

ROUTLEDGE
HANDBOOKS

The Routledge Handbook of English for Academic Purposes

Edited by Ken Hyland and Philip Shaw

THE ROUTLEDGE HANDBOOK OF ENGLISH FOR ACADEMIC PURPOSES

Edited by Ken Hyland and Philip Shaw

First published 2016
by Routledge
2 Park Square, Milton Park, Abingdon, Oxon OX14 4RN and by Routledge
711 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017

Routledge is an imprint of the Taylor & Francis Group, an informa business

© 2016 selection and editorial material, Ken Hyland and Philip Shaw; individual chapters, the contributors

The right of Ken Hyland and Philip Shaw to be identified as authors of the editorial material, and of the individual authors as authors of their contributions, has been asserted by them in accordance with sections 77 and 78 of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reprinted or reproduced or utilised in any form or by any electronic, mechanical, or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publishers.

Trademark notice: Product or corporate names may be trademarks or registered trademarks, and are used only for identification and explanation without intent to infringe.

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

Names: Hyland, Ken, editor. | Shaw, Philip (English professor) editor.

Title: The Routledge Handbook of English for academic purposes /

Edited by Ken Hyland and Philip Shaw.

Description: Milton Park ; New York : Routledge, [2016] |

Series: Routledge Handbooks in Applied Linguistics |

Includes bibliographical references and index.

Identifiers: LCCN 2015027126

Subjects: LCSH: English language – Study and teaching (Higher) – Handbooks, manuals, etc. | English language – Rhetoric – Study and teaching (Higher) – Handbooks, manuals, etc. | Academic language –
Study and teaching (Higher) – Handbooks, manuals, etc. | Academic writing – Study and teaching (Higher) – Handbooks, manuals, etc. |
Report writing – Study and teaching (Higher) – Handbooks, manuals, etc.

Classification: LCC PE1065 .R78 2016 | DDC 428.0071–dc23

LC record available at <http://lcn.loc.gov/2015027126>

ISBN: 978-1-138-77471-1 (hbk)

ISBN: 978-1-3156-5745-5 (ebk)

Typeset in Bembo
by HWA Text and Data Management, London

Printed and bound in Great Britain by TJ International Ltd, Padstow, Cornwall

THE ROUTLEDGE HANDBOOK OF ENGLISH FOR ACADEMIC PURPOSES

The Routledge Handbook of English for Academic Purposes provides an accessible, authoritative, and comprehensive introduction to English for academic purposes (EAP), covering the main theories, concepts, contexts, and applications of this fast-growing area of applied linguistics. Forty-five chapters are organised into eight parts covering:

- Conceptions of EAP
- Contexts for EAP
- EAP and language skills
- Research perspectives
- Pedagogic genres
- Research genres
- Pedagogic contexts
- Managing learning.

Authored by specialists from around the world, each chapter focuses on a different area of EAP and provides a state-of-the-art review of the key ideas and concepts. Illustrative case studies are included wherever possible, setting out in an accessible way the pitfalls, challenges, and opportunities of research or practice in that area. Suggestions for further reading are included with each chapter.

The Routledge Handbook of English for Academic Purposes is an essential reference for advanced undergraduate and postgraduate students of EAP within English, Applied Linguistics, and TESOL.

Ken Hyland is Professor of Applied Linguistics and Director of the Centre for Applied English Studies at the University of Hong Kong. His publications include Teaching and Researching Writing, 3rd edition (2016), Academic Publishing: Issues and Challenges in the Construction of Knowledge (2015), Disciplinary Identities (2012), and English for Academic Purposes (2006). He is also the co-editor of Innovation and Change in English Language Education (with Lillian Wong, 2013).

Philip Shaw is Emeritus Professor in the Department of English, University of Stockholm, and Senior Professor at Linnaeus University, Sweden. He is the co-author of World Englishes: An Introduction, 2nd edition (with Gunnel Melchers, 2011), and co-editor of From Clerks to Corpora: Essays on the English Language Yesterday and Today (2015), Computer Mediated Discourse across Languages (2013), and The Map and the Landscape: Norms and Practices in Genre (2006).

