You should decide on the best choice and mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Questions 21 to 25 are based on the following passage:

Fay Weldon's literary career now spans at least three media and must be one of the most prolific(多产的) in Britain. So far it adds up to eleven theatrical plays, twenty-two TV plays and seventeen novels, the most famous of which is "The Life and Loves of a She-Devil". This is the story of a betrayed wife, who instead of taking a knife to her husband has herself carved up by a plastic surgeon into a clone of her husband's "mistress".

This tale was later turned into a major Hollywood movie by Susan Seidelman, starring Meryl Streep and Roseanne Barr. Was Weldon's Hollywood sale of She-Devil dependent on having Susan Seidelman, director of Desperately Seeking Susan, as director? "Yes," she said, in an interview about the making of the film. "I could have sold it to John Huston, which gave me a choice between a more traditional Hollywood approach or having a new and different look."

Though Weldon did not write the script, she was invited to visit the New York set(布景). "They were nervous in case I rushed round the set screaming 'That's not what I wrote!' or 'Why are her shoes pink instead of green?' But I know enough not to do that. My theory is that the role of the adaptee is to rise from the grave every now and then crying 'Wonderful, wonderful.' Then to sink back again only coming out for the demonstration."

But she does have one careful doubt. "I suspect they're only filming half the book. It stops when the She-Devil has put her husband in prison, confounded (挫败) his mistress and is running a successful business." In the novel, the bad woman (i. e. the mistress) becomes good and the effort of being virtuous kills her, whereas the good woman (i. e. the wife) becomes bad, yet is saved. The film has an old-fashioned moral to it: "You can do it sister—but without the devil's assistance." Fay Weldon's habitual cynicism (愤世嫉俗) has given place to something that is "very warm to the heart".

But does Fay Weldon think there's enough material left to make a good film? A brief hesitation, then: "No. If it was me and the film came to an end halfway through the original story, it would need some other inner purpose. Narrative has to be more than mere progression and I suspect that this film will be just that. The bad mistress just gets her punishment."

21. What does the phrase "to rise from the grave" (para. 3) mean in the passage?

- A. Emerge from silence. C. Appear in the film.
B. Come out of the grave. D. Become famous.

22. What does the word "sister" in paragraph 4 mean?

- A. An older sister.
B. An elder sister.
C. A woman with whom you feel some kind of link.
D. A woman who plays the leading role in the film.

23. What was the story originally meant to be?

- A. A film. C. A TV play.
B. A book. D. A script.

24. What does the author say about the ending of the film?

- A. It was an old-fashioned style.
B. It had a new and different look.

- C. It was wonderful.
- D. It was very moral compared to the book.
25. Which of the following statements is Not True?
- D. A. The film took into account the audience's dislike of cynicism.
- B. Fay Weldon felt that the film was very different from the book.
- C. Fay Weldon felt that the film lacked some of the book's significance.
- D. Fay Weldon was very satisfied with the way the book had been changed.

Questions 26 to 30 are based on the following passage:

"And if any of us comes to feel an urging to share our great secret with friends, or speak of it to anyone, we must say to ourselves, stop, and remember that The Time Is Not Now. The time will come later. We know that when we're fully enlightened, many of us will be sent out as teachers of spiritual light all over the world, so that this planet may be freed from its darkness and confusion."

"That's right," several of the group murmured.

re-saved "Now let's go on. Here is our first instruction. PURIFY COSMIC BODIES REREJECT AND AVOID DEAD FOOD MATTER. Have you got that? I'll read it again more slowly, so you can take it down." Verena did so. "You know we've heard something about this before. We've had leadings that one thing that's holding down our progress here, making us heavy spiritually, is that our earthly bodies are full of so much disintegrating (分解的, 崩溃的) dead food matter; and every day, every breakfast, lunch and supper, we're adding to that heavy weight."

"Now we can't go without material nourishment completely yet, like our guides on Varna and other fully developed beings do. We're not progressed to anywhere near that level. But we do have to realise that some of the foods we've been taking into our bodies are automatically heavier than others; they drag us down much more. There's other things that aren't so harmful, because they contain natural life vibrations which are still emanating (发散, 放射) after they're consumed into our bodies. Now I want to go into this in more detail. "

Verena?

