Unwanted sound, or noise, such as that produced by airplanes, traffic, or industrial machinery, is considered a form of pollution. Noise pollution is at its worst in densely populated areas. It can cause hearing loss, stress, high blood pressure, sleep loss, distraction (注意力分散), and lost productivity.

Sounds are produced, by objects that vibrate (振动), at a rate that the ear can detect. This rate is called frequency and is measured in hertz (赫兹), or vibrations per second. Most humans can hear sounds between 20 and 20,000 hertz, while dogs can hear high pitched sounds (高频声音) up to 50,000 hertz. While high frequency sounds tend to be more hazardous (危险的) and more annoying to hearing than low frequency sounds, most noise pollution damage is related to the intensity of the sound. Measured in decibels (分贝), noise intensity can range from zero, the quietest sound the human ear can detect, to over 160 decibels. Conversation takes place at around 40 decibels, a subway train is about 80 decibels, and a rock concert is from 80 to 100 decibels. The intensity of a nearby jet taking off is about 110 decibels. 120 decibels are the limit at which human beings will be aware of pain, and suffer from potential hearing loss. Long lasting, high intensity sounds are the most damaging to hearing and produce the most stress in humans.

Solutions to noise pollution include adding insulation and sound proofing (隔音) to doors, walls, and ceilings; using ear protection, particularly in industrial working areas; planting vegetation to absorb and screen out noise pollution; and zoning urban areas to maintain a separation between residential areas and zones of excessive noise.

36. Noise pollution can cause _____.

- A) lower productivity
- B) lower blood pressure
- C) sound sleep
- D) less stress

37. Where is the noise pollution most serious according to the passage?

- A) In streets.
- B) In airports
- C) In subway stations.
- D) In concerts.

38. Which sound can most people's ears pick up?

- A) Sounds of 15,000 hertz.
- B) Sounds of 20,200 hertz.
- C) Sounds of 30,000 hertz.
- D) Sounds of 50,000 hertz

39. What is most noise pollution damage concerned with?

- A) Objects.
- B) Intensity.
- C) Rate.
- D) Frequency.

40. How are noises made by industrial machines solved in working places?

- A) By adding sound proofing.
- B) By planting vegetation.
- C) By wearing ear protection.
- D) By separating residential areas.

Task 1

Directions: After reading the following passage, you will find 5 questions or unfinished statements, numbered 36 through 40. For each question or statement there are 4 choices marked A), B), C) and D). You should make the correct choice and mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passing by a supermarket, I was attracted by a long queue of people with big plastic bags full of kinds of goods they bought outside the gate. I came up with curiosity to find out the puzzle. Handing in his purchase ticket to the girl in charge of the activity, the boy in the front of the queue received a box of chocolate with delicate package. It turned out to be a promotion activity, which would provide a box of chocolate to those who bought more than ten yuan worth of goods and paid one more yuan. It's really good news especially for those who are keen on bargains. Once there was a promotion activity, they were usually easy to go into ecstasies (狂喜, 入迷) and bought the goods on impulse, never having time to consider carefully whether they needed the goods desperately or not. I was not an exception. When I was determined to make a purchase, however, finding that there was only nine yuan with myself, I was forced to give up.

Nowadays, more and more merchants use their brains to launch bewildering (迷惑人的) promotion activities to attract people's attention, which motivate their consumption. It's merchants who take advantage of people's psychology of taking advantage of petty benefits. From the point of the whole society, consumption stimulates production, which in turn brings up employment opportunities and strengthen the purchase capacity of the whole society. Once people have more money, they can afford and consume more goods. Consequently, the more goods are consumed, the greater incentive (鼓励) for the renewal cycle of products, which results in the progress of industrial technology and the elimination of economic depression.

As for one who has little money at his disposal, he'd better consider carefully before making a purchase decision. Otherwise, he has to curtail (削减) his expenditure during the rest of the month.

36. Why was the boy given a box of chocolate?

- A) Because he had a purchase ticket.
- B) Because he was keen on bargains.
- C) Because the goods he bought cost more than 10 yuan.
- D) Because he had helped the girl to carry the goods she bought.

37. People cannot help buying goods they don't actually need when _____.

- A) there is a promotion activity
- B) they have enough money
- C) they have time to go around
- D) they are with children

38. I didn't buy the goods during the promotion activity because _____.

- A) I was not interested in them
- B) I didn't need the goods
- C) I didn't have enough money
- D) I had no time

39. Which of the following statements is True?

- A) Nowadays people are not easy to believe the promotion activity.
- B) Consumption promotion is a way of eliminating economic depression.
- C) Consumption can stimulate production but cannot bring up employment opportunities.
- D) That people want to buy better goods with little money is a bad news to the merchants.

40. For a person who has little money, which of the following is a good proposal?

- A) Buy more goods during the promotion activities.
- B) Don't buy any goods during the promotion activities.
- C) Consider carefully before buying goods.
- D) Buy things as few as you can.

Task 2

Directions: This task is the same as Task 1. The 5 questions or unfinished statements are numbered 41 through 45.

Automobile insurance is simply a contract that helps pay for certain types of financial losses or obligations (责任) resulting from the use or ownership of an automobile. To obtain this contract (insurance policy), you pay a specified amount of money called a premium (保险费). In return for the premium paid, the insurance company agrees to pay certain expenses and legal liabilities (责任) depending on the terms of the insurance policy. Having the right insurance coverage may prevent you from suffering a large financial loss in the event of an automobile accident.

Automobile insurance is an often misunderstood insurance product. Since the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) requires liability insurance in order to register and operate a vehicle, it is of great importance to purchase and to fully understand your automobile insurance policy.

- Who requires you to be financially responsible?
- What could happen if you ignore the law?
- When must you provide proof of insurance?
- Why is it all up to you?
- Where do you call if you need assistance?

This brochure provides information to help you understand the various automobile insurance coverages. It will assist you in discussing your automobile insurance needs, asking informed questions, and understanding just what your insurance company or agent/broker is suggesting when you shop for insurance.

41. With your automobile insurance, when you have a car accident, you will _____.

- A) get an insurance policy
- B) suffer a large financial loss
- C) be paid certain expenses
- D) be paid all the expenses

42. What do you have to do in order to obtain the automobile insurance?

- A) Pay certain amount of the premium first.
- B) Fully understand the insurance policy.
- C) Study the insurance law carefully.

The Bay Area has three major airports. San Francisco International Airport is on the bay side of the Peninsula, 22km south of the city center. The city of Oakland, at the eastern end of the Bay Bridge, has its own airport 13km south of downtown. San Jose International Airport, at the southern end of the bay, is a few miles north of downtown San Jose and an hour's drive from San Francisco. Taxis are plentiful and, despite reports to the contrary, hailing (招呼) them is not difficult, although the wise passenger will book in advance. Prices vary but fares are about US $ 2.50 for the first mile and US $ 2 per mile thereafter. Tipping is customary. almost obligatory (应尽的), and drivers expect about 15%.

Greyhound is the only regular long-distance bus company operating to the city—all bus services arrive and depart at the Transbay Terminal in SoMa. Amtrak's rail network connects the Bay Area with the rest of the continental US and Canada. Its main stations are in Oakland and Emeryville, both in the East Bay.

San Francisco has many different types of above-ground vehicles, covering the same routes. Buses, trolleys (with wire cable) and streetcars all cover the same routes and command the same adult fare of US $ 1. These operate citywide, with the name, destination and line number displayed on the front of the bus. Stops are designated (标示) by pole signs and curb (路边) and street markings. Tickets are purchased upon boarding and exact change is required.