“Don’t do EAP without it! This volume defines – in 45 chapters by the experts who have shaped the field internationally – the current nature and scope, prevailing activities, and conceptual foundations of EAP: an authoritative, clearly organized resource for advanced students, researchers, program administrators, and educators in universities and schools around the world.”

Alister Cumming, University of Toronto, Canada

“This Handbook is an authoritative, comprehensive and truly international compendium of theory, research and practice in the field of EAP. A group of distinguished scholars provide internationally-relevant and at the same time socially-situated insightful analyses of existing and emerging understandings of EAP in diverse locations across the globe and with reference to traditional and novel EAP genres and contexts.”

Rosa M. Manchón, University of Murcia, Spain

“This volume illustrates how widely EAP is practiced and the variety of research traditions that have influenced current understandings of academic English. The contributors demonstrate that educational values and practices differ considerably from country to country and encourage a critical stance to researching, developing and teaching EAP in local contexts.”

Diane Schmitt, Nottingham Trent University, UK

“This book will be the first port of call for anyone starting a project in EAP, with detailed, up-to-date overviews of pedagogical and research topics that have traditionally defined the field, a range of emerging issues and genres, and coverage of related fields. Authors include some of the best-known researchers in the field, and examples are drawn from six continents.”

Greg Myers, Lancaster University, UK

Routledge Handbooks in Applied Linguistics

Routledge Handbooks in Applied Linguistics provide comprehensive overviews of the key topics in applied linguistics. All entries for the handbooks are specially commissioned and written by leading scholars in the field. Clear, accessible and carefully edited Routledge Handbooks in Applied Linguistics are the ideal resource for both advanced undergraduates and postgraduate students.

