For Thomas, Joanne and Michael

PC

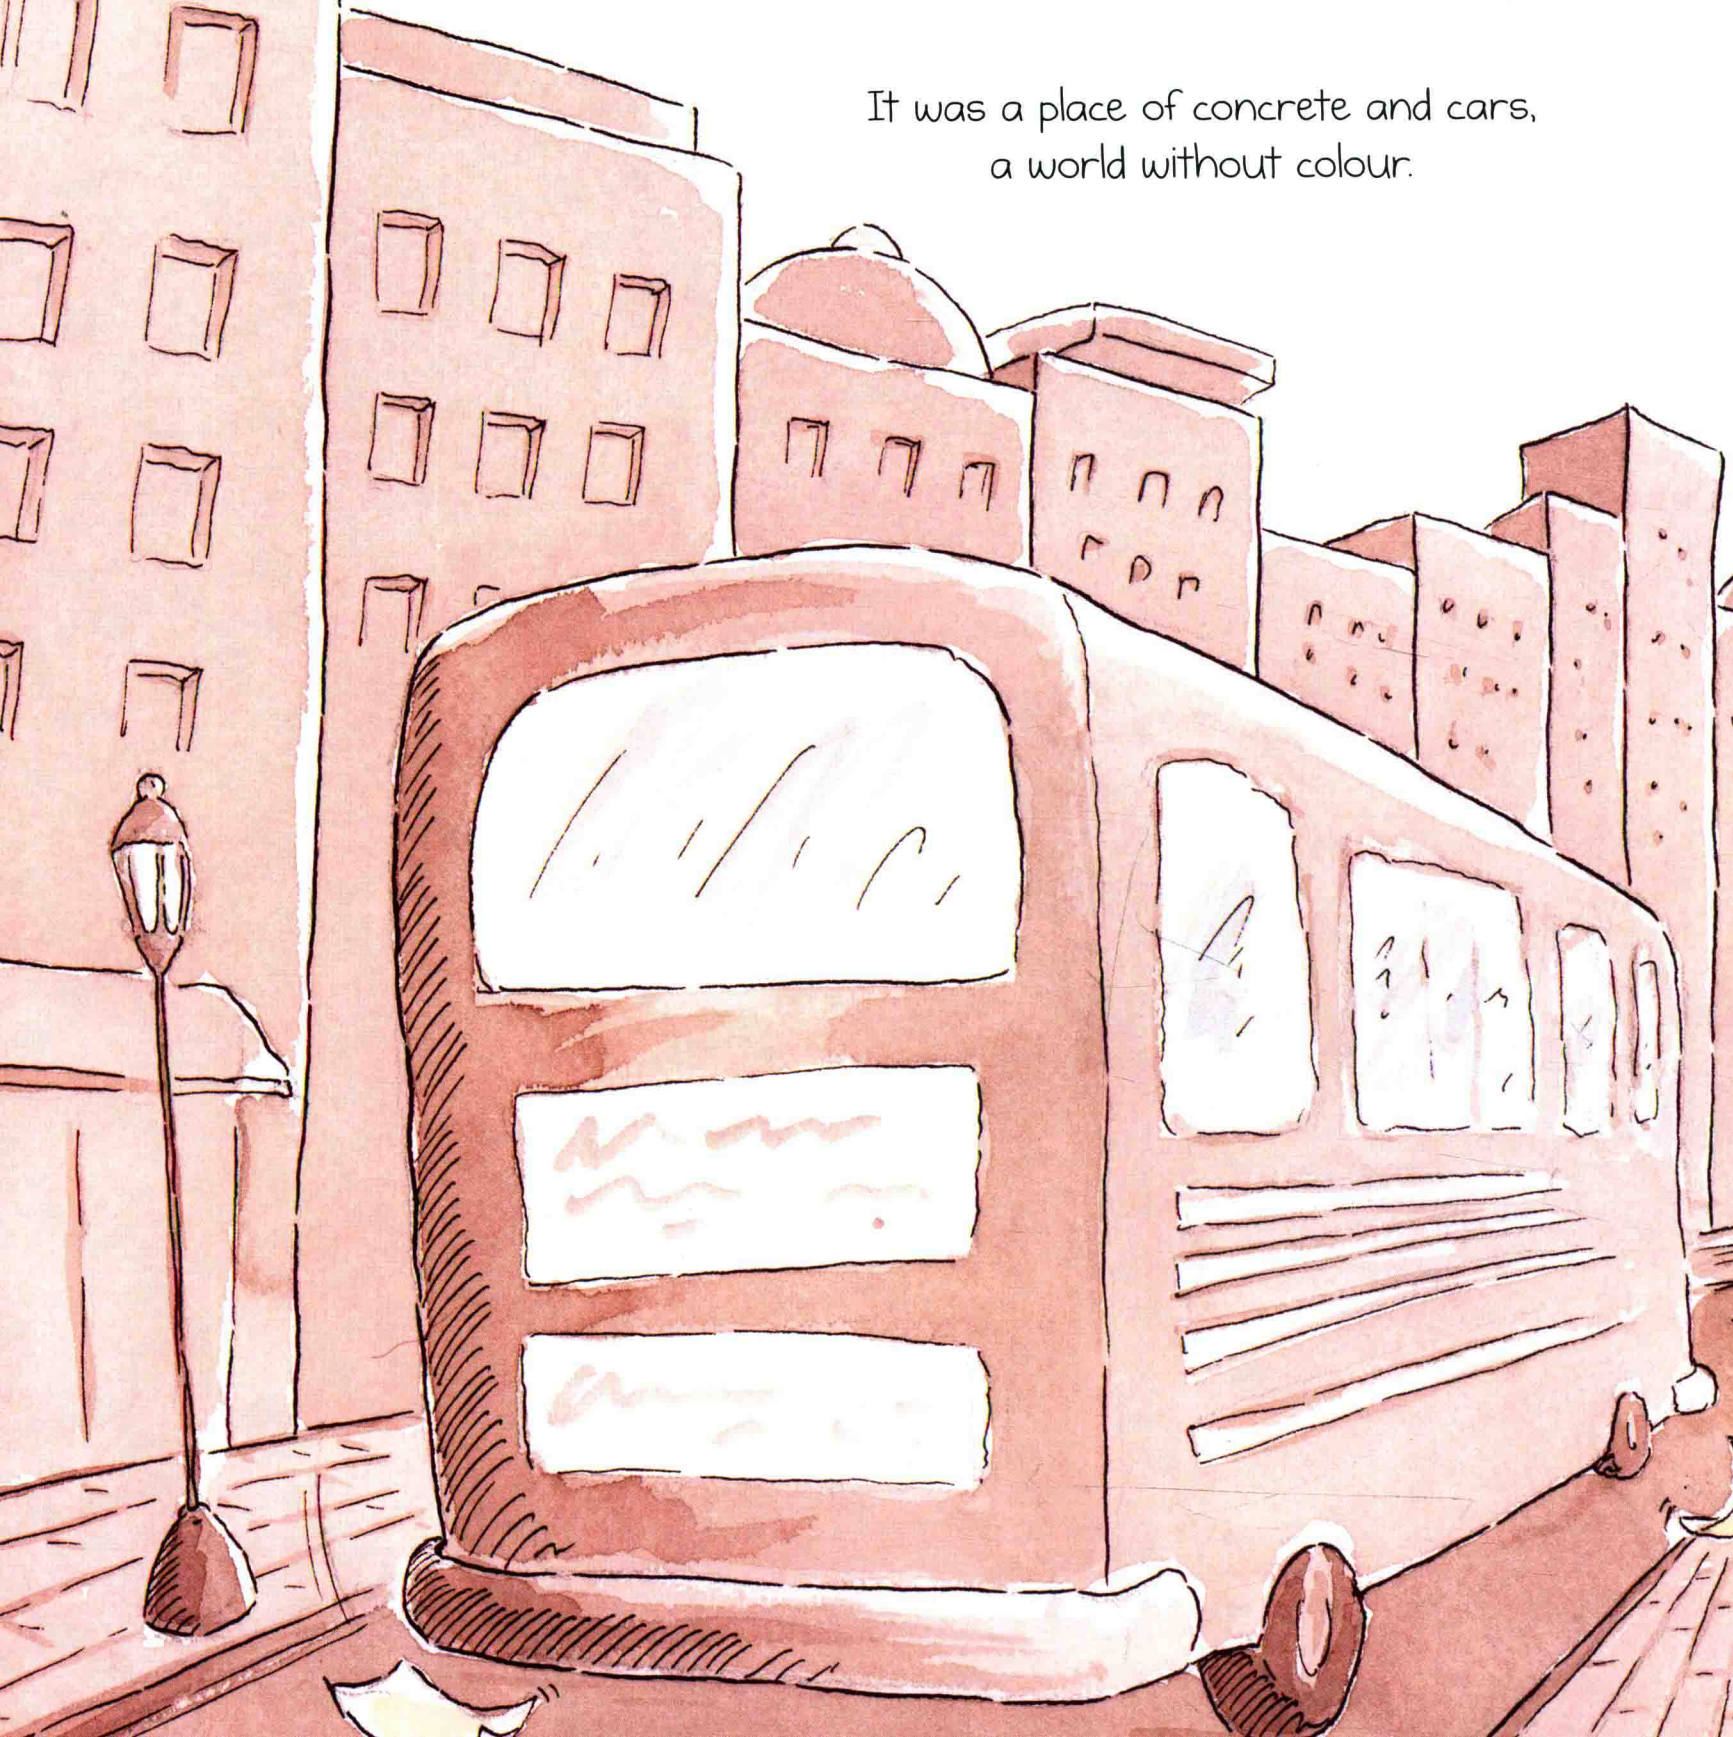

Edward lived in the city.

It was a place of concrete and cars,
a world without colour.

