INTRODUCTION

Nanjing University is located in the center of the ancient city of Nanjing, with its beautiful rivers and mountains. One of the major universities in China, it includes faculties in both liberal arts and natural sciences. The university was founded in 1902 as Sanjiang Normal School. Since then it has been successively known as Liangjiang Normal School, Nanjing Teachers' College, Southeastern University, Fourth Zhongshan University and Central University. After liberation in 1949, it was renamed Nanjing University. With the reorganization of institutions of higher learning in 1952, the liberal arts and natural sciences faculties of Nanjing University and Jinling University were joined to form the present university which is chiefly a college of arts and sciences.

Nanjing University has a considerable history. It has always upheld its revolutionary traditions and fine style of study. Before liberation, teachers and students of the university, led by the Chinese Communist Party, persisted in a protracted, heroic and unyielding struggle for the liberation of the motherland. The nation-wide "May 20th" and "April 1st" Patriotic Students' Movements started here. Since the founding of New China in 1949, the university has embarked on the training of young people for the cause of socialism, and its teaching and scientific research have made continued progress. During the 32 years since liberation, over 26,000 undergraduates and graduates have received their education here, and many of them have made valuable contributions to the cause of socialist construction in our country.

The university has 15 departments: Chinese, History, Philosophy, Economics, Law, Foreign Languages and Literatures, Astronomy, Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Computer Science, Geology, Geography, Meteorology and Biology. There are now students working for B.A./B.S. degrees in 44 disciplines, for M.A./M.S. degrees in 53 disciplines and for Ph.D.'s in 24 disciplines. There are also 9 research institutes and 10 research groups in the university. The university has established academic relationships with more than ten well-known universities all over the world. The present faculty, which numbers over 1,900, includes scientists and scholars renowned both at home and abroad. The university library contains over 2,700,000 volumes as well as 3,700 periodicals in Chinese and foreign languages. The university also includes some 10,000 historical and cultural relics. There are over 160 laboratories equipped with advanced scientific apparatus.

Today, the faculty and students of Nanjing University, united as one, are working enthusiastically toward greater success in contributing to the realization of the "Four Modernizations" in our country.
