

inter- cultural communication

an Advanced Resource Book

Adrian Holliday, Martin Hyde
and John Kullman

ROUTLEDGE APPLIED LINGUISTICS
SERIES EDITORS: CHRISTOPHER N. CANDLIN AND RONALD CARTER

Intercultural Communication

An Advanced Resource Book

Adrian Holliday, Martin Hyde
and John Kullman

First published 2004
by Routledge
11 New Fetter Lane, London EC4P 4EE

Simultaneously published in the USA and Canada
by Routledge
29 West 35th Street, New York, NY 10001

Routledge is an imprint of the Taylor & Francis Group

© 2004 Adrian Holliday, Martin Hyde and John Kullman

Designed and typeset in Akzidenz, Minion and Novarese by Keystroke, Jacaranda Lodge, Wolverhampton
Printed and bound in Great Britain by TJ International Ltd, Padstow, Cornwall

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reprinted or reproduced or utilized in any form or by any electronic, mechanical, or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publishers.

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

A catalogue record for this book has been requested

ISBN 0-415-27060-X (hbk)

ISBN 0-415-27061-8 (pbk)

Series Editors' Preface

The Routledge Applied Linguistics Series provides a comprehensive guide to the key areas in the field of applied linguistics. Applied Linguistics is a rich, vibrant, diverse and essentially interdisciplinary field. It is now more important than ever that books in the field provide up-to-date maps of what is an ever-changing territory.

The books in this series are designed to give key insights into core areas of Applied Linguistics. The design of the books ensures, through key readings, that the history and development of a subject is recognized while, through key questions and tasks, integrating understandings of the topics, concepts and practices that make up its essentially interdisciplinary fabric. The pedagogic structure of each book ensures that readers are given opportunities to think, discuss, engage in tasks, draw on their own experience, reflect, research and to read and critically re-read key documents.

Each book has three main sections, each made up of approximately ten units.

A: An Introduction section, in which the key terms and concepts that map the field of the subject are introduced, including introductory activities and reflective tasks designed to establish key understandings, terminology, techniques of analysis and the skills appropriate to the theme and the discipline.

B: An Extension section, in which selected core readings are introduced (usually edited from the original) from key books and articles, together with annotations and commentary where appropriate. Each reading is introduced, annotated and commented on in the context of the whole book, and research/follow-up questions and tasks are added to enable fuller understanding of both theory and practice. In some cases, readings are short and synoptic and incorporated within a more general exposition.

C: An Exploration section, in which further samples and illustrative materials are provided with an emphasis, where appropriate, on more open-ended, student-centred activities and tasks designed to support readers and users in undertaking their own locally relevant research projects. Tasks are designed for work in groups or for individuals working on their own. They can be readily included in award courses in Applied Linguistics or as topics for personal study and research.

The books also contain a glossarial index, which provides a guide to the main terms used in the book, and a detailed, thematically organised further reading section which lays the ground for further work in the discipline. There are also extensive suggestions for further reading.

The target audience for the series is upper undergraduates and postgraduates on language, applied linguistics and communication studies programmes as well as teachers and researchers in professional development and distance learning programmes. High-quality applied research resources are also much needed for teachers of EFL/ESL and foreign language students at higher education colleges and universities worldwide. The books in the Routledge Applied Linguistics Series are aimed at the individual reader, the student in a group, and at teachers building courses and seminar programmes.

We hope that the books in this series meet these needs and continue to provide support over many years.

The Editors

Professor Christopher N. Candlin and Professor Ronald Carter are the series editors. Both have extensive experience of publishing titles in the fields relevant to this series. Between them they have written and edited more than 100 books and 200 academic papers in the broad field of applied linguistics. Chris Candlin was president of AILA (International Association for Applied Linguistics) from 1997–2002 and Ron Carter is Chair of BAAL (British Association for Applied Linguistics) from 2003–2006.

Professor Christopher N. Candlin,
Senior Research Professor
Department of Linguistics,
Division of Linguistics and Psychology
Macquarie University
Sydney NSW 2109
Australia

and

Professor of Applied Linguistics
Faculty of Education and Language Studies
The Open University
Walton Hall
Milton Keynes MK7 6AA
UK

Professor Ronald Carter
School of English Studies
University of Nottingham
Nottingham NG7 2RD
UK

Acknowledgements

The editor and publishers wish to thank the following for permission to use copyright material.