The Routledge Handbook of Language and Digital Communication

Edited by Alexandra Georgakopoulou and Tereza Spilioti

The Routledge Handbook of Literacy Studies

Edited by Jennifer Rowsell and Kate Pahl

The Routledge Handbook of Interpreting

Edited by Holly Mikkelsen and Renée Jourdenais

The Routledge Handbook of Hispanic Applied Linguistics

Edited by Manel Lacorte

The Routledge Handbook of Educational Linguistics

Edited by Martha Bigelow and Johanna Ennser-Kananen

The Routledge Handbook of Forensic Linguistics

Edited by Malcolm Coulthard and Alison Johnson

The Routledge Handbook of Corpus Linguistics

Edited by Anne O'Keeffe and Mike McCarthy

The Routledge Handbook of World Englishes

Edited by Andy Kirkpatrick

The Routledge Handbook of Applied Linguistics

Edited by James Simpson

The Routledge Handbook of Discourse Analysis

Edited by James Paul Gee and Michael Handford

The Routledge Handbook of Second Language Acquisition

Edited by Susan Gass and Alison Mackey

The Routledge Handbook of Language and Intercultural Communication

Edited by Jane Jackson

The Routledge Handbook of Language Testing

Edited by Glenn Fulcher and Fred Davidson

The Routledge Handbook of Multilingualism

Edited by Marilyn Martin-Jones, Adrian Blackledge and Angela Creese

The Routledge Handbook of Translation Studies

Edited by Carmen Millán-Varela and Francesca Bartrina

The Routledge Handbook of Language and Health Communication

Edited by Heidi E. Hamilton and Wen-ying Sylvia Chou

The Routledge Handbook of Language and Professional Communication

Edited by Stephen Bremner and Vijay Bhatia

FIGURES

6.1	The language/content continuum	73
9.1	Topics covered by the papers presented at the Latin American ESP Colloquia (1988–2000)	112
9.2	Onset of ESP courses in Latin America	114
9.3	ESP courses and academic disciplines	115
9.4	ESP courses and skills taught	116
9.5	ESP courses: undergraduate and postgraduate level	119
9.6	ESP materials	119
9.7	EAP research	120
24.1	A multimodal ensemble of gestures, gaze, text, image and speech	317
28.1	Provisional outline structure of US dissertation defences	364
28.2	Structure of the Swedish PhD defence conducted in English	368
32.1	System network: choices of engagement identified in academic presentations	420
32.2	Sample view of multimodal annotation in Multimodal Analysis Video	423
32.3	Hand gesture and posture expressing intensification	425
32.4	Open arm horizontally to invite voices from the audience	426
34.1	Types of pedagogy	449
40.1	Some possible contacts for an IEP director	531
40.2	Typical daily challenges	533
42.1	Steps in needs analysis	561
42.2	The needs analysis process	563
42.3	A process approach to quality management	573
43.1	Definition-of-term graphic organizer	587
43.2	Process or sequence graphic organizer	587
44.1	VSTF format and block format text	598
44.2	DocuViz tool	602

TABLES

1.1	Four main principles of EAP	3
7.1	Languages reported by South Africans as their L1 in 2011	85
9.1	Number of surveys sent/returned and number of participating universities in each one of the nine Latin American countries	113
14.1	Top ten key academic collocations and their mean frequencies	183
14.2	The most frequent two- and three-word phrases, and three-word bundles	183
14.3	Examples of frequency bands of technical items from The Rainmaker	186
27.1	The structure of supervision meetings, the types of interaction in supervision meetings in the present data, and in which section of supervision meetings these different types of interactions typically occur	352
27.2	The length of supervision meeting 1 and 2	356
28.1	Percentages of turns per participant type in three MICASE defences	365
28.2	Laughter episodes in three MICASE defences	365
28.3	Percentages of turns per participant type in four Swedish PhD defences in English linguistics	368
28.4	Laughter episodes in four Swedish PhD defences in English linguistics	370
29.1	Types of PhD thesis in various studies	380
32.1	Strata in the analysis of viewer engagement in AP discourse	420
33.1	Rhetorical strategies to recontextualize science information	436
34.1	Summary of contextual dimensions of everyday and educational contexts	452
40.1	Six of the primary duties of a language programme director	531
40.2	Variety of daily responsibilities of a language programme administrator	532
40.3	The action research cycle	537
40.4	Summary of 11 specific competencies.	539
40.5	The BALEAP Competency Framework units and areas of professional practice descriptors	540
40.6	Process for developing a budget	542
40.7	Mid-year Financial Report for Socrates Language Centre	543
42.1	A sample of the latest research on EAP needs analysis	564
43.1	Materials adaptation processes	579

43.2	Sample goals for pre–during–post stages of EAP classes focused on reading-skills development	584
43.3	Five essential components of writing	586
44.1	CALL framework and application to EAP	593
44.2	A typology of social media in L2 post-secondary academic writing contexts	595
44.3	Types of textual scaffolding and exemplary applications in EAP	597

CONTRIBUTORS

Marta Aguilar holds a PhD in English Philology and is an associate professor at Universitat Politècnica de Catalunya, in Barcelona (Spain). Her research interests include spoken academic discourse and academic writing for foreign language speakers. Recently, she has also published on Content and Language Integrated Learning (CLIL) in tertiary education.

John Airey is a Senior Lecturer in EAP at the Department of Languages, Linnæus University, Sweden. He is also Reader in Physics Education at the Department of Physics and Astronomy, Uppsala University, Sweden. John's research interests focus on disciplinary learning and its relationship to language and other semiotic resources.

Francisco Javier Barron Serrano is a doctoral student in the Department of Applied Linguistics at Georgia State University. His interests include advanced second language writing and genre theory applications to second language reading and writing instruction.

Helen Basturkmen is Associate Professor at the University of Auckland. Her research interests include discourse analysis and ESP/EAP. She has written two books on English for Specific Purposes (Routledge 2006, Palgrave Macmillan 2010) and was editor of English for Academic Purposes, in the Critical Concepts in Linguistics series (Routledge 2015).

Diane D. Belcher, Chair and Professor of Applied Linguistics and ESL at Georgia State University, has published a number of books, articles, and book chapters primarily about advanced academic literacy. Former co-editor of English for Specific Purposes and TESOL Quarterly, she currently co-edits the Michigan Series on Teaching Multilingual Writers.

