PREFACE

Located on the south side of the beautiful Yuyuantan Park in the west suburb of Beijing and adjacent to the CCTV, the Military Museum covers an area of 80,000 square metres and its building area is about 60,000 square metres. The main building of the Museum is 94.7 metres high. It was one of the ten famous great buildings in Beijing in the late 1950s.

Its whole name is "the Military Museum of the Chinese People's Revolution". The preparation for the building of the Museum started in September 1958 and was completed in July 1959. It exhibited informally on the 1st October in the same year and it began to open to the public formally on the 1st August 1960.

It is the largest comprehensive military museum in China. With the Chinese history as the main line, its exhibits cover all the most important military events, famous military figures, published military works, military science and technology and weaponry developments in the past 5,000 years. In addition, some of the new achievements of the building up of national defense and the People's Liberation Army are also on display. There is a Large collection of the valuable historical relics in the exhibits whose artistic style are national, manifold and magnificent. The exhibition is just like a direct and vivid picture of the Chinese military and serves as an important window through which you can get to know the ancient military culture and the current achievements of the Chinese military. Every day, visitors from all parts of our country and the world come to visit the Military Museum in endless stream and it receives about 2 million visitors every year. From its opening in 1960 to the end of 1990, the Museum had received totally more than 40 million visitors from home and abroad. Now the Military Museum plays an important role not only in social education, cultural life and tourism, but also in mutural understanding and friendship of peoples and forces of all the countries in the world.
