POEMS 1869-1879

I	DEDICATION: My first gift and my last, to you	59
II	Last night, I lingered long without	60
III	AFTER READING 'ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA': As when the hunt by holt and field	60
IV	SPRING-SONG: The air was full of sun and birds,	61
V	As Love and Hope together	61
VI	DUDDINGSTON: With caws and chirrupings, the woods	62
VII	The relic taken, what avails the shrine?	63
VIII	All things on earth and sea,	64
IX	I sit up here at midnight,	64
X	I am a hunchback, yellow faced—	65
XI	DEATH: We are as maidens one and all,	66
XII	A little before me, and hark!	67
XIII	EPISTLE TO CHARLES BAXTER: Reaped grain should fill the reaper's grange,	68
XIV	CONSOLATION: Though he, that ever kind and true,	71
XV	TO SYDNEY: Not thine where marble-still and white	72
XVI	O dull, cold northern sky,	74
XVII	Swallows travel to and fro,	75
XVIII	Let Love go, if go she will.	76
XIX	I am like one that for long days had sate,	77

CONTENTS

xx	The roadside lined with ragweed, the sharp hills	78
xxi	Not undelightful, friend, our rustic ease	78
xxii	As Daniel, burd-alone, in that far land,	79
xxiii	THE LIGHT-KEEPER: The brilliant kernel of the night,	79
xxiv	My brain swims empty and light	82
xxv	THE CRUEL MISTRESS: Here let me rest, here nurse the uneasy qualm	83
xxvi	STORM: The narrow lanes are vacant and wet;	84
xxvii	STORMY NIGHTS: I cry out war to those who spend their utmost,	86
xxviii	SONG AT DAWN: I see the dawn creep round the world,	89
xxix	NOUS N'IRONS PLUS AUX BOIS: We'll walk the woods no more,	90
xxx	In Autumn when the woods are red	90
xxxi	Love is the very heart of Spring;	91
xxxii	I who all the winter through,	92
xxxiii	Here you rest among the vallies, maiden known to but a few;	92
xxxiv	There where the land of love,	93
xxxv	Love—what is love? A great and aching heart	93
xxxvi	Death, to the dead for evermore	94
xxxvii	I saw red evening through the rain,	95