Beyza Björkman researches on spoken academic discourse with a focus on the use of English as an academic lingua franca. She has written a monograph and published articles on English as a lingua franca in higher education. Among her other research interests are language policy and planning in higher education and digital discourse

Ana Bocanegra-Valle is a Senior Lecturer at the University of Cadiz (Spain). Her main research interests include Maritime English as a particular branch of ESP, ESP/EAP methodology (needs analysis and learning strategies) and English for scholarly publishing. She was formerly the editor of the LSP journal Ibérica (ISSN 1139-7241).

Marina Bondi is Professor of English Linguistics at the University of Modena-R.E. and Director of the CLAVIER centre (Corpus and LAnguage VArIation In English Research). She has published extensively in the field of genre analysis, EAP and corpus linguistics, with a focus on language variation across genres, disciplines and cultures.

Gemma Campion currently teaches pre-sessional EAP at Nottingham University. Prior to this she has worked in ESOL in the UK, as well as EFL in Europe. She is particularly interested in EAP teachers, and investigated the process of learning to teach EAP for her Masters dissertation in TESOL.

An Cheng is an Associate Professor of English at Oklahoma State University. His research centres upon genre-based teaching and learning of writing. With also a strong interest in ESP practice in Asia, he is the co-guest-editor of a special issue on ESP research in Asia for English for Specific Purposes.

Ulla Connor is the Director of the International Center for Intercultural communication (ICIC), an internationally recognised centre for English for Specific Purposes (ESP) and intercultural communication research and education located in the School of Liberal Arts at IUPUI (Indiana University—Purdue University Indianapolis). ICIC translates its research findings to a variety of teaching programmes at IU and for the community at large.

Averil Coxhead is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Linguistics and Applied Language Studies, Victoria University of Wellington. She co-authored Academic Vocabulary for Middle School Students (2015) and edited New Ways in Teaching Vocabulary, revised (2014). Her research interests include ESP/EAP vocabulary, multi-word units, and measures of vocabulary size.

Belinda Crawford Camiciottoli is Associate Professor of English Language and Linguistics at the University of Pisa (Italy). Her current research focuses mainly on interpersonal, pragmatic and multimodal features of discourse found in both academic and professional settings.

Larissa D'Angelo is a Lecturer of English at the University of Bergamo. Her main research interests deal with EAP and multimodal genres employed in academic discourse. She is an active member of the Research Centre on Languages for Specific Purposes (CERLIS) and is involved in several national research projects on academic language and discourse funded by the Italian Ministry of Education.

Alex Ding is a Lecturer in the School of Education at Nottingham University. He is programme leader for the MA TEAP and supervises MA and PhD students researching EAP. His current research interests include exploring EAP practitioner scholarly activity, identity, agency and ideology.

Estela Ene is the Director of the English for Academic Purposes Program at IUPUI. Her research focuses on ESL/EFL writing from perspectives including language acquisition, teacher training, CALL, and programme administration. Her work has appeared in journals such as System (An International Journal of Educational Technology and Applied Linguistics), the CALICO (Computer Assisted Language Instruction Consortium) Journal, ELTJ (English Language Teaching Journal), and ITL-International Journal of Applied Linguistics.

Christine B. Feak is a Lecturer at the University of Michigan English Language Institute, where she is the lead lecturer for research writing courses. She is co-author of Academic Writing for Graduate Students and the English in Today's Research World book series. She is also co-editor of English for Specific Purposes.

Dezheng Feng is Research Assistant Professor at the Department of English, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University. His research interests include multimodal discourse analysis, multiliteracies, and visual communication. His recent publications include "The visual representation of metaphor" and "Emotion prosody and viewer engagement in film narrative".

Gail Forey is an Associate Professor at the Department of English, The Hong Kong Polytechnic University. She has carried out research and published in the areas of written and spoken workplace discourse, Systemic Functional Linguistics, discourse analysis, call centre communication, language education and teacher development.

Lisa Ganobcsik-Williams is Head of the Centre for Academic Writing, Coventry University, England. She is Editor of the Journal of Academic Writing, and her publications include the co-edited book Writing Programs Worldwide: Profiles of Academic Writing in Many Places (2012) and Teaching Academic Writing in UK Higher Education: Theories, Practices and Models (2006).

