PREFACE

This is the first edition of the annual DATA BASE DIRECTORY, an alphabetical listing of databases available online in North America, published by Knowledge Industry Publications, Inc., in cooperation with The American Society for Information Science. This directory is a hard copy print generated directly from the DATA BASE USER SERVICE online files.

The entire subscription to DATA BASE USER SERVICE includes online accessibility to a file of databases which is updated and added to on a continuous basis, one copy of this directory, 12 issues of the print newsletter DATA BASE ALERT, and access to the hotline service for further information and assistance. For users of this hard copy edition, Producer, Vendor and Subject Indexes have been compiled, also generated directly from the online version, and appear at the back of the book.

To insure that the content of DATA BASE USER SERVICE is kept comprehensive and up-to-date, an Editorial Board has been formed. Those appointed to serve over the next year are: Robert Barnes (Philosophy Department, Lehigh University), Maureen Corcoran (president, Online Connection, Inc.), Susan Harvey (corporate librarian, Metcot Research Associates), Marjorie Hlava (president, Access Innovations, Inc.), and Janet D. Bailey (vice president and executive editor, Knowledge Industry Publications, Inc.).

The publication of this first edition of DATA BASE DIRECTORY involved the time and effort of many individuals. The editors would like to thank all those whose dedication made this directory possible with special appreciation to the dozens of researchers and proofreaders who worked the long months necessary to pull together, follow through and organize material. Thanks also to the staff at Information Consultants, Inc. (ICI) in Washington, DC and Automatech Graphics Corporation in New York for their skills, advice and patience under deadline pressures. Special thanks to a number of information specialists including a volunteer focus group of corporate and special librarians, all of whom were instrumental in helping shape the content and format of this database. The editors would also like to acknowledge Gesell-schaft fuer Information und Dokumentation MBH (GID), West Germany for permission to use information from the ODIN Database Guide.

INTRODUCTION

Scope

DATA BASE DIRECTORY identifies and describes machine-readable databases available for public access. The directory covers full text, textual and numeric, numeric, property, bibliographic and referral databases in all subject areas.

The majority of the databases listed are available online in North America, most in the U.S. and/or Canada. Occasionally, at the discretion of the editors, databases not presently available in the U.S. have been included and noted with appropriate restrictions and conditions. Such exceptions were made, for example, where there were implications that the database might be accessible in the U.S./Canada at some future date, or where the data description appeared to be unique and of potential value to a researcher in that particular field. In these cases, it is recommended that researchers contact the producer (the publisher or organization/individual responsible for the contents of the database) or vendor (the organization through which the database is accessed online) directly for current status of availability; also, special arrangements are sometimes possible. A brief listing has been included for a small number of databases recently taken offline in the event that the user would like to contact the producer to find out the current status of the database, i.e., whether it will be updated and maintained, whether it will be available online again at some future date, or whether the data is available in some other machine-readable form.

Methodology

The questionnaire used to obtain information for this directory was developed by the editorial staff at Knowledge Industry Publications, Inc. with the much appreciated assistance of specialists in the information field. A volunteer focus group comprising top librarians from Loral Electronic Systems, Xerox Publishing, General Foods Corporation, Texaco, Inc., and others met to discuss the needs of potential users and to help design the questionnaire so that responses could be transformed into a useful, organized and clear descriptive database listing. Drafts and redrafts were sent to the focus group members and other information specialists for feedback and additional comments.

At the end of 1983, questionnaires were sent to approximately 1000 identified database producers worldwide to obtain information on their databases available in North America. KIP staff research, including second and third mailings of the original questionnaire, follow-up telephone work to clarify responses and obtain new information, and, in some cases personal visits to producers, continued through late August 1984.

In cases where the producer did not supply information directly, research included contacting the online vendor(s) of the database(s) for as much information as could be obtained. Although the majority of the information appearing in this database was ultimately received from and/or approved by the producer, several listings, which appear with a  $\spadesuit$  after the database name, were supplied by the vendor. In addition, where it was not possible to obtain or use price information supplied by the producer, the vendor was contacted for the most current rates. Several European-based databases were compiled with the assistance of Gesellschaft fuer Information und Dokumentation MBH (GID), West Germany; these are also noted with a  $\spadesuit$ . These databases have been edited from the ODIN Database Guide to DBD style and are reprinted here with the permission of Emil Wetzel at GID.

