An Outline Of Modern Chinese Architectural History

Brief Introduction

On the basis of numerous investigations and researches, the authors of this book systematically summarize the architectural activities in China since liberation (1949 —— 1985) in the form of "outline of history". The similar work is seldom seen at home and abroad.

In this book, the authors devide the course of the development of modern Chinese architecture into several periods; point out the social background of each historical period, the main architectural activities, architectural living examples, experience and lessons; and give their own opinion about the tortuous road of the architectural activities since liberation.

There are about 120000 words, more than 300 architectural pictures, and a table of events over 370 items (about 30000 words), as well as the other important material in the book. This book is to provide reference for architects, teachers and students in department of architecture of colleges and universities, and the other workers whose job has relation with it.
