The Authors

Dr Andrej Fatur obtained his bachelor's degree in law from the University of Ljubljana Law School in 1997, and continued his education at University of Ljubljana with postgraduate studies in civil and commercial law. During this time he spent a trimester at the University of Amsterdam as a research scholar. He obtained his M.Sc. in 2000 by defending a thesis on international antitrust law. In 2004, he obtained LL.M (cum laude) in International Trade and Business at Fordham University, New York. He was awarded PhD from King's College London; the thesis under the supervision of Professor Richard Whish dealt with subject of high-tech network industries and competition law. During his research as a PhD student he was awarded Fulbright and Chevening scholarships and was a visiting tutor at the University College London of EU competition and regulatory law on undergraduate and postgraduate level. He delivered papers on international conferences and published several academic works on EU competition law including recent book on Information and Communication Technology Network Industries and EU Competition Policy published by Hart Publishing in 2012. As for Dr Fatur's professional career, he was a judicial clerk at the Appellate Court of Ljubljana from 1997 to 1998 and in 2005 a Dean Acheson stagier in the Cabinet of Judge Borg Barthet at the Court of Justice of the EU. He worked as a senior associate at a commercial law firm in Ljubljana from 1998 until 2005. In 2009 he served as a legal counsel at the Bank of Slovenia, which he left to establish his own law firm in early 2010 where he is now a principal attorney practising competition and corporate law. In 2012, he was appointed a member of the Supervisory Board of the second largest Slovenian bank, NKBM. He is a member of the Slovenian Bar since 2001 and of the New York bar since 2004. Beside Slovenian, the author speaks English, Croatian, and Serbian, additionally he has working knowledge of French.

Dr Andrej Fatur is the author of the following chapters of the present monograph: Part I, Chapters 1, 2, 3 and 4; and Part II, Chapter 2. The work was done with valuable research assistance by Fatur Law Firm colleagues, Helena Belina Djalil, Katja Peček and Julija Popovič.

The Authors

Professor Klemen Podobnik obtained his bachelor's degree in law from the University of Ljubljana, Faculty of Law in 1994. After several short-term research and education oriented visits (University of Amsterdam School of Law, Kingston University Law School) he continued his education at Columbia Law School in New York, where he obtained his LL.M. degree in 2000. He then returned to his alma mater University of Ljubljana, where he defended his doctoral thesis on issues of democratic efficiency as main goals of modern competition law and policy with honours in 2002 and was awarded the title of Doctor of Laws. He began his academic career in 1996 when he joined the Faculty of Law of the University of Ljubljana as junior researcher. He was awarded tenure as university docent in 2004 and started a multifaceted teaching career, dealing with such diverse courses as Competition Law, European Law, Corporate Law, Intellectual Property Law, International Trade Law, Transport Law and Media Law. His main research agenda, however, remained firmly focused in the field of antitrust. As of 2015, he is a university professor of civil and commercial law. He has co-authored the Commentary on Slovenian Prevention of the Restriction of Competition Act in 2009 and has become a fixture on the lecturing circle in the field of competition law in Slovenia. He has also proven himself internationally, drafting and coordinating projects such as the European Commission training action Education and Training of National Judges in the Field of EU Competition Law organized by the Institute for Comparative Law at the Ljubljana Law School where Dr Podobnik has been active as a researcher since 2004. He chaired the European Competition and Consumer Day plenary session in 2008. As an out-house expert, he was intensely involved with legislative procedures in the fields of competition law, cooperating closely with the Office for protection of competition of Slovenia, he co-authored and co-led a long-term research project on competition and competitiveness for the Ministry of Finance of Slovenia, authored a seminal expert opinion and programme for modernization and reform of Slovene competition legislation in 2006. He closely cooperated with the Austrian Academy of Sciences as a member of the research team on the project titled The Implementation and Application of EC Competition Rules in Austria, Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland and Slovenia. He has also served as out-house competition law expert to major companies in Slovenia (Mobitel, Pošta Slovenije, Interbrew, Petrol, Europlakat, Telekom Slovenije) and served as President of the Expert Council of the Consumer Protection Office of Slovenia from 2004 until 2011. Beside Slovenian, the author speaks English, French, Croatian, and Serbian, additionally he has working knowledge of German.

Professor Klemen Podobnik is the author of the following chapters of the present monograph: Part I, Chapters 3 and 4; Part II, Chapters 1 and 3; and Part III, Chapters 2 and 3.

Doc. Dr Ana Vlahek obtained her bachelor's degree in law from the University of Ljubljana, Faculty of Law, in 2003 defending with honours her thesis on the reform of EC competition law. She continued her education at University of Ljubljana with postgraduate studies in civil and commercial law including short-term research and education visits to Cambridge, Cologne and Salzburg. In 2005, she was also an intern at UNCITRAL in Vienna. She obtained her PhD in 2009 by defending a thesis on derivative transfer of movables in the European legal environment. Since 2003 she has been employed at the University of Ljubljana Law School, first as teaching assistant, and subsequently as university docent of civil and commercial law, and university docent of European law. She has published several academic articles and has delivered papers at national and international conferences, her major interests being European law, competition law, property law and contracts. Within competition law, she is specialized in antitrust private enforcement. She is a co-author of the Commentary on Slovenian Prevention of the Restriction of Competition Act and has been involved in its travaux preparatoires. She has been dealing with competition law as a lecturer of competition law at graduate and postgraduate studies at the Faculty of Law of the University of Ljubljana, as well as within several projects, such as projects within the European Commission training action Education and Training of National Judges in the Field of EU Competition Law that have been organized by the Institute for Comparative Law at the Faculty of Law in Ljubljana where Doc. Dr Vlahek has been employed as a researcher since 2008. She was also a member of the Austrian Academy of Sciences' research team performing the European Commission project titled The Implementation and Application of EC Competition Rules in Austria, Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland and Slovenia. Beside Slovenian, the author speaks English, German, Croatian, and Serbian, additionally she has working knowledge of French.

Doc. Dr Ana Vlahek is the author of the following chapters of the present monograph: General Introduction; Part I, Chapter 5; and Part III, Chapters 1 and 4.
