

AUTHORITY IN THE MODERN STATE

THE
THEODORE L. GLASGOW
MEMORIAL PUBLICATION FUND

THE present volume is the first work published by the Yale University Press on the Theodore L. Glasgow Memorial Publication Fund. This Foundation was established September 17, 1918, by an anonymous gift to Yale University in memory of Flight Sub-Lieut. Theodore L. Glasgow, R. N. He was born in Montreal, Canada, May 25, 1898, the eldest son of Robert and Louise C. Glasgow, and was educated at the University of Toronto Schools and at the Royal Military College, Kingston. In August, 1916, he entered the Royal Naval Air Service and in July, 1917, went to France with the Tenth Squadron attached to the Twenty-Second Wing of the Royal Flying Corps. A month later, August 19, 1917, he was killed in action on the Ypres front.

AUTHORITY IN THE MODERN STATE

BY

HAROLD J. LASKI

SOMETIME EXHIBITIONER OF NEW COLLEGE, OXFORD: OF THE DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY IN HARVARD UNIVERSITY

NEW HAVEN

YALE UNIVERSITY PRESS

LONDON • HUMPHREY MILFORD • OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS

MDCCCCXXVII

COPYRIGHT, 1919, BY
YALE UNIVERSITY PRESS

First published, March, 1919
Second printing, November, 1919
Third printing, August, 1927

PRINTED IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

I AM tempted to believe that what we call necessary institutions are often no more than institutions to which we have grown accustomed, and that in matters of social constitution the field of possibilities is much more extensive than men living in their various societies are ready to imagine.

Recollections of de Tocqueville,
Page 101.

TO
MR. JUSTICE HOLMES AND FELIX FRANKFURTER
THE TWO YOUNGEST OF MY FRIENDS

NOTE TO THIRD PRINTING

THE argument on page 88, and, indeed, that of the whole of this chapter, should now (1927) be compared with the discussion in my Grammar of Politics (Yale University Press) where, in Chapters 2, 7, 8, 9, certain important corrections will be found. The discussion on the responsibility of the state on page 98 should be compared with my Foundations of Sovereignty (Harcourt, Brace and Company) where the views here summarised are developed in the third chapter. Apart from these things, I find little, after nine years, to change in essentials. The defect of the first chapter is its failure to discuss what is effectively meant by revolution. The curious will find that I have sought to remedy this in my little volume on Communism.

HAROLD J. LASKI.

London, July 2, 1927.

PREFACE

THIS volume is in some sort the sequel to a book on the problem of sovereignty which I published in March, 1917. It covers rather broader ground, since its main object is to insist that the problem of sovereignty is only a special case of the problem of authority, and to indicate what I should regard as the main path of approach to its solution. Where, therefore, the previous studies were, in the main, negative and critical, this book is positive and constructive. In the main, the evidence upon which its conclusions are based is French. That is because an earlier study of de Maistre convinced me that it is in France, above all, that the ideals I have tried to depict are set in the clearest and most suggestive light. I had originally intended to follow this volume by a third essay on the political theory of the Conciliar Movement. But it now seems to me more useful to attempt a definitely constructive analysis of politics in the perspective set by the first chapter of this present volume. Accordingly I have planned a full book on the theory of the state which I hope to have ready within a reasonable time.

For so modest a volume this book, like its predecessors, has debts too immense to go without acknowledgement. Among the dead, I would like to emphasise how very much I have learned from Acton and Maitland; their writings have been to me a veritable store-house of inspiration. Among living men, I owe much to Professor Duguit of Bordeaux, to Dr. Figgis, and, in spite of, and perhaps because of, our differences, to Professor Dicey. My old tutor, Mr. Ernest Barker of New College, is the unconscious sponsor of this, as of my earlier book. Indeed, if it has merit of any kind, it is to the teaching of politics in the Modern History School at Oxford that I would ascribe it.