Questions 31 to 35 are based on the following passage:

Van Meegeren was a Dutch art dealer and a minor artist, who remained in the Netherlands throughout the Second World War and German Occupation, following his trade as best as he could. After the war, he was accused as a collaborator(合伙勾结者), the evidence being that he had sold to Goering a masterpiece by Vermeer. The picture was undoubtedly among Goering's loot(赃物) and it had certainly been sold to him or his agents by Van Meegeren, so the case looked black. The dealer, however, pleaded not guilty, and his defence caused a considerable sensation. He claimed that instead of being condemned for collaboration with the enemy he should be commended for making fools of them, for, so far from the picture being painted by Vermeer, he had painted it himself.

His claim was greeted with considerable doubt; the picture had been guaranteed by leading art experts. Van Meegeren announced that if the court would order him to be provided in his prison with painting cloths, brushes, paint and a sufficiency of north light, he would be pleased to match the customer's sample by turning out another Vermeer on the same scale and with the same apparent authenticity(真实,可靠). And this is precisely what he did.

This brings me to Van Meegeren's question which has haunted me for decades. As it happens, he did not ask the question himself, though it contained what was obviously his view; it occurred in a play about the case, at one point at which Van Meegeren is reflecting on the fact that his picture was universally accepted as genuine until he himself proved that it was a copy. I quote Van

Meegeren's question from memory, but it went something like this:

"Yesterday this picture was worth millions of guilders, and experts and art lovers would come from all over the world and pay money to see it. Today it is worth nothing, and nobody would cross the street to see it free. But the picture has not changed. What has?"

The price of a picture is determined by supply and demand, so there is no clue there; certainly people will go and see a picture that has been sold for a record sum just because of the money it fetched, but they would go and see, for the same reason, a giant uncut diamond or for that matter a very large pile of bank notes. The beauty of a picture ought not to be in the eye of the beholder but that "ought" is a fat lot of use in the face of Van Meegeren's success. If we stood in front of his Vermeer and felt profoundly affected by the majesty and power of the scene, just why would we stop feeling such things if a news boy rushed into the gallery shouting that it had just been proved a copy?

31. Which of the following statements best sums up the author's general idea in the passage?

- ☒ A. Copies are immoral.
- ☐ B. There is a strong link between copies and fashions in art.
- ☒ C. Aesthetic(美学的) judgement is subjective and unreliable.
- ☐ D. Copies are often as good as the original.

32. Which of the following sentences summarizes paragraph 4?

- ☐ A. The author tries to analyse why our judgement of a painting varies according to who we think painted it.
- ☒ B. The author tries to persuade people to sell the picture quickly.
- ☐ C. The author wants to show that experts often change their minds.
- ☐ D. People have different opinions toward the same picture.

33. What does the sentence "Goering's loot and it had certainly been sold to him or his agents by Van Meegeren, so the case looked black." (Para. 1) really mean?

A. Goering was guilty of having the painting and a case was against him.

B. The painting was in Goering's possession and a strong case was against Van Meegeren.

C. The painting was part of van Meegeren's loot, which made Goering look guilty.

D. The painting was, for sure, part of Goering's loot, which made Van Meegeren look guilty.

34. Who is Vermeer?

A. An art dealer.

B. Goering's collaborator.

C. Van Meegeren's collaborator.

D. A famous artist.

35. Which of the following statements is Not True?

A. Van Meegeren was a Dutch art dealer.

B. The passage demonstrated that the experts can be wrong.

C. Van Meegeren's good copy was universally accepted as genuine at last.

D. The author expresses his doubt about the difference in artistic value between good copy and their originals.

Questions 36 to 40 are based on the following passage:

Prices determine how resources are to be used. They are also the means by which products and services that are in limited supply are rationed among buyers. The price system of the United States is a very complex network composed of the prices of all the products bought and sold in the economy as well as those of a myriad (无数, 极大数量) of services, including labor, professions, transportation,
