North Terrace Redevelopment Stage 1

Adelaide, South Australia, Australia

雕塑“14 Pieces”的近景。

North Terrace is Adelaide's premier cultural and civic boulevard. Situated along the northern edge of the CBD, the street houses the city's library, museum, art gallery, parliament, botanic garden, and two principal universities. In 1999 Taylor Cullity Lethlean and Peter Elliott Architects prepared an Urban Design Framework to guide the future development of the Terrace and its environs. This was followed by a concept master plan for the 1.5km length of the street in 2001.

The first stage of the project was constructed in 2004 transforming the 25m wide pedestrian zone on the north side of the Terrace into a linear garden plaza. A rhythmic pattern of granite pavement, concrete and timber seating plinths and planting creates a strong overall gesture along the length of the street. This is modulated with the introduction of water features, sculpture and lawn to form a series of entry plazas which respond to the unique architecture and purpose of each of the adjacent institutions.

The Natural History Museum forecourt responds to the museum's environmental objectives through the integration of a bio-retention water filtration system which cleanses stormwater and stores it for irrigation use. Red sand and desert plants are also utilised to evoke the dry interior of Australia from where much of the Museum's collection was gathered in the 19th Century.

项目的第一阶段于 2004 年动工，台地北面 25 米宽的散步区被改造成线性的花园广场。充满节奏感的花岗岩铺地图案，水泥、木墩座和植栽为街道沿途营造强烈的整体风格。水景、雕塑和草坪形成一系列入口广场，与独特的建筑和附近机构的用途构成呼应。

自然历史博物馆的前院和周围环境相辅相成，通过生物截流滤水系统，可净化雨水并储存用作灌溉用途。红沙和沙漠植物令人联想起澳洲干燥的内陆气候，馆中的众多收藏便是在 19 世纪从这种环境中收集而来的。
