Woman: Hi, Jack. It's good to see you again. Are you ready to get down to business again after spring break?

Man: Not really, but I don't really have too much choice, do I? And it's going to be particularly hard to get back to work since I just had the most fantastic vacation ever.

Woman: Really? What did you do?

Man: Kayaking.

Woman: Kayaking?

Man: Yes, you know what a kayak is, don't you? It's a long, narrow boat, the kind first used by the Eskimos. It's quite popular on white-water rivers.

Woman: Oh, I know what a kayak is, I was just surprised that you would take a trip like that. Weren't you scared?

Man: At first, I was. But after I learned some techniques for handling the kayak, it wasn't so bad. We didn't start out on the river. We had three whole days of instruction in a shallow pool first. Then, when we finally get out on the river, I felt ready for it.

Woman: Did you spend nights camping outside on the ground? That alone would make the trip unappealing to me.

Man: Oh, no. The accommodations were fantastic. Each person on the trip had a private cabin, and the facilities included a hot bath, a small house where you could have a drink and relax, and an excellent cafeteria with great food.

Woman: Now, that part of the trip does sound good to me. But I don't think I'd like the part that involves riding through rough water in a small kayak.

Man: Oh, you should try it; I know you'd like it. I'm going to do it again myself, as soon as I can afford to spend the time and the money.

Woman: Well, better you than me.

(B)

The first time I decided to leave home was when I was a sophomore(二年级学生) in high school. I was having trouble getting along with my parents. I had about a hundred dollars in my pocket, and so I thought about leaving home. It took me only three weeks away from home when I started to feel homesick. Living on my own is a totally different experience for three main reasons: being more responsible, more decisive and more creative.

First of all, I have learned that living on my own requires that I become more responsible. My parents usually assign my work and duties which I have to keep up with almost every day. When I fail to do my assigned work, I only get scolded. However, now that I am on my own, I get to deal with my duties without being told to. When I fail to do my duties, I must also deal with the outcome on my own.

Another different experience for me while living on my own is that now I have become more decisive. I have to be more careful now that I am on my own because my parents are not here to give me their advice. I must make my own decisions now that I am on my own. For example, I must make the best decisions for myself without hurting anybody's feelings and without my parents' authority.

Therefore I became more creative just by living on my own. I could make my own future plan. I have made rules for myself to follow. I also designed all the furniture in my room by using carving tools. I wrote a lot of songs and kept them in my notebook for any singer out there who might be interested. This to me is a good experience, because I usually think that being creative is the nicest thing in the world. However, when I was with my parents I found it hard for me to be creative simply because I always followed their ideas.

In conclusion, these are the things that usually happen when I am with my parents and when I am alone. In addition, I think that it is appropriate for everyone in this world to love their parents and themselves before they love anyone else. They should learn how to live on their own, but at the same time learn how to support their loving parents. They need to follow every technique that was given to them by their parents. They can make use of their freedom of choice to lead to wherever they want.

 - B. he wanted to live in the school dormitory
 - C. he had trouble getting along with his parents
 - D. he thought he was old enough to leave home
2. The author became _____ after he lived on his own.
 - A. more responsible
 - B. more dependent
 - C. intelligent
 - D. experienced
3. What did the author usually think was the nicest thing in the world?
 - A. Being responsible.
 - B. Being independent.
 - C. Being decisive.
 - D. Being creative.
4. What can we learn from the passage?
 - A. One can enjoy more freedom of choice by living on one's own.
 - B. Everyone should love their parents more than themselves and support their loving parents.
 - C. One can become more responsible, decisive and creative by living on one's own.
 - D. People can get along better with their parents while living on their own.

Bill Gates, head of the world's biggest computer software company, the Microsoft Corporation, had a mission: "To put computer on every office desk and in every home." Bill Gates has had this mission since he was a university student nineteen years ago. This deep personal interest, together with his technical skill and his business marketing genius helped him to create a giant computer company and to make him wealthy.

Although he is so wealthy, Bill Gates does not want to give up. He is still very interested in his vision and he travels the globe, from Asia to Europe, making quick stops in cities to sell the new software products of his company. The central vision of Bill Gates is the information highway. This is a network of fiberoptic cables(光纤电缆) for computers that will link every home, office and shopping mall in the future. This computer network system will have an effect on business, shopping and education. Bill Gates says that the main use of this new technology will be in communication. It will be a way to find people with common interests and to share opinions with them.

But is this communication by computer along the "information highway" really a good thing? Won't we be sitting at home, only "socializing" with our computer, paying big companies money so that we can receive information that some large communication corporation somewhere had decided is "acceptable" for us to read? NO, says Bill Gates. He thinks that the phrase "information highway" is a terrible phrase. It makes people think that we are all going down the same road, he says. In fact, the computer network will let us choose our own intellectual direction. It will give us freedom. It will also bring good to society, because it will allow for the spread of education. When more and more people receive education, the gap between the rich and the poor will narrow.

In the meantime, however, the gap between the rich and the poor is still there. To be added to this now is the gap between those with computers and those without.

1. In the first paragraph, the word "mission" means _____.
A. duty B. mind C. decision D. goal
2. Which of the following is true?
A. Bill Gates is a rich man with vision and ambition.
B. Bill Gates is only interested in computer science.
C. The success of Bill Gates is due to his education.
D. As a self-made man, Bill Gates sets us an example.
3. According to Bill Gates, "information highway" is something _____.
A. terrible B. acceptable C. good D. interesting
4. Which of the following might be the best title of the passage?
A. Information Highway.
B. Bill Gates, His Vision and Mission.
C. The Computer Network System.
D. The Gap Between the Rich and the Poor.
