Have you ever heard the saying "If you want a friend, be one"?

Here is how one new teacher made friends with the girls and boys in her class on the first day of school.

As the bell rang, the teacher smiled at each girl and boy. Then she said in a quiet voice, "Good morning. How nice it is to have all of you in my class this year. I'd like to know each of you. I am sure we will enjoy working together, "Everyone felt that she meant what she said because of her sweet voice and her friendly look.

She told the girls and boys her name and wrote it on the blackboard. Then she told them some of the things she liked to do and she was hoping to do with them during the year.

Then she said to the class, "Now you know my name and the things I like and I want to know your names and the things you like. Then I will feel that I know you."

Could you make friends by doing the same as this teacher did?

One way of getting to know girls and boys in your class is to find out more about them. It is often to be friends with those people who have the same hobbies with you. You play the same games and go on journeys together.

You may find that some new comers in your class miss their old friends and feel strange and alone. You can invite them to take a walk or to ride bikes with you. You will find many things in common to talk about, Just talking together in a friendly manner(方式) is one good way to make friends.

When a friend is sad about a tragedy(悲剧), it's hard to know how to comfort him/her. But the worst thing you can do is say nothing. It could be a signal that you don't care. You don't have to say much. A single supportive phrase doesn't require absolutely perfect words to break the ice. Here are some conversation starters for when difficult situations have your tongue tied.

A friend has a miscarriage. Don't say, "Don't worry. You're so young, you'll have another baby." Do say, "I'm so sorry. I can't begin to imagine what you are going through, but if you want to talk about it, call me anytime."

A guy deserts your friend. Don't say, "I never liked that rat bastard(坏蛋) anyway!"(If the couple winds up reconciling(和解), you could end up losing your friend.) Do say, "Breaking up is always hard to deal with, but I'm here for you, whatever you need."

A friend has a death in the family. Don't say, "It's God's will, "or "I know exactly how you feel. "Do say, "I'm sorry about your loss, What can I do to help?"

A friend loses a job suddenly. Don't say, "Work is always boring. Those employers didn't suit you!"Do say, "I'm sorry for the shock, but I know there's an even better job waiting out there for you. Let's think about possibilities."

Don't say, "Gee! It was only a cat!" or "My roommate is getting rid of his/her dog. Someone's pet dies. Do you want it?"Do say, "I'm sorry, she was such a great cat. How long did you have it?" ) 1. The underlined part "have your tongue tied" probably means" A. make your tongue tight B. tie your tongue C. have no suitable words to say D. say what you want freely ) 2. As a whole, what's the suitable method to comfort your friend troubled with a tragedy? A. To show your sorrow and offer your help. B. To try to make the tragedy less serious. C. To tell your friend not to think about it any more, D. To do your best to make him/her cheerful again. ) 3. Though your friend is deserted, you'd better not say dirty words about her/his friend because ( A. they might get along well again and you might he deserted B. your friend might not like you to say something against her/his friend C. it may be a sign that you don't care your friend D. your friend might hate you in the future My friend, Emma Daniels, spent the summer of 1974 traveling in Israel. During her month long stay in Jerusalem she often went to a cafe called Chocolate Soup. It was run by two men, one of whom—Alex—used to live in Montreal. One morning when Emma went in for coffee. While chatting with her new friend Alex, she mentioned(提到) that she had just finished the book she was reading and had nothing else to read. Alex said he had a wonderful book she might like, and that he'd be happy to lend it to her. As he lived just above the cafe, he quickly ran up to get it. The book he handed to Emma just minutes later was Markings, a book by a former Secretary-General of the United Nations (UN). Emma had never read it, nor had she ever bought a copy, But, when she opened it up, she was floored to see her own name and address inside the cover, in her own handwriting(笔迹). It turned out that the summer before, at a concert back in Montreal, Emma had met a Californian who was in town visiting friends. They decided to exchange addresses(地址), but neither of them had any paper. The man opened up a book he was carrying in his backpack(背包) and asked Emma to write her name and address inside. When he returned to California, he left the book behind in Montreal, and his friend Alex kept it. When Alex later moved to Jerusalem, he took the book along, ) 4. Young men often give flowers to young women when they are in love. This tradition(传统的) may have come from Turkey.

In the 1700s in Turkey, it was quite popular for people in love to send each other baskets full of strange things. The baskets were delivered(送交) secretly to the person who was receiving it. Usually, an old woman who sold flowers or fruit on the street left the basket beside the person's door.

These baskets included a variety of "gifts": flowers, stones, feathers, wax(胎), and even charcoal. Each thing in the basket had a special meaning. By figuring out the secret message contained in each item, the person who received the basket began to understand little by little the true feelings of the person who sent it.

This idea of sending gifts of love with secret meanings quickly spread to Germany, France, and England. However, as time passed, only sending flowers remained popular.

An innocent(单纯的) bunch(束) of flowers told young ladics about the feelings in the hearts of young men. Each different flower held a different meaning. For example, the flowers from an orange tree meant, "You are beautiful and pure. "Pink carnations meant, "My love for you is strong and great. "Yellow roses, on the other hand, meant, "I saw you with someone else."

Many flowers dictionaries were made to help young people in love understand the meaning of the flowers they received. Not all of the dictionaries agreed, however, on the meaning of each flower, so a person had to be careful about the flowers they chose to send.

By the 1800s, using flowers to send messages had fallen out of fashion, and the more direct way of sending love letters began. Today, flowers are still considered a lovely gift, but the meaning for each kind of flower has been lost.