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

Database descriptions are arranged alphabetically by name and can be located in this way when the title of the database is known. Users should refer to the list of Database Alternate Names to check former names, acronyms, alternate names, previous names, etc., by which the database may also be known. While the name of the online vendor appears with price information in each listing, the Vendor Index includes contact information and a list of databases offered by each. Database producer name and contact information appear in each listing and can also be found in the Producer Index, which lists the names of the databases produced by each. The Subject Index gives the names of the databases that cover a particular subject area.

Database Descriptions

DATABASE NAME: The name appears in bold face type and begins each listing. Also appearing in this field, when appropriate, is any alternate name, former name, abbreviation or acronym by which the database may be known. In several instances some pertinent information appears here with regard to a database that recently went offline or one that is expected to be available in the very near future.

SUBJECT: Producers were asked to supply subject categories so that their database(s) could be listed in a subject index. They were permitted six subject listings and asked to give the list in priority order. Editing was done in this field for the sake of consistency.

SUMMARY: A general description of the content and scope of the database appears in the summary of each listing.

CORRESPONDING PRINTED SOURCES (if applicable): This field supplies the user with the full name of the publication(s) that offer the same information as all or part of the online database. In addition, a short description of any notable differences between the print source and the online version appears in this field.

SUBJECT ACCESS TO DATABASE CONTENT: Information is included on accessible subject headings, keywords and classification scheme. Producers checked off the following categories where they applied: enhanced titles/descriptive phrases; subject headings from a thesaurus; keywords; subject coding/classification scheme. In addition they often wrote in name(s) of coding (e.g. CAS Registry Number or SIC code) and other useful information in this area.

PRODUCER/PRODUCER SERVICES: The name of the primary producer is listed (secondary and tertiary are also listed if necessary) with address, phone, telex and contact person. Also mentioned here are any special services offered by the producer, e.g., producer serves as its own online vendor, producer offers batch searching, document delivery, commercial tapes.

TIME COVERAGE AND FILE DATA: Sub-headings and information on:

File Size: number of records or series in the database as of a particular date.

Update Frequency: instantaneous, daily, weekly, monthly, quarterly, twice/year, annually, irregularly or other frequency specified by the producer.

Approximate Number of New Records Added Each Year

Inclusive Dates: time span of the database and/or time span of the historical time series, along with any comments or clarifying explanation regarding the dates covered by the database.

Database Type: indicates whether the database is considered bibliographic, directory, textual and numeric, numeric, full text or property. Often producers supplied additional information in this field.

Document Types Covered in the Database: generally refers to more than one of the following: journal articles, government reports/documents, patents, monographs, books, published proceedings, theses and dissertations, preprints, papers presented at conferences, newsletters, wire services, catalogs, news releases, broadcasts, newspapers, periodicals, corporate reports and standards and specifications. In this area, producers also often added categories.

Unit Record: refers to the form in which the database information is supplied (refer back to number of records in the database, so that, for example, in a directory with 1700 listings each entry or listing would be considered one record) such as item title, bibliographic, abstract/summary, time series, statistical data, directory information (names, addresses, contact info), index term, exchange rates, stock and bond information, demographic data, chemical/physical property data, news story/article.

VENDOR AND PRICE INFORMATION: The name of the vendor (see Vendor Index for contact information) and general price information for accessing the database are provided here. Methods of payment vary widely depending on vendor, and an attempt has been made to be consistent so that, for example, style for all BRS, all Dialog, all SDC, all I.P. Sharp, etc., is as consistent as possible, although even within these groups there are some exceptions. Pricing style and content have been approved by all major vendors.

Respondents were asked to fill out information in the areas that apply: cost/connect hour, computer resource units (generally cost/unit), subscription fee, monthly minimum, character transmission charges, telecommunications cost (per hour if not included in other prices) and any other pricing details and comments that might clarify overall pricing information. In addition, respondents were asked to estimate the average cost of a typical search. Each individual section of this question lists the effective date of pricing since pricing changes so often.