Andy Gillett is an EAP consultant and director of Andy Gillett Consulting Ltd. He has taught EAP for 35 years and has been involved in the management of undergraduate and postgraduate programmes related to English language teaching as well EAP programmes at all levels in a wide range of contexts.

Roger Graves is Professor of English and Film Studies and Director of Writing Across the Curriculum at the University of Alberta. He currently researches writing assignments given across universities and ways to use gamification techniques to teach academic writing.

Rosinda de Castro Guerra Ramos holds a PhD in Applied Linguistics from the Catholic University of São Paulo, Brazil, where she teaches at the Post-Graduate Programme in Applied Linguistics and at the English Department. She runs ESP training courses throughout the country and is a consultant for ESP projects, distance education and teacher development.

Magnus Gustafsson is Head of the Division for Language and Communication, Chalmers University of Technology, Sweden. His research activities have focused on adapting WAC and WID practices as well as writing centre practices to European contexts in order to promote language for specific purposes in integrated learning environments.

Alan Hirvela is a Professor in the Department of Teaching and Learning at Ohio State University in the United States. His scholarship focuses mainly on academic writing and on relationships between reading and writing. At present he is also researching argumentative writing instruction and learning in secondary school settings.

Susan Hood is an Associate Professor in the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences at the University of Technology, Sydney (UTS) where she teaches in TESOL and Applied Linguistics programmes. Her research focuses on systemic functional linguistic studies of academic discourse and disciplinarity.

Sally Humphrey has worked for many years in English and TESOL education and is currently a senior lecturer at the Australian Catholic University. Sally is the co-writer of a number of textbooks, which introduce teachers to knowledge about language for primary and secondary curriculum learning.

Ken Hyland is Professor of Applied Linguistics and Director of the Centre for Applied English Studies at the University of Hong Kong. He is well known for his work on academic discourse and EAP and published over 180 articles and 23 books on these subjects.

Niina Hynninen received her PhD at the University of Helsinki in 2013. Her research interests include academic discourse, English as a lingua franca and language norms. She has worked as a lecturer at Stockholm and Helsinki Universities, and currently conducts research on language regulation in academia.

Ann M. Johns, Professor Emerita, San Diego State University (CA/USA), has written or edited five books and more than 70 articles or book chapters on genres and pedagogies and English for Academic Purposes. She also designs curricula and consults with secondary schools on the Common Core State Standards and related issues.

Soomin Jwa is a full-time Lecturer in the College of Arts and Sciences Writing Program at Boston University, where she teaches ESL writing. Her research interests include second-language writing, academic literacy development, genre theory, sociocultural theory, and discourse analysis.

Maria Kuteeva is a Professor and Director of the Centre for Academic English in the Department of English at Stockholm University. Her research has focused on academic uses of English and appeared in such journals as Applied Linguistics, English for Specific Purposes, Journal of English for Academic Purposes, and Journal of Second Language Writing.

Theresa Lillis is Professor in English Language and Applied Linguistics at the Open University, UK. Key research areas are the academic literacy practices of students and professional scholars. Publications include Academic Writing in a Global Context: The Politics and Practices of Publishing in English with Mary Jane Curry (2010, Routledge).

Graciela Mercedes Llopis de Segura teaches English at the School of Humanities of the National University of Catamarca, Argentina. She is the author of several books, book chapters and scientific articles on second language acquisition and discourse analysis.

Christopher J. Macallister is Assistant Director of Pre-sessional English for Academic Purposes and Regional Manager Latin America and Europe at Durham University. He has published widely in the social sciences and language education, especially EAP pedagogy and EAP management.

Margaret E. Malone is Associate Vice President for World Languages and International Programs at the Center for Applied Linguistics. Her current projects include the evaluation of a federal teaching and learning initiative on critical languages and a study of comparisons between English language academic writing and test tasks. She is Co-Director of the Assessment and Evaluation Language Resource Center.

