

SS
24

Writing with Confidence -

A Modern College
Rhetoric

KIRKLAND

DILWORTH

BIZZARO

Writing with Confidence -

A Modern College Rhetoric

James W. Kirkland

Collett B. Dilworth, Jr.

Patrick Bizzaro

all of
East Carolina University

17315

D. C. Heath and Company
Lexington, Massachusetts Toronto

Cover: Joanna Steinkeller

Copyright © 1989 by D. C. Heath and Company.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopy, recording, or any information storage or retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publisher.

For permission to use copyrighted material, grateful acknowledgment is made to the copyright holders listed on page vi, which is hereby made part of this copyright page.

Published simultaneously in Canada.

Printed in the United States of America.

International Standard Book Number: 0-669-13675-1

Library of Congress Catalog Card Number: 88-81519

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

To our families, whose patience and support we deeply appreciate:

Paula, Colette, Susan,
Becky, Craig, Jason, Jeremi, Krissy

- Edward Abbey. From Beyond the Wall by Edward Abbey. Copyright © 1984 by Edward Abbey. Reprinted by permission of Henry Holt and Company, Inc.
- Julia Alvarez. "Snow" by Julia Alvarez first appeared in Northwest Review, Vol. 22, and is reprinted with the permission of the editor.
- Diana Baumrind. "Some Thoughts on Ethics of Research: After Reading Milgram's 'Behavioral Study of Obedience'" by Diana Baumrind, American Psychologist, 19, 1964, 421-423. Reprinted by permission of the American Psychological Association and the author.
- Anne Marie Brennan. "Biblical Fundamentalists vs. Scientistic Ones: The Creationism Controversy," Commonweal, October 22, 1982. Copyright © 1982 Commonweal Foundation. Reprinted with permission.
- Bruce Catton. "Grant and Lee: A Study in Contrasts" by Bruce Catton. Copyright U.S. Capitol Historical Society. Reprinted with permission.
- K. C. Cole. "Women and Physics," by K. C. Cole December 3, 1981. Copyright © 1981 by The New York Times Company. Reprinted by permission.
- Joan Didion. "In Bed" from The White Album by Joan Didion. Copyright © 1979 by Joan Didion. Reprinted by permission of Simon & Schuster, Inc.
- Annie Dillard. "Seeing" from Pilgrim at Tinker Creek by Annie Dillard. Copyright © 1974 by Annie Dillard. Reprinted by permission of Harper & Row.
- David Dubber. "Crossing the Bar on a Fiberglas Pole" by David Dubber. Reprinted by permission of the author.
- John C. Dvorak. "Origins of the Word 'Nerd'" by John C. Dvorak, PC Magazine Vol. 6, No. 10, p. 91 and "IBM's New Shills: A Disaster Waiting to Happen" PC Magazine Vol. 6, No. 12, p. 65. Reprinted by permission of the author.
- Leon Jaroff. "The Twilight Zone" from the "Skeptical Eye" column of Discover, September 1983. Leon Jaroff/ © Discover 1983, Family Media, Inc. Reprinted by permission of the publisher.
- Martin Luther King, Jr. "Letter from Birmingham Jail" by Martin Luther King, Jr. From the book Why We Can't Wait, Copyright © 1963, 1964 by Martin Luther King, Jr. Reprinted by permission of Harper & Row.
- Cathleen McGuigan. "Bond at 25: Back to Basics" from Newsweek, July 27, 1987, © 1987, Newsweek, Inc. All rights reserved. Reprinted by permission.
- Charles Rubin. "Phyletic Size Decrease in Hershey Bars" from Junk Food by Charles J. Rubin, David Rollert, John Farago, Rick Stark, Jonathan Etra. Copyright © 1980 Charles J. Rubin, David Rollert, John Farago, Rick Stark, Jonathan Etra. Reprinted by permission of Dell Publishing, a division of Bantam, Doubleday, Dell Publishing Group, Inc.
- E. B. White. "Once More to the Lake" by E. B. White. Copyright 1941 by E. B. White. This essay first appeared in Harper's Magazine. From the book Essays of E. B. White. Reprinted by permission of Harper & Row.

