Handwritten text on a palm leaf, likely in an ancient script. The text is arranged in approximately six horizontal lines. A circular hole is visible near the center of the leaf, used for threading a cord to bind multiple leaves together. The characters are finely etched into the surface of the dried leaf.

Handwritten text on a second palm leaf, continuing the script from the first. It also features a circular hole for binding. The text is written in a consistent style across the length of the leaf. On the left side, there are some larger characters, possibly serving as a title or identifier for the document.

Handwritten text on a wooden slip, likely in a Southeast Asian script. The characters are arranged in several lines across the length of the slip. A circular hole is visible near the center.