Rosa M. Manchón is Professor of Applied Linguistics at the University of Murcia, Spain. She has published extensively on L2 writing, including articles in leading journals and edited collections published by Multilingual Matters, John Benjamins and Mouton de Gruyter. She is past editor of the Journal of Second Language Writing.

Anna Mauranen is Professor of English at the University of Helsinki. She is co-editor of Applied Linguistics and a former co-editor of the Journal of English as a Lingua Franca. She is the director of corpus-based research projects on spoken and written academic English as a lingua franca and of a research consortium on Global English. She has numerous publications on academic writing, rhetoric, and ELF.

Špela Mežek is a teacher and researcher in English linguistics at the Department of English at Stockholm University. Her research interests are English for academic purposes, advanced second-language reading and writing, second language acquisition, and vocabulary learning.

Janne Morton is a Lecturer in applied linguistics and EAP in the School of Languages and Linguistics, University of Melbourne. She has taught EAP for over 20 years. Her main areas of research are academic and professional literacies, languages for specific purposes, and genre-based analysis of spoken texts.

Hilary Nesi is Professor of English language at Coventry University, UK. Her publications generally concern academic corpora and the design and use of lexical reference tools. She was principal investigator for the projects to create the corpus of British Academic Spoken English and the corpus of British Academic Written English.

Kay L. O'Halloran is Associate Professor in the School of Education at Curtin University. Her areas of research include multimodal analysis, social semiotics, mathematics discourse, and the development of interactive digital media technologies and mathematical and scientific visualization techniques for multimodal and sociocultural analytics.

Brian Paltridge is Professor of TESOL at the University of Sydney. He has recently completed, with Sue Starfield and Christine Tardy, a book on ethnographic perspectives on academic writing (Oxford University Press, 2016). He is co-editor of TESOL Quarterly and editor emeritus for English for Specific Purposes.

Jean Parkinson teaches Applied Linguistics and TESOL at Victoria University of Wellington in New Zealand. Her research interests are academic writing and learner acquisition of Science genres.

Diane Pecorari is Professor of English linguistics at Linnaeus University. Her research interests include English medium instruction and questions related to source use and intertextuality in academic writing. Her books include Teaching to Avoid Plagiarism (Open University Press) and, together with Maggie Charles, Introducing English for Academic Purposes (Routledge).

Mercedes Querol-Julián is a Lecturer at the Universidad Internacional de la Rioja (Spain). She is a member of the research group EDEPIG (Educación Personalizada en la Era Digital). Her research interests include multimodal analysis of academic spoken discourse and foreign language teaching.

Elina Ranta is a Researcher in the ELFA (English as a Lingua Franca in Academic settings) project. She received her PhD on universal syntactic features of English as a Lingua Franca (ELF) in 2013 from the University of Tampere. She has published on grammar and ELF, differences between ELF and SLA, and attitudes towards ELF in school contexts.

Michael P.H. Rodgers is an Assistant Professor in the School of English at the University of Nottingham. His research interests include vocabulary acquisition, language learning through viewing videos, and extensive viewing and listening. He has published in journals such as Applied Linguistics, Language Learning, and TESOL Quarterly.

Françoise Salager-Meyer was educated at the University of Lyons, France, and the University of Texas at Austin. She is the author of numerous publications on written medical discourse. She is currently coordinating the Multilingual and Multidisciplinary Research Group on Scientific Discourse Analysis (University of The Andes, Graduate School of Medicine, Mérida, Venezuela).

Betty Samraj is Associate Professor of Linguistics at San Diego State University. Her main research interests are in academic writing in different disciplines and genre analysis. She has published her research in journals such as English for Specific Purposes, Journal of English for Academic Purposes, and TEXT and TALK.

Philip Shaw is a Professor in the English Department at Stockholm University. He has published within a wide range of areas including World Englishes, and applied linguistics, particularly with a focus on academic and business English. Most recently he has been working on a project comparing advanced L2 readers with L1 readers.

Bradley A. Smith is a Research Fellow in the School of Education at Curtin University. His research interests include the study of multimodality (with a focus on sound), register configurations, and higher education learning and teaching.