Preface

Writing with Confidence: A Modern College Rhetoric is a text for college students working to develop their writing abilities. As the title implies, this book is concerned with attitudes as well as skills—with the ways in which writers perceive themselves and the world as well as with the technical means they use to achieve their rhetorical goals. “Rhetoric” is used here to mean writing to affect an audience. The book’s basic assumption is that rhetorical intentions succeed most often when writers understand reading and writing as creative processes. Modern scholarship in composition has demonstrated that growth in literate creativity depends on two mutually reinforcing processes: as people gain experience in fulfilling rhetorical aims, they gain confidence in the power of writing to foster personal growth and community health, and as their confidence grows so does their power to fulfill rhetorical aims.

People spend time reading and writing because, among all ways of making meaning, written texts are uniquely efficient and powerful. For example, consider the text of a note intercepted one Friday by the teacher of an eleventh grade English class:

All tonight I know my hands will be rough handling other players and ^{I hope} footballs.

This will ~~fff~~ be important to our school.

All our friends will be pulling for me and ~~fff~~ every player. but what ever

I touch all game I will realy be trying to touch your heart.

We might dismiss this note as awkward adolescent emoting unless we examine the writing in its context. The writer, a defensive lineman, had a particular audience of one in mind: his girl friend. And he had a particular objective in mind: to communicate certain feelings. Under no conditions was the note meant to be read by anyone else, so the teacher later forwarded it without comment to the young woman. But clearly the young man wanted the message to be read, not heard. He had used writing to compose a special thought based on a figurative contrast particularly meaningful to him. The thought was that his efforts on the football field that night, while important to the entire school, would also be intended especially for his girl friend. The figurative contrast is between physically manhandling other football players and psychologically touching her affections. The writer took some care to revise his work by deleting, adding, and substituting words to make his message more accurate and less redundant.

Obviously his proofreading overlooked errors in capitalization, spelling, and punctuation. Nevertheless the note demonstrates the essential virtue of written composition: it joined the boy and the girl, the writer and the reader, as a community of meaning-makers through a medium that offers an unmatched blend of convenience and power.

The full benefits of reading and writing, however, occur only for those who adopt the spirit of literacy. This spirit directs people to be alert to life and its possibilities. It encourages them to seek opportunities to originate new ways of living and to share new experiences, new feelings, new knowledge, and new ways of thinking about problems. Without this spirit, reading and writing are useful only in maintaining records; with this spirit, these means insure the growth of consciousness for a lifetime.

Because instruction in composition cannot begin without writers, this text encourages students to see themselves as writers here and now growing more adept in their craft. The Introduction explores students' anxieties and hopes, demonstrating how to exploit these emotions so they promote rather than inhibit achievement. Chapters 1 through 8 proceed to help students acquire three basic perceptual roles: observer, reader, thinker. Underlying these chapters is the assumption that because observation, reading, and thinking provide the fuel for composition, the inobservant, unreading, unreflective writer is running on empty. These chapters also guide students through the basic processes of inventing, planning, drafting, revising, and editing.

The heart of the book, Chapters 9 through 13, gives students experience in four fundamental rhetorical environments: sharing personal experience, evaluating, explaining, and arguing. Each environment is shown to establish a relationship among four elements: a reader, a writer, a subject matter, and a piece of writing. As in the study of perceptual roles, students are asked to take active rhetorical roles, the assumption being that the more vividly the context for writing is portrayed, the more efficiently skills are developed. To reinforce understanding of the writer's rhetorical relationships, Chapters 10–13 trace the processes readers use within the rhetorical environments. The book treats literacy as integrated processes (reading-writing) rather than as discrete products (a state of comprehension, a written text). To exemplify the processes within the rhetorical environments, each chapter details a student writer's work from first thoughts through planning and drafting to a final manuscript. These student demonstrations not only reinforce prior lessons, they also offer reassuring evidence of the lessons' validity.

Parts Four and Five guide students in fulfilling certain specially focused tasks. Part Four demonstrates in detail how to use the library and how to compose a library research paper. Part Five demonstrates the processes of writing about literature, composing answers to questions on essay exams, writing business letters, and preparing résumés. Part Six is a complete writer's guide to language, style, and usage, explaining sentence grammar, punctuation, word choice, syntactic options, and common stylistic dysfunctions and errors. The traditional topics of grammar and usage are treated for their relevance to the processes of drafting and revising. Part Six discourages the notion that studying its topics independently, outside the context of specific rhetorical tasks, will inevitably improve writing ability.

