前 言 (Foreword)

21 世纪国际旅游业将取代石油、军火、汽车制造业等成为世界第一大产业。我国将在 21 世纪头 10 年内成为世界第一大旅游接待国和第四大旅游客源国;而在 21 世纪头 20 年内 全面建设惠及十几亿人口的更高水平的小康社会。为了迎接这一个伟大时代的到来,我国的 旅游业必须跟上时代的发展步伐,凸现民族特色,更符合国际标准。国民教育的发展,又使 旅游教育和其他学科一样,也要走学科外语教育的道路。为此,除了要积极引进国外先进的 旅游教材,还必须大力发展适合我国国情的本土化外语教材,使我们培养的旅游专业人才能 更好地了解世界,也能更好地向世界展现我国博大精深的历史文化和丰富多彩的旅游资源。与国外旅游图书、教材相比,我国旅游教育方面的出版物无论在数量和质量上也都还有较大 的差距,尤其是高校的旅游英语教材更有待系列化,并需要有时尚感。我国成功加入世界贸易组织并即将举办 2008 年奥林匹克运动会和 2010 年世界博览会等,都给旅游业带来巨大的 机遇。有鉴于此,我们在十几年旅游英语教学的基础上,通过选用国际旅游权威著作和较著 名的旅游出版物,删旧纳新、去粗取精,编写成这本《旅游英语》阅读教程,奉献给广大读者,为新世纪的旅游教育事业尽绵薄之力。

《旅游英语》的内容涉及旅游学的基础理论和旅游产业的"行、住、吃、游、购、娱"的行业服务内容,以及 21 世纪国际旅游业的一些最新成就和发展态势。本教程的体裁尽可能丰富,包括专著、评论、论文、新闻报道、商业广告等。为了确保语言的规范,绝大多数文章均选自 20 世纪末和本世纪初的英文专著和权威出版物(报刊、杂志、旅游系列丛书、导游手册),也有少量选自港、澳和大陆的权威英语出版物。

《旅游英语》作为旅游专业英语阅读教材,适合高等院校旅游专业学生使用,可供旅游专科学校的学生以及旅游爱好者选用,当然也可供旅游企业员工职后培训选用。

《旅游英语》旨在通过英语来学习专业,不刻意追求语法和语汇表达手段的分析,重视通过教学活动帮助读者掌握课文的重点和要点,并能用英语进行笔头和口头的表达。为此,每课都编排了形式多样的练习。精读课文提供书面练习,泛读课文提供口头练习。

《旅游英语》全教程有 40 课 21 个主题。每课包括精读和泛读文章各一篇。精读文章提供词汇(包括音标)、语言和文化背景注释以及四项练习;泛读文章也提供词汇注释和口头讨论练习。本教程建议教学学时为 160-240 学时(两至三学期),读者也可按具体情况选用

相关的课文和练习。书后提供的答案仅供参考,尤其是泛读课文讨论题的答案。我们鼓励读者自由发挥。总词汇表收入了精读课文所列的全部生词和重要词组,泛读课文所列的词汇一般不收入总词汇表。、

The Nature of Tourism

There is no distinct definition of tourism that is accepted universally. This is because what constitutes a 'tourist' and the 'tourism industry' is still a matter of debate. The idea of tourism as a single industry has come in for criticism. Some scholars hold that tourism cannot properly be described as an industry because it does not produce a distinct product.

Tourism includes various other trades and industries, such as the airline, rail, cruise, accommodation and food service industries. It also involves tour wholesalers, retailers and a variety of attractions, as well as a wide range of other private and public services and facilities. Some of these service inputs are very important to tourism, while others are supportive. Gilbert (1990) argues that tourism requires a range of non-industrial resources which provide an input to the tourism product. Such non-industrial resources include climate, scenery, beaches, wildlife and the culture of the host community.

Tourism is, therefore, a social and cultural phenomenon that is characterized by a mixture of different trades, organizations and activities. However, tourism can be viewed as an industry in itself. The phrase 'tourism industry' is employed in a broad sense to represent both the services and resources used by domestic and international tourists.

Tourism has become one of the world's biggest industries, and is a major component of the world economy. Already, in terms of direct and indirect employment opportunities, tourism is the largest industry in the world, and could become the largest single sector of world trade early in the 21st century. For many countries, tourism has become an important means of promoting economic development and a major source of foreign currency. The estimates for the late 1980s suggest that, world-wide, the annual expenditure on domestic and international tourism combined amounted to some US$2,000 billion (with domestic tourism accounting for about 90% of the total). This represents some 12% of world GDP, or more than twice what is spent annually on defense world-wide.

The great growth in standardized and rigidly purchased (mass) tourism since the Second World War can be attributed to a number of factors, which include increased paid leave from employment and increased disposable income in developed countries, the use of commercial jet aircraft since the 1960s, increased promotional fares, cheap oil and the entry of multi-national companies to the tourism industry. Most international tourists come from developed countries with Germany, the USA, the UK and Japan being particularly noteworthy. In terms of international tourist arrivals, Europe is the dominant host region, followed by the North Americas, East Asia and the Pacific, Africa, the Middle East and South Asia. However, international tourism is dynamic and some world regions have grown faster than others in recent decades in terms of international arrivals. Most notably, East Asia and the Pacific have increased their market share significantly, largely at the expense of the Americas, where growth has been slower. The fastest rates of growth in international tourism are often found in developed countries. The international tourist market is also dynamic in the sense that recent years have seen a growth in interest in forms of tourism which provide alternatives to mass tourism.