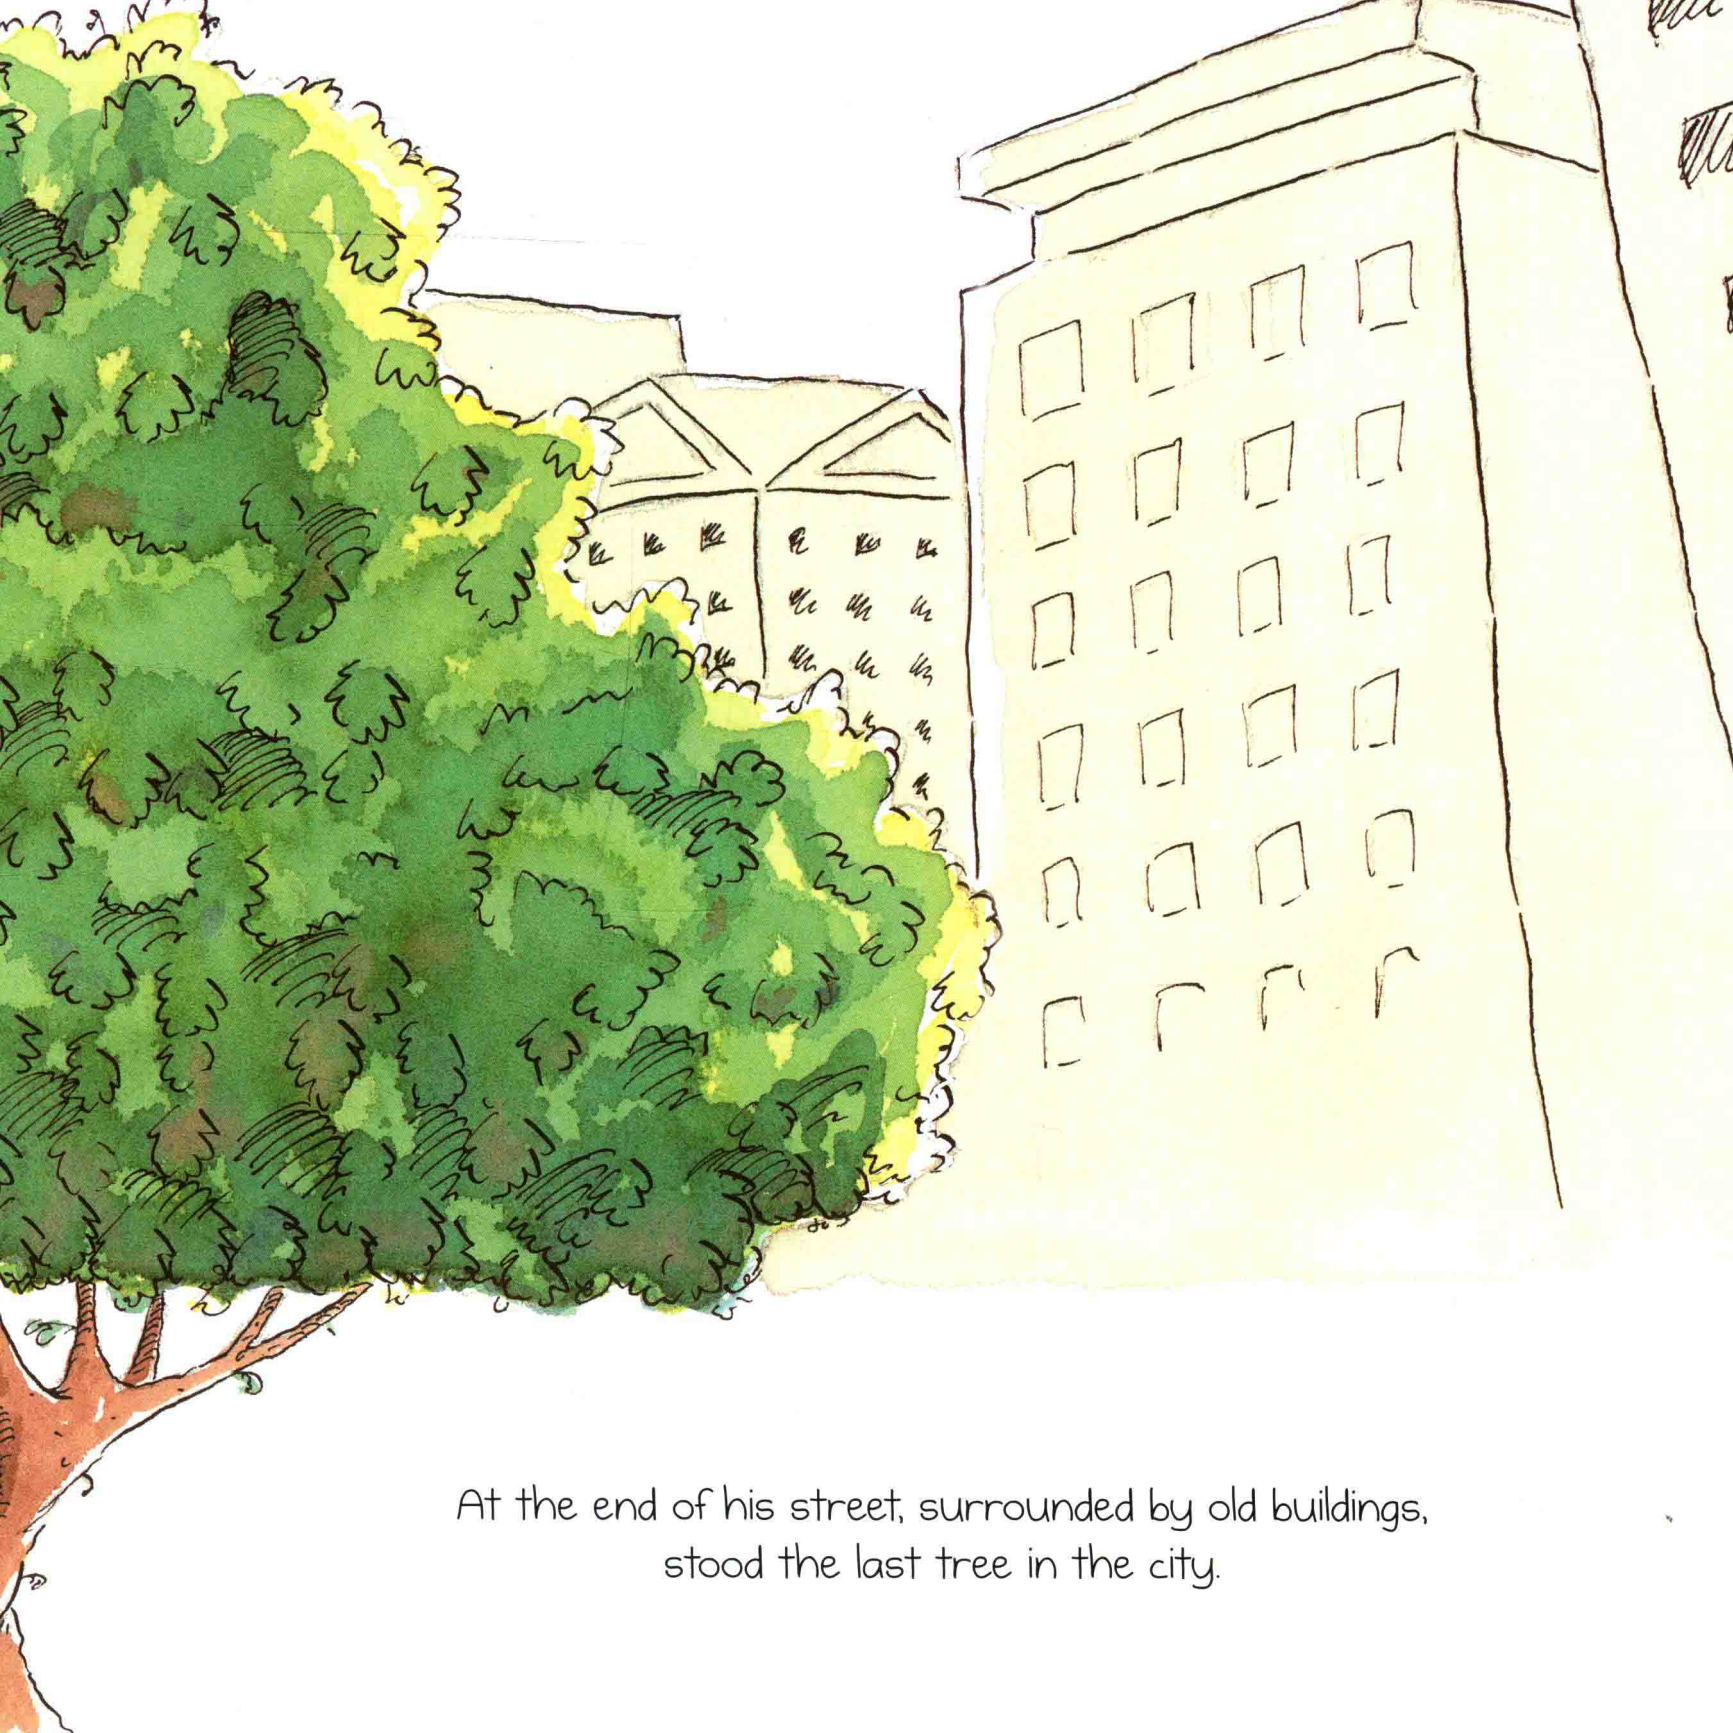

But Edward knew a part of the city that wasn't like the city at all.

At the end of his street, surrounded by old buildings, stood the last tree in the city.

Edward would forget the concrete and the cars.

He would forget the city altogether.

For a small moment every day, Edward knew nothing but the tree.