Atlantic Syndication for cartoon by Blower, 'Country by country guide to women and the world', Evening Standard, 10.6.98

Benetton for images from its advertising material

Blackwell Publishers for material from B. Fay (1996) Contemporary Philosophy of Social Science: A Multicultural Approach, pp. 55, 57, 59, 60

Cambridge University Press for material from Gerhard Baumann (1996) Contesting Culture: discourses of identity in multi-ethnic London, pp. 1–2, 4–6; and Yoshio Sugimoto (1997) An Introduction to Japanese Society, pp. 1–4, 11–13

Guardian Newspapers Ltd for Stephen Moss, 'Mind your language: the semantics of asylum', Guardian, 22.5.01. Copyright © 2001 The Guardian

Hong Kong City Polytechnic for material from C. Roberts and S. Sarangi (1993) "'Culture" Revisited in Intercultural Communication' in T. Boswood, R. Hoffman and P. Tung (eds) Perspectives on English for Professional Communication, pp. 97–102

Martin Jacques for material from his interview with Professor Stuart Hall included in New Statesman

Boye Lafayette De Mente for material from 'Beware of Using Logic in Japan' by Boye Lafayette De Mente, 7 October 2000, Executive Planet.com website

Open University Press for material from Teun A. van Dijk (2000) 'New(s) Racism: A discourse analytical approach' in Simon Cottle (ed.) (2000) Ethnic Minorities and the Media, Chapter 2

Oxford University Press for material from A. Pavlenko and J. P. Lantolf (2000) 'Second language learning as participation and the (re)construction of selves' in J. P. Lantolf (ed.) (2000) Sociocultural Theory and Second Language Learning, pp. 162–169, 172–174

Palgrave Macmillan for material from J. Solomos and L. Back (1996) Racism and Society, Macmillan, pp. 186–190

Rogers, Coleridge and White Ltd on behalf of the author for material from Christopher Hope, Darkest England. Copyright © Christopher Hope 1996

Sage Publications for material from Hugh O'Donnell (1994) 'Mapping the Mythical: A geopolitics of national sporting stereotypes', Discourse and Society, 5:3, pp. 345–380; Ulf Hannerz (1999) 'Reflections on varieties of culturespeak', European Journal of Cultural Studies, 2:3, pp. 393–407

Taylor & Francis Books Ltd for material from G. Matthews (2000) Global Culture/Individual Identity: Searching for home in the cultural supermarket, Routledge, pp.

Acknowledgements

19–23; J. P. Gee (1999) An Introduction to Discourse Analysis, Routledge, pp. 12–13, 17–18, 49, 68–9, 78; B. Burkhalter, 'Reading Race Online: Discovering racial identity in usenet discussions' in M. A. Smith and P. Kollock (eds) (1999) Communities in Cyberspace, Routledge pp. 63–69, 72–73; V. Burr (1996) An Introduction to Social Constructionism, Routledge, pp. 2–5, 21–28; S. E. Hampson, 'The Social Psychology of Personality' in C. Cooper and V. Varma (eds) (1997) Processes in Individual Differences, Routledge pp. 77–81; R. Dyer (1997) White, Routledge, pp. 1–4; A. Pennycook (1998) English and the Discourse of Colonialism, Routledge, pp. 171–2, 174–5, 180; and Miriam Cooke (1997) 'Listen to the Image Speak', Cultural Values, 1:1, pp. 101–102, 104, 105, 106; R. Rosaldo (1993) Culture and Truth: The Remaking of Social Analysis, pp. 202–204

The University of Birmingham for material from Jess Olsen (1998) 'Through White Eyes: The packaging of people and places in the world of the travel brochure', Cultural Studies from Birmingham, 2:1

Westview Press, a member of Perseus Books, LLC, for material from Harry C. Triandis (1995) Individualism and Collectivism, pp. 1–2, 4–5. Copyright © 1995 by Westview Press, a member of Perseus Books Group

Every effort has been made to trace the copyright holders but if any have been inadvertently overlooked the publishers will be pleased to make the necessary arrangement at the first opportunity.

How to use this book

The book is divided into three sections:

Section A Introduction: Defining concepts, which aims to present concepts that will be the basis for study throughout the book

Section B Extension, which will develop and continue to explore these concepts in dialogue with a series of readings

Section C Exploration, which will realize the discussions of the first two parts within a series of research tasks, and which will establish a methodology for addressing intercultural communication.

Each section will also be divided into three themes.

Theme 1 Identity deals with the way in which we all bring with us our own discourses and feelings of culture and negotiate these in communication.

Theme 2 Otherization deals with a major hindrance to communication in the way in which we over-generalize, stereotype and reduce the people we communicate with to something different or less than they are.

