

EMPOWERMENT IN SOCIAL WORK PRACTICE A SOURCEBOOK

GUTIÉRREZ

PARSONS

COX

EMPOWERMENT IN SOCIAL WORK PRACTICE

A SOURCEBOOK

Lorraine M. Gutiérrez

*School of Social Work
University of Michigan*

Ruth J. Parsons

*Graduate School of Social Work
University of Denver*

Enid Opal Cox

*Graduate School of Social Work
University of Denver*

BROOKS/COLE PUBLISHING COMPANY

I^TP[®] An International Thomson Publishing Company

Pacific Grove • Albany • Belmont • Bonn • Boston • Cincinnati • Detroit • Johannesburg • London
Madrid • Melbourne • Mexico City • New York • Paris • Singapore • Tokyo • Toronto • Washington

Sponsoring Editor: Lisa I. Gebo
Marketing Team: Jean Thompson,
Christine Davis, and Deanne Brown
Editorial Assistant: Shelley Bouhaja
Production Coordinator: Jamie Sue Brooks
Production: Greg Hubit Bookworks
Manuscript Editor: Molly D. Roth

Permissions Editor: Cathleen C. Morrison
Interior and Cover Design: John Edeen
Typesetting: Susan Rogin
Cover Printing: Phoenix Color Corp.
Printing and Binding: Maple-Vail Book
Manufacturing Group

COPYRIGHT© 1998 by Brooks/Cole Publishing Company
A division of International Thomson Publishing Inc.
ITP The ITP logo is a registered trademark under license.

For more information, contact:

BROOKS/COLE PUBLISHING COMPANY
511 Forest Lodge Road
Pacific Grove, CA 93950
USA

International Thomson Editores
Seneca 53
Col. Polanco
11560 México, D. F., México

International Thomson Publishing Europe
Berkshire House 168-173
High Holborn
London WC1V 7AA
England

International Thomson Publishing GmbH
Königswinterer Strasse 418
53227 Bonn
Germany

Thomas Nelson Australia
102 Dodds Street
South Melbourne, 3205
Victoria, Australia

International Thomson Publishing Asia
221 Henderson Road
#05-10 Henderson Building
Singapore 0315

Nelson Canada
1120 Birchmount Road
Scarborough, Ontario
Canada M1K 5G4

International Thomson Publishing Japan
Hirakawacho Kyowa Building, 3F
2-2-1 Hirakawacho
Chiyoda-ku, Tokyo 102
Japan

All rights reserved. No part of this work may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transcribed, in any form or by any means—electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording, or otherwise—without the prior written permission of the publisher, Brooks/Cole Publishing Company, Pacific Grove, California 93950.

Printed in the United States of America

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Empowerment in social work practice : a sourcebook / [edited by]

Lorraine M. Gutiérrez, Ruth J. Parsons, Enid Opal Cox.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 0-534-34846-7

I. Social service—United States. I. Gutiérrez, Lorraine M.

(Lorraine Margot) II. Parsons, Ruth J. III. Cox, Enid Opal

HV91.E56 1998

361.3'2—dc21

97-13208
CIP

EMPOWERMENT IN SOCIAL WORK PRACTICE
A SOURCEBOOK

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

Lorraine Gutiérrez, Ph.D., A.C.S.W., is an associate professor of social work and psychology at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, where she teaches courses on multicultural community practice and cochairs the Community Organization Concentration. Her research, practice, and teaching have centered on multicultural practice, women of color, and empowerment.

Ruth J. Parsons, M.S.W., Ph.D., is a professor of social work at the Graduate School of Social Work, University of Denver. She has practiced social work for more than 20 years with a variety of client groups, including families, children, adults with severe and persistent mental illness, and the elderly. Her research and teaching interests focus on empowerment practice and research with oppressed populations.

Enid Opal Cox, D.S.W., is a professor of social work and director of the Institute of Gerontology at the University of Denver. She is coauthor of Empowerment-Oriented Practice with the Elderly with Dr. Ruth Parsons and has research, practice, teaching, and publishing experience related to elderly care issues, care-giver issues, issues of older workers, and issues of ethnic minority elders. She also has teaching and research interests in social welfare policy, history of social welfare, and indirect practice interventions with a special emphasis on empowerment-oriented approaches.

