Counseling Children and Adolescents

To my precious sons, Joel and Cary, who teach me every day, in the most wonderful ways, that I have much to learn. Experiencing the world along with you and loving you just as you are has made me a better mom, counselor, and person. And to all of the other children in my life who have challenged me to imagine the world from their view. These experiences have truly shaped me as a person and as a counselor, and I am forever grateful.

—Sondra Smith-Adcock

To the memory of my maternal grandmother, Elizabeth Murphy Moseley, who taught me everything I know about the power of authentic presence and listening with the heart. She spent countless hours playing with, and listening to, me. You're still my guidepost.

—Catherine Tucker

Acknowledgments

The authors gratefully acknowledge the contributions made by Naijian Zhang and Richard Parsons, series editors, to the development of this text. Thank you for the opportunity to write this text and for your guidance along the way. We also want to acknowledge the patience, professionalism, and creativity of the entire SAGE team, especially Kassie Graves, Carrie Montoya, and Bennie Clark Allen, as well as our copy editor Michelle Ponce, who worked most closely with us. Lastly, we are forever grateful to the amazing group of coauthors who helped us to achieve our goal of providing a comprehensive and rich resource for counselors who work with children and adolescents. The coauthors of the chapters in this text are our friends and colleagues, but moreover, they represent a diverse group of talented and caring practitioners and scholars who put young people at the heart of their work.
