Key Thinkers on Cities

'An excellent assemblage of scholars who reflect insightfully on the major ideas of the most influential contributors to urban theory and practice of the past three decades.'

Michael Peter Smith, Distinguished Research Professor of Urban and Community Studies, University of California

'The contributors weave together the personal and professional, providing wonderful insights into the people behind contemporary urban studies. A must-read for all who want to know more about why we understand cities in the way we do!'

Kevin Ward, Professor of Human Geography, University of Manchester

Key Thinkers on Cities provides an engaging introduction to the dynamic field of contemporary urban studies. It profiles the work of 40 innovative thinkers who have shaped how cities are understood, researched, debated and acted upon. This book offers a fresh look at established thinkers foundational to urban scholarship, while incorporating those who have brought a concern for cities to widespread audiences, and comprises:

- An introductory essay: 'How to think about cities'
- A focus on current innovative and influential research in the field of urban studies
- An explication of key ideas and notable contributions from each key thinker
- Insights across a wide range of academic and professional disciplines, theoretical perspectives and methodological approaches

This is the definitive text for students, and anyone interested in the study of cities and urban life, across the fields of anthropology, economics, geography, sociology and urban planning.

Regan Koch is a Lecturer in Human Geography at Queen Mary University of London.

Alan Latham is a Senior Lecturer at the Department of Geography, University College London.

About the Editors

Regan Koch is a Lecturer in Human Geography at Queen Mary University of London. His interests are in matters of public space, urban sociality and collective culture, and the representation and imagination of urban life. Working between London and various cities across the US, Regan's research has focused on exploring novel food trends, social entrepreneurship, licensing laws and government regulations, and changing social norms related to how we live together in cities. His work has been published in Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers, Urban Studies, the International Journal of Urban and Regional Research, and in several edited collections.

Alan Latham teaches in the Department of Geography at University College London. His research is focused on urban sociality, corporeal mobility and public space. Writing on topics ranging from urban cycling and recreational running, cultural economies and neighbourhood change, to the overseas experiences of transnational migrants, his work explores the materialities and practices that generate distinctive forms of urban life. He has published widely in edited collections and international journals including Transactions of the Institute of British Geographers, Environment and Planning D, Cultural Geographies and Urban Studies. He is the co-author of Key Concepts in Urban Geography.

Acknowledgements

Our sincere gratitude goes to those who contributed the entries to this volume. Their effort and patience in getting each chapter finalized is greatly appreciated, and we hope they are as pleased as we are with the final results. We also want to thank Robert Rojek, Matthew Oldfield and the production staff at SAGE for their help in moving this project from commissioning to completion, and the reviewers who helped us make the difficult decisions about which thinkers to include.

Thanks also go to our colleagues and students at QMUL and UCL, who have provided ongoing inspiration and supportive environments in which to develop our own thinking about cities. We would particularly like to thank the students of Cities, Space and Power who read drafts of some of the entries. Anna Plyushteva, Jack Layton, Michael Nattrass and Sam Miles gave helpful comments on the introduction.

Regan would like to thank his family and friends for their constant support.

Alan would like to thank Rita, Thomas and Luisa for their love and patience.