To all human service workers—past, present, and future—working in partnership with communities to create a more equitable world.

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Graydon Andrus, M.S.W., has worked for seven years with the Health Care for the Homeless project in Seattle. His work has been divided between two shelter-based sites: one for men over fifty years old and the other serving adults of any age. Though his primary work is with people experiencing mental illness, he has had the opportunity to work with a broad spectrum of the homeless population.

Yolanda Burwell, Ph.D., is an associate professor of social work in the School of Social Work at East Carolina University in Greenville, North Carolina. She has extensive training experience in cross-cultural and empowerment practice issues. Additionally, she is a social welfare historian. She unearths the "lost" voices and unrecognized community-building activities among early African Americans in North Carolina.

Kathryn A. DeLois, M.S.W., Ph.D., is an assistant professor of social work at the University of New England Graduate School of Social Work in Portland, Maine, where she teaches courses on social work research and practice. She has extensive practice experience working in the areas of substance abuse and gender issues. Her research interests include feminist research methods, lesbian identity, and empowerment.

Linnea GlenMaye, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of social work in the School of Social Work at the University of Las Vegas, Nevada, where she teaches courses in the field practicum and human behavior in the social environment. Her research interests include sexual assault, feminist theory, and infusing content on women into the social work curriculum. She is involved in lesbian and gay community organization efforts in Las Vegas.

Vanessa G. Hodges, Ph.D., is an associate professor of social work at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where she chairs the Families and Children Concentration. Her teaching and research interests include family-centered practice, home-based practice with high-risk children and families, strengths-based social work practice, cultural competence in service delivery, developmental research, and evaluation research. Dr. Hodges's practice experience includes family reunification following residential treatment, community integration of developmentally disabled adults, and parent education and training.

Barbara H. R. Joseph, D.S.W., is a teacher, administrator, consultant, trainer, social worker, therapist, writer, lecturer, organizer, and activist with 30 years of experience working with public and private health, education, and welfare agencies. She is associate professor of American studies at SUNY/Old Westbury in New York State. Dr. Joseph speaks and consults widely on issues of "racesexism," empowerment, policy analysis, program evaluation, and community and leadership development with special attention to women and communities of color.

Susan Manning, Ph.D., is an associate professor of social work at the Graduate School of Social Work, University of Denver. Her teaching, research, and publication interests have integrated mental health, ethics, and qualitative methods of discovery. Studies in mental health have focused on the experience of people with severe and persistent mental illness, specifically in relationship to their sense of empowerment. Her work in ethics includes ethical decision making, professional ethics, ethics of managed care, informed consent in practice and research, and the development of ethical guidelines in the community. She has extensive practice experience in the mental health field in clinical and administrative roles. An experienced trainer in these issues, she has presented her work at national and international conferences.

Margo Okazawa-Rey, Ed.D., is a professor of social work at San Francisco State University School of Social Work. Through education, political organizing, and activist scholarship, she works in community and academic settings addressing the issue of racism and other forms of oppression. She is particularly interested in problems affecting peoples of color, especially women of color. Her current research/activist project is examining the effects of violence against women by the U.S. military and the experiences of mixed-race children, offspring of GIs, in Asia.

Debra M. Ortega, M.S.W., is currently a Ph.D. candidate in social work at the University of Washington in Seattle and adjunct faculty member at both Case Western Reserve University and Portland State University. She has extensive practice experience as a home-based family therapist. Her teaching and research interests include ethnocultural mental health, gender, and ethnics.

Stuart Rees, Ph.D., is professor of social work at the University of Sydney in Australia. He has practice experience as a probation officer in England and in Canada and has been a community worker in the United States, Scotland, and Holland. He is currently the director of the Centre of Peace and Conflict Studies. His research interests include empowerment with particular reference to disability; the retention of universal services such as Medicare; the interdependence of policy and practice; and evaluating welfare, legal, and health services. He is the author of Achieving Power, a book on the concept and practice of empowerment in social work and social welfare.

