Dan wants to be an astronaut.

Read the passage.

Dan and Katie were in the library. "What are you reading, Dan?" Katie asked. "I'm reading about the solar system," Dan replied. "Look at these astronauts! I want to be an astronaut." "Don't be silly," Katie said. "There are only a few astronauts. It's very hard to become one. I'm going to be a doctor. There are a lot of doctors. I can help sick people."

Katie and Dan took their library books home. "Mom," said Katie, "Dan said he's going to be an astronaut." "And Katie said I'm silly," Dan said. "You're not silly," Mom said. "You can be anything you want. But astronauts have to study hard. You should do your homework now." "Not yet, Mom. I want to ride my bike," Dan said. "I'll do my homework later."

A few minutes later, Dan fell off his bike. Katie took the first aid kit and went to help him. "I'm OK," Dan said. "No, you're not," Katie answered. "Your knee's bleeding. Let me put a Band-Aid on it. I'm going to be a doctor, see! You have to learn to ride a bike before you can fly around in the solar system!"
