Preface

Unlike other areas of taxation you may have studied, tax procedure does not involve determining the tax consequences of particular transactions and events. Instead, a tax procedure course typically focuses on the process and procedure of both (1) our “voluntary compliance” system and its enforcement, and (2) federal tax disputes, including the chronology of a tax controversy from the filing of a return by the taxpayer through tax litigation. The course may also cover related issues, such as the taxpayer’s and government’s ability to access information about the other; relief from joint and several liability for taxes; ethical issues arising in tax cases; and tax research skills.

A thorough understanding of tax procedure is not only essential for a tax controversy expert, but is also extremely helpful for any tax practitioner. After all, tax planning includes an assessment of the risks of a transaction, including contemplation of possible disputes with the Internal Revenue Service regarding the transaction, and judgment about the likely outcome of those disputes.

The technical details of tax controversy procedure are illuminated by an understanding of the law’s underlying conceptual framework. Throughout this book, we have tried both to explain the law and to put it in context, highlighting important theoretical considerations about tax controversies and current procedural rules. Strategic aspects of resolving a tax dispute are also very important. The book uses the “problem method” to promote application of the law to factual scenarios a tax practitioner might encounter, and to emphasize strategy considerations.

The Internal Revenue Service Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998 (the IRS Reform Act) made major changes to tax controversy law. More than a decade after the enactment of the IRS Reform Act, the effects of many of these changes continue to unfold, making this an exciting time to study tax procedure. We hope you enjoy the course.

Acknowledgments

This edition reflects a major overhaul of preceding editions. We appreciate the help provided by many people as we completed this edition. In particular, we would like to thank Leslie Book of Villanova Law School; Bryan Camp of Texas Tech University School of Law; William Henderson, Aviva Orenstein, and Carwina Weng of Indiana University School of Law–Bloomington; Philip N. Jones of Duffy Kekel LLP; J. Scott MacBeth and Eric S. Namee of Hinkle Elkouri Law Firm LLC; and Steve Ware of University of Kansas School of Law. For help with the graphics in Chapter 1, we are grateful to Frank Burleigh, Erin Cowles, Mark Newton, and Brian Smith. Erin Cowles and Michele Rutledge provided valuable assistance with the copyright permissions. We would also like to thank Tanner Coulter and Michala Irons of Indiana Law School, and Michael Dill and Pam Tull of Kansas Law School, for valuable research assistance on this edition. We also remain grateful to the many people who provided assistance with the previous two editions.