Throughout, this book is designed to serve as an enabling resource. All its chapters reinforce this basic premise: writing with confidence means writing from a position of strength—the strength that comes from self-knowledge, perceptual sensitivity, technical skill, and the practical experience of writing in different modes and voices for different purposes and audiences.

Many people helped us prepare this book. We express our special appreciation to the staff at D.C. Heath, particularly Paul Smith and Holt Johnson for their editorial guidance, Karen Silverio for her production work, and Cia Boynton for her format design.

We gratefully acknowledge the many students who have helped in the development of this book. Especially noteworthy are Sally Lawrence, Amy Price, Sarah Poindexter, Todd Lovett, John Crabhill, and Bert Quay, all of whose writings serve as examples in the text; Resa Crane-Rodger, who typed early drafts of the manuscript; and Becky Kirkland, who proofread the text in galleys.

We are also indebted to the scholars and teachers who reviewed this text in manuscript and gave us invaluable advice: Cindy Caywood, University of San Diego; Jane F. Friedmann, Northern Virginia Community College; Jo Keroes, San Francisco State University; Steven Lynn, University of South Carolina; Barry M. Maid, University of Arkansas at Little Rock; Gerald Mulderig, DePaul University; David H. Roberts, University of Southern Mississippi; Jack Selzer, The Pennsylvania State University; and Edward M. White, California State University-San Bernardino.

J.W.K.
C.B.D.
P.B.

Contents

Introduction

Claiming an Identity	1
Writing Application	3
Writing for the Self and Others	4
Exploring Attitudes and Experiences	5
Extremes of Attitudes Toward Writing	5
Writing Thrills and Spills	6
Writing Application	8
Writing with Confidence	8
Writing Attitude Survey	9
Writing Application	10
Looking Forward	10

PART ONE: The Writer's Roles

Chapter 1: The Writer as Observer

DOROTHY WORDSWORTH, Journal 1802	16
ANNIE DILLARD, Pilgrim at Tinker Creek	18
Writing Application	23

Chapter 2: The Writer as Reader

Basic Comprehension	25
STEPHEN J. GOULD, Phyletic Size Decrease in Hershey Bars	27
Critical Analysis	30
Exercise	32
Writing Application	33

Chapter 3: The Writer as Thinker

Inducing	34
Deducing	35
Writing Application	37

PART TWO: The Writer's Processes

Chapter 4: Understanding the Writing Task

Purpose	41
Subject	42
Audience	42
Essential Essay Characteristics	43
Exercise	45

Chapter 5: Generating Ideas

Making Free Associations	47
Freewriting	47
Brainstorming	48
Clustering and Tree Diagramming	48
Keeping a Journal	50
Using Classical Techniques of Invention	51
Asking the Reporter's Questions	53
Writing Application	54

Chapter 6: Arranging and Drafting

Arranging	56
Finding a Pattern	56
Formulating a Thesis	56
Arranging Details	57
Exercise	58
Drafting	59
Adopting a Drafting Strategy	60
Assessing the Results	61
Exercise	62

Chapter 7: Writing Effective Paragraphs

Understanding the Need for Paragraphing	64
Exercise	66
Composing Unified Paragraphs	67
Exercises	68
Composing Coherent Paragraphs	70
Exercise	72
Developing Paragraphs Adequately	72
Exercise	73

Using Transitions between Paragraphs	75
Exercise	76
Composing Introductions and Conclusions	77
Exercise	78

Chapter 8: Revising

80

The Nature of Revision	80
Rewriting Strategies	82
Proofreading and Editing Strategies	84

PART THREE: The Writer's Aims

87

Chapter 9: Understanding the Aims of Composition

89

The Environments of Writing	89
Persuading	90
Explaining	90
Defending Arguable Propositions	91
Sharing Personal Experience	92
Analyzing Critically	92
Rendering Aesthetic Experience	93
The Elements of Persona: Tone and Stance	94
JOHN C. DVORAK, Origins of the Word "Nerd"	95
JOHN C. DVORAK, IBM's New Shills: A Disaster Waiting to Happen	96
The Environments in Action	99
Exercise	99
Writing Application	100