The Tourist and Tourist Activities

Tourists are frequently regarded as visitors (non-resident) and travelers who travel for the primary purpose of

- 1) business (e.g. consultations, conventions and inspections);
- 2) other personal business (e.g. shopping, medical or legal appointments and educational study);
- 3) visiting friends or relatives (primary activities might include socializing, dining out or home entertainment, for example); and
- 4) pleasure (e.g. sport, recreation, sightseeing, and dining out).

As long as a traveler is visiting (for less than one year) an unfamiliar community (the host community) from a place where he or she normally resides, then that person may be regarded as a tourist. A tourist may also refer to a day-visitor as well as one that visits a host community for one or more nights. The tourist trip may be international (continental or inter-continental) or domestic (regional or inter-regional). Other travelers, including commuters, crews of airlines and ships (who do not stop over and visit another community), migrants, temporary workers, military personnel, refugees and students traveling between home and their places of education, are not regarded as tourists, because their travel is very short, usually does not involve the use of tourism services and is not affected by tourism promotions. In addition,, the tourist demands one or more activities in the destination area which other travelers do not require specifically from that area. Below is a classification of the main types of activities which the tourist may demand of a destination area:

- 1) Communing with Nature: visiting open areas, such as parks and commons, rambling, walking, etc.
- 25 2) Historical heritage: visiting castles, stately homes, museums, ancient monuments, religious sites, galleries and battlefields;
  - 3) Attractions: visiting zoos, safari parks, waxworks, theme parks, etc.
  - 4) Sports activities: taking part in or watching various forms of indoor, outdoor and water sports, such as bowling, fishing, sailing, golfing, shooting,
- 30 swimming, surfboarding, motor racing, football, cricket, etc.
  - 5) Entertainment: other than sport, this may include visits to the cinema or theater, bars, concerts, discos, restaurants, etc.
    - 6) Relaxation: sunbathing, resting, reading, etc.
    - 7) Health: taking healthcare treatment, saunas, massage, therapy, etc.
- 35 8) Shopping: browsing, souvenir or antique hunting, special-purpose trips for new outfits, gifts, new high-cost equipment, etc.
  - 9) Business activities: meetings, conferences, exhibitions, etc.

Tourism as a Global Industry

David Lodge, in his novel Paradise News, proclaims tourism half seriously as the new global religion. Using guidebooks as devotional aids, millions of 'pilgrims' tour to a galaxy of holy places every year--from Disneyland to Delhi, from Cairo to coral reefs, from Harrods to the Himalayas:

Sitting on a lump of rock beside the Parthenon, watching the tourists milling about, clicking their cameras, talking to each other in different languages, it suddenly struck me: tourism is the new global religion. Catholics, Protestants, Hindus, Muslims, Buddhists, atheists—the one thing they have in common is they all believe in the importance of seeing the Parthenon. Or the Sistine Chapel, or the Eiffel Tower. (Lodge, 1992)

What Lodge parodies is, of course, mass package tourism, the extreme form of the travel phenomenon, and the 'phenomenon' is indeed, as it sweeps the world 15 with seemingly unstoppable energy, like a tsunami. The numbers and growth rates are impressive: by the mid-1990s some 500 million travelers crossed international boundaries each year. In addition, throughout the world, domestic travel was growing as a component of social and economic changes. Despite indications of slowing down, travel and tourism remained, in the 1990s, one of 20 the world's fastest growing industrial sectors, and was poised to become the world's leading industry, with six percent of global GDP and at least 13 percent of consumptive expenditure. Equally significant was the realization that, although over 60 percent of all travel still occurred between countries in North America and Europe, the highest growth rates were being recorded by newly industrialized 25. countries (NICs) and less developed countries (LDCs). It must be remembered, too, that demand for, as well as supply of, tourism opportunities is becoming truly global, illustrated vividly by the rapid growth of high-spending tourists from Japan and the NICs of South-East Asia.

One of the most important characteristics of tourism is that it is, in essence, a fashion industry. The complex two-way relationship between demand and supply is based upon the dynamics of people's perceptions, experience, attitudes and values. Participation in tourism is, therefore, subject to powerful cultural filters, which may change over time. For example, the Japanese are well-known for their strongly developed work ethics, but this is changing, both organically in the way

- 35 people think, and as an element of public policy, where the government is emphasizing the benefits of the leisure ethics. One result is the explosion in the Japanese demand for tourism experiences. For instance, succeeding the well-publicized 'sex tourism' packages to Bangkok for business executives, there is the rapidly growing Australian tour itinerary; Cairns-Barrier Reef-Ayers Rock-
- 40 Sydney, which is causing concern over its carrying capacity, impacts and quality of experience.