Richard Renz-Beaulaurier, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of social work at the School of Social Work at Florida International University. He teaches courses in administration, planning, community organizing, and research. He is currently conducting research on social work practice in health organizations that focuses on work with disabled people. He has published papers on empowering people with disabilities in health and rehabilitation settings. He has also been a presenter at several national social work conferences on this and other topics.

Susan M. Ruhlin, M.S.W., has worked with homeless families since 1988 as an employment case manager and as a shelter counselor and case manager. She presently works at the Fremont Family Shelter/Bethlehem House in Seattle, Washington. She has been involved in social services work since 1981.

Sung Sil Lee Sohng, Ph.D., is an assistant professor of social work at the University of Washington, School of Social Work. Her teaching and research interests lie in participatory action research, cultural diversity and social justice, ethnographic interviewing, and grassroots organizing.

PREFACE: THE EMPOWERMENT MODEL FOR PRACTICE

The concept of empowerment has gained currency within the past two decades. The literature in fields as diverse as nursing, education, social work, and management have proposed that one can use empowerment methods to increase consumer choice, contain costs, and reengage individuals in the lives of their organizations or communities. This broad application of empowerment has led some to question its meaning or to propose that social workers discontinue its use.

This lack of specificity and broad application of the idea of empowerment provided the motivation for developing this book. As practitioners, teachers, and researchers working from an empowerment perspective, we believe that the concept has not only meaning, but also a particular relevance in these times of growing inequality, diminishing resources, and increased intergroup conflict. As a philosophy, approach, or method of practice, empowerment provides one way to rethink social work practice.

Because of current and emerging social trends, empowerment should be of particular concern to social workers today and into the future. We view empowerment as a means to achieve needed social change, personally and politically, in ways that meet human needs. Given the growing inequality and intolerance in society that directly affect the communities social workers serve, such workers need to take a deeper look at empowerment theory and practice as a tool for individual and social transformation. Determining how social workers can gain a new consciousness, marshal their skills, and practice to advance social justice is a helpful path to pursue.

To provide tools for social workers who wish to engage in empowerment practice, we offer specific examples of how empowerment can be and has been conducted in the field. The literature on empowerment has emphasized the importance of developing and implementing methods specific to populations, issues, and contexts. Therefore, we asked our contributors to demonstrate how one can use empowerment practice in the various situations, groups, and problems addressed by social workers. Each chapter would present a unique perspective on empowerment in order to clarify how one could implement this perspective in different contexts. In this way, we could demonstrate both the unity and the diversity of empowerment practice as it exists in the field.

In its most basic form, empowerment practice values multicultural perspectives and recognizes that these different perspectives can strengthen social work theory and practice. Therefore, we have asked a diverse group of people to contribute to this book, which includes the perspectives of academics, practitioners, men, women, gays and lesbians, European Americans, and people of color. The contributors were to provide in their given chapter some background on their population or issues, their particular perspective on empowerment, and ways in which this perspective can be and has been translated into practice. Within this general framework, contributors wrote in their own style, interest, and especially voice. Despite a common framework, then, this book offers diverse perspectives in these authors' descriptions of different practice frameworks, fields of practice, levels of analysis, and approaches.

Chapter 1 provides a framework for understanding the perspectives that follow. We focus on the widest view of empowerment and its implications for social work practice, describing the empowerment perspective, its assumptions, and its relationship to other forms of practice. Specific examples illustrate different dimensions or levels of empowerment.

The following section focuses on the implications of empowerment practice with specific populations often encountered by social workers: women, people of color, people with disabilities, and gays, lesbians, and bisexuals. Although one could add other oppressed groups, such as those with insufficient income, to this list, these groups were selected in part because the Council on Social Work Education has mandated their inclusion in social work curricula and because much of empowerment practice has already developed in relation to these groups. Ways in which the authors focus on these specific groups, however, suggest ways in which empowerment practice can be tailored to the needs and issues of other population groups.