Theme 3 Representation looks at the way in which culture is communicated in society, through the media, professional discourses and everyday language. It focuses on how we need critically to recognize and address the ways in which these representations influence our own perceptions if we are to communicate effectively

It is a tenet of the book that the disciplines presented in Section A and applied to research tasks in Section C are usable in all intercultural communication contexts, and as it is argued that all communication is intercultural, that this book is ultimately about developing skilled communication strategies and principles in a globalizing world.

Examples that are drawn on and which are from the writers' own cultural milieux and experiences are thus simply catalysts for illustrating larger principles that readers are expected to apply and use in their own cultural milieux and contexts. Because the book is not based upon the principle that cultural differences exist as real and tangible entities, but are intersubjective and negotiated processes (admittedly affected by power structures) the book cannot attempt to be a manual of cultural differences and therefore does not aim to collect exotic examples of cultural behaviours. To do this would indeed be to enter into the process of otherization decried as a major problem in intercultural communication in the world today. The examples used are simply those that the authors have felt sufficiently familiar with and confident enough to be able to describe and use to promote the readers' thoughts and sensibilities about their own communicative behaviour in the interactions, wherever these may be.

The use of examples in the book from, for example, the Middle East in Section A and from Britain and the Spanish-speaking world in Section C, is thus a consequence of the locatedness of the authors. It is expected that readers will be able to generalize out from these examples; and in Section C there is an invitation for readers to bring their own cultural milieux into research activities.

Contents

Series editors' preface	xi
Acknowledgements	xiii
How to use this book	xv
SECTION A INTRODUCTION: Defining concepts	1
THEME 1 IDENTITY	6
Unit A1.1 People like me	6
Unit A1.2 Artefacts of culture	10
Unit A1.3 Identity card	16
THEME 2 OTHERIZATION	21
Unit A2.1 Communication is about not presuming	21
Unit A2.2 Cultural dealing	25
Unit A2.3 Power and discourse	30
THEME 3 REPRESENTATION	36
Unit A3.1 Cultural refugee	36
Unit A3.2 Complex images	41
SECTION B EXTENSION	51
INTRODUCTION	54
Unit B0.1 'Culture' and 'community' in everyday discourse	54
Hannerz: 'Reflections of Varieties of Culturespeak'	54
Baumann: Contesting Culture: discourses of identity in multi-ethnic London	56
Unit B0.2 'Culture': definitions and perspectives	59
Fay: Contemporary Philosophy of Social Science: A Multicultural Approach	60
Roberts and Sarangi: "Culture" Revisited in Intercultural Communication'	61
Holliday: 'Small Cultures'	62

THEME 1 IDENTITY	66
Unit B1.1 Identity as a personal project	66
Ribeyro: 'Barbara' from La Palabra del Mundo	67
Giddens: Modernity and Self-Identity: Self and Society in the Late Modern Age	68
Unit B1.2 Globalization and identity	70
Mathews: Global Culture/Individual Identity: Searching for home in the cultural supermarket	71
Unit B1.3 Discourse, identity and culture	74
Gee: An Introduction to Discourse Analysis: Theory and Method – Extract 1	75
Gee: An Introduction to Discourse Analysis: Theory and Method – Extract 2	78
Unit B1.4 Identity and language learning	80
Pavlenko and Lantolf: 'Second Language Learning as Participation and the (Re)Construction of Selves'	81
Unit B1.5 Identity, community and the Internet	86
Burkhalter: 'Reading Race Online: Discovering racial identity in usenet discussions'	87
Martin Jacques interviews Professor Stuart Hall	90
 THEME 2 OTHERIZATION	 93
Unit B2.1 Otherization: focus on Japan	93
Edgar and Sedgwick: Key Concepts in Cultural Theory	93
Boye/Lafayette De Mente: 'Beware of Using Logic in Japan!'	94
Sugimoto: An Introduction to Japanese Society	95
Unit B2.2 Images of the Other	98
Cooke: 'Listen to the Image Speak'	99
Solomos and Back: Racism and Society	101
Unit B2.3 Absence and invisibility in Otherization	104
Dyer: White	105
Rosaldo: Culture and Truth: The Remaking of Social Analysis	106
Unit B2.4 The Other and the tourist gaze	109
Pennycook: English and the Discourse of Colonialism	110
Olsen: 'Through White Eyes: The packaging of people and places in the world of the travel brochure'	112
Unit B2.5 'Undemonizing' the Other	115
Hope: Darkest England	116
Conrad: Heart of Darkness	117
Littlewood and Lipsedge: Aliens and Alienists: ethnic minorities and psychiatry	118
 THEME 3 REPRESENTATION	 120
Unit B3.1 Representation in the mass media: the case of 'asylum seekers'	120
Moss: 'Mind your language: the semantics of asylum'	121
Van Dijk: 'New(s) Racism: A discourse analytical approach'	122
Unit B3.2 Representation: sport and stereotyping in the mass media	126
O'Sullivan, Hartley, Saunders, Montgomery and Fiske: Key Concepts in Communication and Cultural Studies	126