Friends have been generous in their counsel. My colleagues, Dean Pound and Professor McIlwain, have been untiring in their constant encouragement; and from Dean Pound's own writings, soon, one may hope, to be collected in some more permanent form, I learned the value of a pragmatic theory of state-function. My friends of the New Republic, particularly Mr. Francis Hackett, and Mr. Herbert Croly, have given me generous assistance. Mr. Graham Wallas has lent me great aid by friendly and suggestive counsel; and I found his "Great Society" an invaluable guide to many difficult paths. To an unknown critic in the London Times I owe the debt that keen comment must always create.

But the great obligation of the book is to Mr. Justice Holmes. It goes too deep for words; and I can only emphasise my consciousness that I shall never know how much I have in these years learned from the talks we have had and the letters he has written. They are things that come but once or twice in a lifetime.

One more personal word the reader will perhaps allow me. I began my other book with a sense that it might give pleasure to my friend A. R. Herron. He was killed before I could finish it. This book would have gone to my friend Frank Haldinstein, scholar of Christ Church and captain in the Royal Engineers. But his name, too, has been added to the list on which the Oxford of my generation will, with undying pride, write those of Arthur Heath, of Nowell Sievers, and of A. D. Gillespie—all of them of New College. When I look back on certain magic nights at Oxford and re-read these pages in the light of their memory, I realise how halting they are compared to the things they would have said. But I take it that for them the one justification of this conflict would have been the thought that we who are left are trying in some sort to understand the problems of the state they died to make free. To have known them was an education in liberty.

Lastly, as also firstly, every page of this book has in it the help my wife has given me. But to do more than mention that is unnecessary for either of us.

HAROLD J. LASKI.

April 21, 1918.

Harvard University.

CONTENTS

CHAPTER ONE: AUTHORITY IN THE MODERN STATE

I.	The Origins of the Modern State	19
II.	State and Government	26
III.	The Nature of Obedience	32
IV.	The Limitations of Power	42
V.	The Attack on the Secular State	52
VI.	The Division of Power	69
VII.	The Organisation of Power	81
VIII.	The Significance of Freedom	89
IX.	The Direction of Events	109
X.	Conclusion	119

CHAPTER TWO: BONALD

I.	The Implication of Theocracy	123
II.	The Basis of Traditionalism	127
III.	The Political Theory of Bonald	131
IV.	The Attack on the Individual	136
V.	Implications of the Attack	143
VI.	The Religious Aspect of the State	157
VII.	Criticisms	161
VIII.	The Revival of Traditionalism	166
IX.	The Traditionalism of M. Brunetière	171
X.	The Traditionalism of M. Bourget	177
XI.	The Significance of Variety	187

CHAPTER THREE: LAMENNAIS

I.	The Problem of Lamennais	189
II.	The Church in the Napoleonic Age	191
III.	Early Ultramontaniam	199
IV.	The Glorification of Rome	205
V.	The Attack on the Secular State	217
VI.	The Transition to Liberalism	225
VII.	The Foundation of L'Avenir	232
VIII.	The Appeal to Rome	241
IX.	The Condemnation	247
X.	The Red Cap on the Cross	255

XI.	Implications	259
XII.	The Inheritance	267
XIII.	Conclusion	280
CHAPTER FOUR: ROYER-COLLARD
I.	The Significance of the Restoration	281
II.	The Theory of the Charter	287
III.	Necessary Freedoms	293
IV.	Implications	301
V.	Ethics and Politics	310
CHAPTER FIVE: ADMINISTRATIVE SYNDICALISM IN FRANCE
I	The Right of Association	321
II.	The Complaints of the Civil Service	326
III.	The Claims of the Civil Service	336
IV.	Implications	342
V.	The Attack of the Jurists	353
VI.	The Attack of the Politicians	365
VII.	The Movement Towards Reform	376
APPENDIX: NOTE ON THE BIBLIOGRAPHY OF LA-MENNAIS
INDEX		391

AUTHORITY IN THE MODERN STATE