Chapter 10: Writing to Share Personal Experience

102

Reading as a Writer	102
DAVID DUBBER, Crossing the Bar on a Fiberglas Pole	103
Observing as a Writer	106
Thinking as a Writer	108
Applying Writing Processes	109
Planning and Inventing	109
Arranging and Drafting	111
Revising	112
STUDENT DEMONSTRATION, Sally Lawrence, Einstein and an Early Rainy Season	113
Reading for Further Understanding	120

JULIA ALVAREZ, Snow	120
Writers' Concerns	121
E. B. WHITE, Once More to the Lake	122
Writers' Concerns	126

Chapter 11: Writing to Evaluate 127

Reading as a Writer	127
DISCOVER MAGAZINE, The Twilight Zone	128
Observing as a Writer	131
Thinking as a Writer	132
Choosing and Applying Criteria	132
Analyzing the Subject	134
Applying Writing Processes	135
Planning and Inventing	136
Arranging and Drafting	138
Revising	139
STUDENT DEMONSTRATION, Amy Price, The Copy Desk of Life	140
Reading for Further Understanding	147
CATHLEEN McGUIGAN, Bond at 25: Back to Basics	147
Writers' Concerns	149
DIANA BAUMRIND, Some Thoughts on the Ethics of Research: After Reading Milgram's "Behavioral Study of Obedience"	150
Writers' Concerns	154

Chapter 12: Writing to Explain

156

Reading as a Writer	156
K. C. COLE, Women and Physics	157
Observing as a Writer	161
Thinking as a Writer	163
Causal Analysis	163
Process Analysis	164
Classification	164
Comparative Analysis	165
Applying Writing Processes	165
Planning and Inventing	166
Arranging and Drafting	167
Revising	168
STUDENT DEMONSTRATION, Todd Lovett, Things Men Have Made	169
Reading for Further Understanding	176
JOAN DIDION, In Bed	176
Writers' Concerns	178
BRUCE CATTON, Grant and Lee: A Study in Contrasts	179
Writers' Concerns	182

Chapter 13: Writing to Argue

183

Reading as a Writer	183
EDWARD ABBEY, The Damnation of a Canyon	184
Observing as a Writer	191
Thinking as a Writer	192
Determining What the Subject Is	192
Determining What the Subject Is Not	193
If . . . Then Reasoning	193
Applying Writing Processes	194
Planning and Inventing	194
Arranging and Drafting	196
Revising	197
STUDENT DEMONSTRATION, John Crable, Why the Saxophone Should Be Included in the Orchestra	198
Reading for Further Understanding	202
ANNE MARIE BRENNAN, Biblical Fundamentalists vs. Scientific Ones: The Creationism Controversy	202
Writers' Concerns	206
Public Statement by Eight Alabama Clergymen	207
MARTIN LUTHER KING, JR., Letter from Birmingham Jail	208
Writers' Concerns	219

PART FOUR: The Writer as Researcher

221

Chapter 14: Using the Library

223

The Card Catalog	223
General Encyclopedias and Biographical Dictionaries	225
Specialized Reference Works	225
Periodical Indexes and Bibliographies	227
Microfilm Resources and Computerized Information Services	228

Chapter 15: Writing the Research Paper

229

Generating Ideas for Research	229
Compiling a Preliminary Bibliography	231
Gathering Information	240
Locating Sources	240
Taking Accurate Notes	241
Avoiding Plagiarism	243
Arranging and Drafting	244
Formulating a Thesis Statement	245

Outlining	245
Composing a Preliminary Draft	245
Documenting	248
Revising	254
Preparing the List of Works Cited	255
Preparing the Final Draft	255
STUDENT DEMONSTRATION, Sarah Poindexter, The Effects of Child Abuse	256

PART FIVE: Writing for Special Purposes 277

Chapter 16: Writing Literary Analyses 278

Reading Critically	278
Deciding on a Topic and a Critical Approach	280
Formulating and Developing a Thesis	282
STUDENT DEMONSTRATION, Imagery in "The Taxi"	283
Exercise	284