	O'Donnell: 'Mapping the Mythical: A geopolitics of national sporting stereotypes'	128
Unit B3.3	The representation of identity: personality and its social construction	132
	Burr: An Introduction to Social Constructionism – Extract 1	133
	Hampson: The Social Psychology of Personality	134
Unit B3.4	Social constructionism and social representations	137
	Burr: An Introduction to Social Constructionism – Extract 2	138
	Sperber: Explaining Culture: A naturalistic approach	139
Unit B3.5	Cultural constructs	141
	Triandis: Individualism and Collectivism	142
SECTION C EXPLORATION		147
THEME 1 IDENTITY		152
Unit C1.1	The story of the self	152
Unit C1.2	Becoming the self by defining the Other	156
Unit C1.3	Undoing cultural fundamentalism	162
Unit C1.4	Investigating discourse and power	168
Unit C1.5	Locality and transcendence of locality: factors in identity formation	172
THEME 2 OTHERIZATION		180
Unit C2.1	Otherization	180
Unit C2.2	As you speak therefore you are	184
Unit C2.3	The 'located' self	187
Unit C2.4	Integrating the Other	189
Unit C2.5	'Are you what you are supposed to be?'	192
THEME 3 REPRESENTATION		196
Unit C3.1	'You are, therefore I am'	196
Unit C3.2	'Schemas': fixed or flexible?	198
Unit C3.3	'What's underneath?'	202
Unit C3.4	'Manufacturing the self'	203
Unit C3.5	'Minimal clues lead to big conclusions'	208
References		214
Further reading		219
Index		229

Contents cross-referenced

	Section A: Introduction: Defining concepts
Theme 1: Identity	A1.1 People like me 6 A1.2 Artefacts of culture 10 A1.3 Identity card 16
Theme 2: Otherization	A2.1 Communication is about not presuming 21 A2.2 Cultural dealing 25 A2.3 Power and discourse 30
Theme 3: Representation	A3.1 Cultural refugee 36 A3.2 Complex images 41

Section B: Extension	Section C: Exploration
B1.1 Identity as a personal project 66	C1.1 The story of the self 152
B1.2 Globalization and identity 70	C1.2 Becoming the self by defining the Other 156
B1.3 Discourse, identity and culture 74	C1.3 Undoing cultural fundamentalism 162
B1.4 Identity and language learning 80	C1.4 Investigating discourse and power 168
B1.5 Identity, community and the Internet 86	C1.5 Locality and transcendence of locality: factors in identity formation 172
B2.1 Otherization: focus on Japan 93	C2.1 Otherization 180
B2.2 Images of the Other 98	C2.2 As you speak therefore you are 184
B2.3 Absence and invisibility in Otherization 104	C2.3 The 'located' self 187
B2.4 The Other and the tourist gaze 109	C2.4 Integrating the Other 189
B2.5 'Undemonizing' the Other 115	C2.5 'Are you what you are supposed to be?' 192
B3.1 Representation in the mass media: the case of 'asylum seekers' 120	C3.1 'You are, therefore I am' 196
B3.2 Representation: sport and stereotyping in the mass media 126	C3.2 'Schemas' – fixed or flexible? 198
B3.3 The representation of identity: personality and its social construction 132	C3.3 'What's underneath?' 202
B3.4 Social constructionism and social representations 137	C3.4 'Manufacturing the self' 203
B3.5 Cultural constructs 141	C3.5 'Minimal clues lead to big conclusions' 208

SECTION A

Introduction: Defining concepts

Each unit in Section A will comprise the presentation of an experience or situation in the form of an example, and a deconstruction of this example through which basic concepts will be introduced. By deconstruction we mean ‘taking apart’ to enable greater insight and analysis. This is an essential skill which will prepare readers to be able to look at their own interaction with others analytically and with fresh eyes in order to solve the puzzle of what is going on. It is particularly important, where we feel that much intercultural communication is marred by prejudice, to be able to take apart and undo this prejudice. The concepts introduced in Section A can then be responded to in the rest of the book. The emphasis is not only on people with different nationalities, but also with other senses of belonging, whether community, class, occupational, gender and so on. There will then be a final section in each unit which focuses on what is needed for successful communication. This will take the form of disciplines about what to be aware of in the process of intercultural communication, which will then be collected together at the end of each theme.