In the third section of the book, the analytical lens sharpens to focus on empowerment practice in specific domains of practice: mental health, housing and homelessness, youth, and families. These domains were selected because they represent issues or levels of practice frequently encountered by social workers. In these chapters, practitioners and scholars articulate why empowerment is particularly relevant to their population or service domain and how this practice has been and can be conducted. They therefore help show how empowerment practice can be developed to work toward individual, family, and community change.

The final four chapters look at ways in which social work administration and research methods can contribute to empowerment practice. The focus here is twofold: How can one conduct research and administration practice from an empowerment perspective, and how can these methods support the empowerment of clients, workers, and communities? These chapters mainly provide a holistic vision of how empowerment methods can influence, through social work practice, the creation of socially just institutions.

As a whole, this book provides information on the depth and breadth of empowerment practice and its use in different settings, with different populations, and in different levels of practice. Taking the long view, one can see similarities among the methods in various chapters and group them as participatory, educational, or capacity building in nature. Another similarity is the focus on working within a group context for providing services, building support systems, or engaging in social change. This closer look also reveals significant differences in application. For example, the use of cultural and religious practices with African-American grandparents differs qualitatively from the use of action research methods with homeless youth. However, in each example, the principle of tailoring one's methods to fit the community through dialogue reflects empowerment practice in general.

We hope this book will serve as a resource for faculty, students, practitioners, and researchers interested in understanding what empowerment practice is and how it can be conducted. Through dialogue with our contributors and the communities they represent, we have gained in knowledge and understanding of this concept.

Acknowledgments

This book has been a complex and enormous undertaking spanning more than three years and continents! So many individuals and institutions have contributed to this volume that it would be impossible to recognize them all. Specifically, we would first like to acknowledge the contributions of our students, whose questions regarding the applications of empowerment in the "real world" motivated us to take on this project. Their probing and often challenging questions led us into dialogue regarding the usefulness of a book such as this one.

The institutions in which we work have also supported our work on this volume. The universities of Denver, Washington and Michigan provided support in the form of time, staff, and helpful colleagues. We would like to acknowledge in particular the support of Nancy Hooyman at the University of Washington, who provided funds for the national conference on empowerment practice that brought us together. Edith Lewis at the University of Michigan also deserves special recognition for providing informal and formal feedback and support.

The prepublication reviews were extremely helpful in giving us the feedback to revise and clarify the work. The following people have greatly influenced the development of this volume by providing timely and constructive input at various stages of writing: Jannah Hurn-Mather, Wilfred Laurier University; Arline Prigoff, California State University, Sacramento; Michael Reisch, University of Pennsylvania; Robert Rivas, Siena College; Lee Staples, Woodville, Massachusetts; Nancy Wall, University of Illinois at Chicago; Marilyn Wedenoja, Eastern Michigan University; and Stanley Wenocur, University of Maryland at Baltimore. Expert editorial assistance was also provided by Neysa Folmer, Molly Roth, Kylo-Patrick Robert Hart, and Greg Hubit. Special thanks must go to the staff at Brooks/Cole who made this publication possible, particularly Lisa Gebo, who had the foresight to see the potential for this work.

A final word of recognition goes to our families—particularly our partners and children—who lived with this book for many years and also came to know the many faces of empowerment.

*Lorraine Gutiérrez
Ruth Parsons
Enid Cox*

CONTENTS

Part One

AN INTRODUCTION TO EMPOWERMENT PRACTICE 1

Chapter 1

A MODEL FOR EMPOWERMENT PRACTICE 3

Lorraine M. Gutiérrez, Ph.D.

University of Michigan, Ann Arbor

Ruth J. Parsons, Ph.D.

University of Denver, Denver, Colorado

Enid Opal Cox, D.S.W.

University of Denver, Denver, Colorado

Introduction 3

The Empowerment Process 4

Elements of Empowerment Practice 5

Value Base 6

Sanctions for Intervention 6

Theory Base 7

A Framework for Practice 11

Intervention in Four Dimensions 14

Dimension 1 15

Dimension 2 16

Dimension 3 17

Dimension 4 17

Interrelationship of the Dimensions 18

Evaluating the Outcomes of Empowerment Practice 19

Summary 20

References 21

Part Two

EMPOWERMENT IN PRACTICE: POPULATIONS 25

Chapter 2

EMPOWERMENT OF WOMEN 29

Linnea GlenMaye, Ph.D.