Chapter 17: Writing Answers for Essay Examinations 286

Objective Tests and Essay Examinations	286
Types of Essay Items	287

Chapter 18: Writing Business Letters 290

Using Standard Block Format	290
Writing in Direct, Friendly Style	291

Chapter 19: Preparing a Résumé 294

Chapter 20: Understanding the Parts of Speech

Function	300
Verbs	301
Regular	• Irregular • Helping • Linking • Tense • Mood •
Voice	• Exercise
Nouns	307
Determiners	• Positions • Form Changes • Exercise
Pronouns	308
Personal	• Reflexive and Intensive • Demonstrative • Indefinite •
Relative	• Interrogative • Reciprocal • Exercise
Adjectives	312
Exercise	313
Adverbs	313
Exercise	314
Prepositions	314
Exercise	315
Conjunctions	316
Coordinating	• Correlative • Subordinating • Conjunctive Adverbs
Exercise
Interjections	318
Use in Analysis of Writing	318
Exercise	319

Chapter 21: Structuring Sentences

Creating Basic Sentences	321
The Basic Sentence	• Five Basic Sentence Patterns • Exercise • Four
Alterations to the Basic Sentence	• Exercises
Modifying with Words and Phrases	326
Words That Modify	• Exercise • Placement of Modifiers • Phrases
That Modify	• Exercise • Effects of Modifying Words and Phrases •
Exercises
Modifying with Clauses	331
Independent and Dependent Clauses	• Modifying with Subordinate
Clauses	• Modifying with Relative Clauses • Exercise • Effects of
Modifying Clauses	• Exercises

Using Nominals and Appositives	335
Nominals • Exercise • Effects of Nominals • Exercise •
Appositives • Effects of Appositives • Exercises
Modifying Restrictively and Nonrestrictively	339
Restrictive and Nonrestrictive Modification • Exercise • Effects of Restrictive and Nonrestrictive Modification • Exercise • Parenthetical
Expressions • Effects of Parenthetical Expressions • Exercises
Coordinating	343
Coordination and Parallel Constructions • Effects of Coordination •
Exercises

Chapter 22: Writing with Precision and Control

346

Choosing Words	346
Denotation and Connotation • Exercises • Synonyms • Exercise
Abstract, Concrete, General, and Specific Language	349
Exercise • Figurative Language • Exercise • Nominal and Verbal Styles • Exercise • Colloquialism • Slang • Jargon and Pretentious Language • Euphemism • Clichés • Exercise
Writing Concisely	359
Noun-dependent Style • Needless Repetition • Empty Phrases •
Exercises
Writing with Emphasis	363
Positive Form • Repetition • Sentence Structure • Isolation •
Exercises
Writing in the Active and Passive Voices	367
Exercises	369

Chapter 23: Punctuating and Following Mechanical Conventions

371

The Period	371
The Exclamation Point	372
The Question Mark	373
Exercise	374
The Comma	374
Exercises	375, 377, 378, 380
The Semicolon	381
Exercise	382
The Colon	383
Exercise	384
The Dash	385
Parentheses	386
Exercise	387
Quotation Marks	388

Exercise	390
Brackets	391
The Ellipsis Mark	391
Exercise	392
The Apostrophe	393
The Slash	394
The Hyphen	395
Exercise	396
Italics	397
Capitalization	398
Numbers	401
Abbreviations	402
Exercise	403

Chapter 24: Avoiding Common Sentence Errors

405

Errors in the Case Forms of Pronouns and Nouns	405
Exercises	410
Pronoun-Antecedent Disagreement	411
Exercises	413-14
Subject-Verb Disagreement	414
Exercises	418-19
Errors in Verb Usage	419
Exercises	422-23
Errors in Adjective and Adverb Forms	423
Exercises	425
Vague Pronoun Reference	425
Exercises	428
Dangling and Misplaced Modifiers	429
Exercises	431
Comma Splice and Fused Sentence	431
Exercises	433-34
The Sentence Fragment	435
Exercises	436-37
Nonparallel Constructions	437
Exercises	439-40

Chapter 25: Eliminating Spelling Problems

441

Understanding the Nature of English Spelling	441
Using Special Techniques for Learning Spelling	442