These disciplines will not be based on what a person from culture X is like and therefore how we should communicate with them. There is enough published along these lines, which we consider to be largely essentialist and reductive. By essentialist we mean presuming that there is a universal essence, homogeneity and unity in a particular culture. By reductive we mean reducing cultural behaviour down to a simple causal factor. The disciplines will thus be basic principles about understandings which need to be achieved in order to interact with different individuals in different contexts. This order of example, deconstruction, disciplines, binds the book together and our belief is that intercultural communication should grow from an understanding of people, culture and society generally. The deconstruction of the examples will attempt an understanding, and observations about communication will grow from them. Each unit will also finish with a task which will help you to link the examples and concepts it provides with your own experience.

The examples in each unit are reconstructed from actual experience. They have been edited, sometimes mixed together, the characters, genders, nationalities changed, with fictitious names and situations, so that no one can be recognized, and also to bring out the issues we have found important. The approach in this part of the book is therefore novelistic. The deconstruction of what happens in each example is subjective. We do not however feel that the subjectivity is problematic. As in more formal qualitative research, each instance speaks for itself, its value being in the resonance or dissonance each example creates – in the degree to which the reader can say ‘This makes sense to me; I can recognize this type of thing from my own experience’, or ‘This makes no sense; I need to think about this more’.

The examples are all about particular people in particular situations. They have been taken from a range of nationalities and social groupings. However, really, it does not matter which nationality or group they come from, as the aim is not to describe what someone from a particular culture is like and then suggest how to communicate with them. Each example shows one or two people struggling with their differences, perceived or real, sometimes succeeding, sometimes failing, sometimes understanding, sometimes falling into an essentialist trap. If the balance is more on the side of people failing, followed with discussion on how they went wrong, this is because in the majority of cases we do indeed get things seriously wrong, and this is something which needs to be dealt with. It needs to be realized that the reason for failure is essentialism.

Section A introduces a non-essentialist view of culture which is then followed up in the rest of the book. It focuses on the complexity of culture as a fluid, creative social force which binds different groupings and aspects of behaviour in different ways, both constructing and constructed by people in a piecemeal fashion to produce myriad combinations and configurations.

The difference between 'non-essentialism' and 'essentialism', which are terms used by social scientists in their discussion about the nature of culture (e.g. Keesing 1994), is described in Table 1. We realize that this, like all other dichotomies, is harsh and ignorant of the fact that in reality views range between the two extremes. Nevertheless, essentialism in the way we see people and culture is the same essentialism which drives sexism and racism. The equivalent condition, culturism, similarly reduces and otherizes the individual and underlies many of the problems in the world today. By otherization we mean imagining someone as alien and different to 'us' in such a way that 'they' are excluded from 'our' 'normal', 'superior' and 'civilized' group. Indeed, it is by imagining a foreign Other in this way that 'our' group can become more confident and exclusive. Essentialism therefore needs to be defined strongly, recognized and fought against wherever it is found. This particular definition of essentialism might be different to that of others. As with racism and sexism, the concept needs to be discussed and continuously revisited.

It is perhaps noticeable that the entries on the right-hand side of the table (for non-essentialism) represent more complex and perhaps obscure ideas than those on the left-hand side. In this sense, essentialism is the 'easy' answer for culture, which has become popular, usable and marketable in, for example, management studies and foreign language education where people are looking for simple formulae for communicating with clients, students and colleagues from 'other places and backgrounds'. For this reason, the tone of this book is to go against these 'easy' answers, to struggle with dominant discourses and to problematize what is normally thought.

The final row in the table addresses the final question posed by this book, developing strategies for intercultural communication. Again, whereas the essentialist side provides an answer, the non-essentialist side poses more of a problem which is complex and requires an understanding of things which are not at all clear and different to what we imagine. Thus, the angle on communication within the theme of identity will be how identity is constructed and how individuals define their own identities. Within the theme of otherization, the focus will be how to avoid the trap of over-generalization and reduction when describing and interacting with others. Within the theme of representation the emphasis will be on deconstructing the imposed images of people from the media and popular discourse.

The purpose of this book is to engage in a dialogue with the reader. We do not believe there is only one route to achieving successful intercultural communication. You will therefore encounter different perspectives, possibly contradictory, within the book.