Sue Starfield is Associate Professor in the School of Education and Director of The Learning Centre at UNSW Australia. She co-edits two book series with Brian Paltridge: Routledge Introductions to English for Specific Purposes and Routledge Research in English for Specific Purposes.

Fredricka L. Stoller is Professor of English at Northern Arizona University, where she teaches in the MA TESL and PhD in Applied Linguistics programmes. Her professional interests centre on second language reading, disciplinary writing, project-based learning, content-based instruction, and EAP curricula.

Neomy Storch lectures in EAP and applied linguistics in the School of Languages and Linguistics, University of Melbourne. Her research focuses on issues related to second language (L2) pedagogy, including collaborative writing, L2 writing development, and feedback on writing. She has published articles, book chapters and monographs on these issues.

John M. Swales is Professor Emeritus of Linguistics at the University of Michigan, where he was also Director of the ELI from 1985 to 2001. Although retired, he is still busy with research projects, graduate students, and textbook production.

Sabine Tan is a Research Fellow in the School of Education at Curtin University. Her research interests include critical multimodal discourse analysis, social semiotics, and visual communication. She has worked on interdisciplinary projects involving the development of multimodal analysis software for research and educational purposes.

Christine M. Tardy is an Associate Professor in the Department of English at University of Arizona, where she teaches courses in writing studies, TESOL, and applied linguistics. Her research focuses on second language writing, academic writing, genre theory and pedagogy, and policies and politics of English language instruction.

Celia Thompson lectures in English for Academic Purposes and Intercultural Communication at the University of Melbourne. Her research interests include critical pedagogies, intertextuality, authorial identity, and the use of narrative inquiry in the teaching and study of intercultural communication. Celia's work has appeared in various international scholarly journals and books.

Paul Thompson is Director of the Centre for Corpus Research at the University of Birmingham. His main areas of research interest are academic discourses and applied corpus linguistics. Since 2009, he has been a Co-Editor of the Journal of English for Academic Purposes.

Ana Traversa works as a Test Developer for Educational Testing Service (ETS), and is Assistant Professor at Mercer County College in New Jersey. She specialises in academic, business and health discourse, and has vast international experience in undergraduate and graduate English-language education. She has also recently worked on the language of healthcare across cultures, with a focus on culturally sensitive patient-education materials design and development.

Jackie Tuck is a Lecturer in Applied Linguistics at the Open University, UK. Her doctoral research, focusing on the practices of university teachers in the disciplines, forms the basis of her forthcoming book, Working at the Textface: Engaging with Student Writing in Higher Education to be published by Routledge.

Mark Warschauer is a Professor of Education and Informatics at the University of California, Irvine, and Associate Dean of UC Irvine's School of Education. His research interests include digital media and literacy. He is the founding editor of Language Learning & Technology journal and inaugural editor of AERA Open.

Stuart Webb is a Professor at Western University. His research interests include vocabulary, second language acquisition, and extensive reading and listening. His articles have been published in journals such as Studies in Second Language Acquisition, Applied Linguistics, and Language Learning. His recent book (with Paul Nation), Researching and Analyzing Vocabulary, was published by Heinle (2011).

Sara Cushing Weigle (PhD, UCLA) is Professor of Applied Linguistics at Georgia State University. She has published research in the areas of assessment, second language writing, and teacher education. Her current research focuses on assessing integrated skills and the use of automated scoring for second language writing.

Stephanie White teaches rhetoric and writing at the University of Waterloo in Ontario, Canada. She leads workshops on Writing Across the Curriculum and researches community engagement in undergraduate writing classes. She has published in The Writing Lab Newsletter and The Community Literacy Journal.

Hae Sung Yang is a doctoral student in Applied Linguistics at Georgia State University. His research interests include various approaches to teaching second language writing, multi-modal writing instruction, and English language teaching materials development.

Soobin Yim is a doctoral student in the School of Education at University of California, Irvine, specializing in language, literacy, and technology. Her research interests include computer-assisted language learning (CALL), L2 digital literacy, and English for Specific Purposes (ESP).