine. Last August we decided to spend the day in the country. The only problem was that millions of other people had the same idea. We moved out of the city slowly behind a long line of cars, but at last we came to a quiet country road and after some time, stopped at a farm near the town. We had carried enough food with us and we got it out of the car. Now everything was ready so we sat down near a path at the foot of a hill. It was very quiet in the cool grass until we heard bells ringing at the top of the hill. What we saw made us pick up our things and run back to the car as quickly as we could. There were about two hundred sheep coming towards us along the paths!