University of Las Vegas, Las Vegas, Nevada

Introduction 29

Three Conditions of Women's Oppression 31

Alienation from the Self 31

The Double-Bind Situation of Women 33

Institutional and Structural Sexism 34

Empowerment for Women 34

Definition of Empowerment 35

Model of Empowerment for Women 35

Development of Consciousness of Self 36

Reduction of Shame and Self-Blame 39

Assumption of Personal Responsibility for Change 39

Empowerment in Practice 41

Model Mugging 41

Empowerment for Victims of Domestic Violence 43

Beyond the Personal 45

Empowerment for Homeless Women 46

Conclusion 48

References 50

Chapter 3

EMPOWERING POOR COMMUNITIES OF COLOR:

A SELF-HELP MODEL 52

Margo Okazawa-Rey, Ed.D.

San Francisco State University, San Francisco, California

Introduction 52

The Nature of the Problem 53

The Grandparents' Group 55

Health and Illness: The Context for the Group 55

Workings and Philosophy 56

Inside One Group 57

Actualizing the Goal of Empowerment 59

Practice Principles 62

Conclusion 63

References 64

Chapter 4

EMPOWERMENT PRACTICE WITH LESBIANS AND GAYS 65

Kathryn A. DeLois, Ph.D.

University of New England, Portland, Maine

| | |
|--|----|
| Introduction | 65 |
| Lesbians and Gays as an Oppressed Population | 66 |
| Oppression | 66 |
| Empowerment Practice with Lesbians and Gays | 68 |
| A Safe Climate | 68 |
| Consciousness Raising | 69 |
| Political Power | 69 |
| Updating One's Own Knowledge | 70 |
| Organizational Change | 70 |
| Conclusion | 71 |
| References | 72 |

Chapter 5

EMPOWERING PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES: THE ROLE OF CHOICE 73

Richard Renz-Beaulaurier, Ph.D.

Florida International University, North Miami

| | |
|--|----|
| The History of Rehabilitation | 73 |
| Medical Rehabilitation | 75 |
| Modern Movements | 76 |
| Empowerment: Goals and Impediments | 77 |
| Rehabilitation versus Independent Living | 78 |
| Empowerment Strategies | 80 |
| The Nature of the Problem | 80 |
| Self-determination | 80 |
| Consciousness Raising | 81 |
| Services | 81 |
| Specific Practice Principles | 82 |
| Summary | 82 |
| References | 83 |

Part Three

EMPOWERMENT IN PRACTICE: FOCUSING ON FIELDS 85

Chapter 6

EMPOWERMENT IN MENTAL HEALTH PROGRAMS: LISTENING TO THE VOICES 89

Susan S. Manning, Ph.D.

University of Denver, Denver, Colorado

| | |
|--|-----|
| Introduction | 89 |
| Power and Powerlessness | 90 |
| The Medical Model: "Power Over" | 90 |
| Learned Helplessness | 91 |
| Blaming the Victim | 91 |
| Stigma | 92 |
| Impact of Mental Disability | 93 |
| Empowerment in the Mental Health System | 94 |
| Consumer Perspectives of Empowerment | 95 |
| Professional Attitudes and Roles | 97 |
| Social Work Role in Empowerment | 98 |
| A Program of Empowerment | 100 |
| CHARG | 100 |
| Empowerment as a Technology in Mental Health | 103 |
| Systems/Structural Issues | 103 |
| Human Factors and Empowerment | 104 |
| Principles for Practice | 105 |
| Attitude | 105 |
| Relationship | 106 |
| Social Work Role | 106 |
| Conclusion | 106 |
| References | 107 |

Chapter 7

EMPOWERMENT PRACTICE WITH HOMELESS PEOPLE OR FAMILIES 110

Graydon Andrus, M.S.W.

*Health Care for the Homeless,
Seattle, Washington*

Susan Ruhlin, M.S.W.

*Fremont Family Shelter/Bethlehem House,
Seattle, Washington*