In cases where billing methods are arranged almost on an individual client basis the vendor must be contacted directly for details. Prices listed in DBD are meant to serve only as a guide. They change with great frequency and there are often special discounts for volume usage, etc., so that users are urged to contact the vendor(s) directly for the latest information. If a database is available on more than one vendor, multiple vendors and their respective price information are listed. If a database is available both on a U.S.-based vendor and a foreign-based vendor, a concerted effort has been made to list the price information on the U.S.-based vendor; others are mentioned only as additional contacts with a telephone and/or telex number. Database producers should be contacted for information regarding additional vendors that may now be carrying their databases. For example, a database published in DBD with Dialog listed as the only vendor may have become available on additional vendors as DBD went to press. DATA BASE ALERT, a monthly newsletter published by Knowledge Industry Publications, Inc., is designed to keep directory users up to date on the changes in existing databases as well as to supply information regarding new databases, new database producers and databases that have recently become available on additional vendors.

ORIGINAL DATA SOURCES: This field might include such information as the name(s) of any organizations, agencies or publications, that served as the original source of the information in the database. The producer organization itself may research and provide its own information. In many cases methods of research are noted, e.g., phone survey, questionnaire, individual reporting, etc.

LANGUAGE: The language or languages in which the database is available.

RESTRICTIONS AND CONDITIONS: Any limitations on the availability of the database are listed here. These might include copyright, unique hardware requirements, subscription requirements, requirement of membership in a particular organization, availability only in particular countries, special degree or qualification required, etc. Note these restrictions and conditions carefully, but be sure to contact the producer directly if the material is of great importance to your research. Sometimes, special arrangements can be made to access online and/or to receive some form of print material.

ACCESSED THROUGH: An attempt has been made to list the telecommunications means by which the database can be accessed, such as Telenet, Tymnet Illinias or direct dial. Some online vendors have their own network (ADP/Autonet, Data Resources/Drinet, CompuServe/CompuServe, Dun & Bradstreet/Dunsiet, etc., EURONET is the main European link, while DataPac serves Canada. Special instructions on how to connect can be obtained from the vendor.

SEARCH AIDS AVAILABLE: Information as to the availability of a list of subject headings, thesauri, user manuals, database and/or system documentation, code books, online help aids, etc. The names of the user aids and their prices have been listed only if provided by the producer or by the vendor. It should be noted that most of the major vendors do supply subscribers to their service with some type of printed and/or online aids; some are at additional cost, and others are included in the cost of the subscription. Corresponding printed sources (see above) should not be considered search aids.

Indexes

The Vendor Index presents the names of every online vendor noted in the text of the directory, listed alphabetically, with the contact information and an alphabetical list of the databases available through that online service.

The Producer Index lists, alphabetically, each individual primary, secondary and tertiary producer included in the text of the directory with contact information and an alphabetical list of the databases produced by that organization.

Those producers that also serve as online vendors for their own database(s) are listed in both Indexes appropriately.

The Subject Index (placed at the back of the book for easy accessibility) categorizes databases by the subjects they cover. Databases have been placed into multiple categories whenever appropriate. A listing of Subject Index Referrals appears after the main Subject Index and provides alternate terminology for some subjects.

It should be noted that the material for every database listing in this directory has been provided and/or approved for publication by the producer and/or vendor of that database. Databases have been listed the way the producer presented them with only minor editing for the sake of consistency, clarity and style. In addition, listings were often compiled or enhanced by KIP editors from printed literature (brochures, booklets, promotional material) sent by the producer.

Decisions as to individual listings vs. a number of listings (where the information might be considered one database system consisting of a number of subfiles) were left to the discretion of the producer organization. Wharton Econometrics and Reuters, for example, specifically requested that they each be listed as individual database systems containing many subfiles. Extensive summary information, in such cases, attempts to clarify the structure of the system and its component parts. These and other groups may have been listed as individual databases in other directories, but appear here separately or as a database system depending on the wishes of the producer. Often, one producer's information is carried in several different ways depending on the online vendor. These differences have been defined as clearly as possible in the text of the listing.

Every attempt has been made to insure accuracy; however, users are advised to contact the producer regarding further details on the content and sources of information in a particular database. The vendor should be contacted to verify pricing details and other pertinent information regarding methods of payment, surcharges, discounts, etc. Users are reminded that information is current as of the effective dates mentioned in each listing and should be checked for currency as content, pricing and availability change frequently. To the knowledge of the editors, no information has been included on any database without the verification and permission of the producer and/or vendor of that database. New databases and late entries that have not been included in this print edition owing to print deadline cutoff are being processed and verified and will appear in the next edition.

The editors would be grateful for any information about changes and additions as these are being made to the online version of this publication (DATA BASE USER SERVICE) on an ongoing basis.
