

Third Edition

The only series to be approved by the BRITISH
PSYCHOLOGICAL SOCIETY

An Introduction to DEVELOPMENTAL PSYCHOLOGY

Edited by Alan Slater and Gavin Bremner

The British
Psychological Society

BPS TEXTBOOKS

WILEY

320702

An Introduction to Developmental Psychology

THIRD EDITION

EDITED BY ALAN SLATER AND GAVIN BREMNER

The British
Psychological Society

WILEY

This third edition first published 2017 by the British Psychological Society and John Wiley & Sons Ltd

© 2017 John Wiley & Sons Ltd

Edition history: Blackwell Publishing Ltd (1e, 2003); The British Psychological Society and Blackwell Publishing Ltd (2e, 2011)

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, except as permitted by law. Advice on how to obtain permission to reuse material from this title is available at <http://www.wiley.com/go/permissions>.

The right of Alan Slater and Gavin Bremner to be identified as the authors of the editorial material in this work has been asserted in accordance with law.

Registered Offices

John Wiley & Sons, Inc., 111 River Street, Hoboken, NJ 07030, USA

John Wiley & Sons Ltd, The Atrium, Southern Gate, Chichester, West Sussex, PO19 8SQ, UK

Editorial Office

The Atrium, Southern Gate, Chichester, West Sussex, PO19 8SQ, UK

For details of our global editorial offices, customer services, and more information about Wiley products visit us at www.wiley.com.

Wiley also publishes its books in a variety of electronic formats and by print-on-demand. Some content that appears in standard print versions of this book may not be available in other formats.

Limit of Liability/Disclaimer of Warranty

While the publisher and authors have used their best efforts in preparing this book, they make no representations or warranties with respect to the accuracy or completeness of the contents of this book and specifically disclaim any implied warranties of merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose. No warranty may be created or extended by sales representatives or written sales materials. The advice and strategies contained herein may not be suitable for your situation. You should consult with a professional where appropriate. Neither the publisher nor authors shall be liable for any loss of profit or any other commercial damages, including but not limited to special, incidental, consequential, or other damages.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data is available for this title

ISBN 978-1-118-76720-7 (paperback)

Cover image: Silhouettes of children playing near a water. Hibrida/Shutterstock.com

Set in 11/12.5pt Dante MT by Aptara Inc., New Delhi, India

Printed and bound in Singapore by Markono Print Media Pte Ltd

I 2017

The British Psychological Society's free Research Digest email service rounds up the latest research and relates it to your syllabus in a user-friendly way. To subscribe go to www.researchdigest.org.uk or send a blank e-mail to subscribe-rd@lists.bps.org.uk.

An Introduction to Developmental Psychology

Third Edition

BPS Textbooks in Psychology

BPS Wiley presents a comprehensive and authoritative series covering everything a student needs in order to complete an undergraduate degree in psychology. Refreshingly written to consider more than North American research, this series is the first to give a truly international perspective. Written by the very best names in the field, the series offers an extensive range of titles from introductory level through to final year optional modules, and every text fully complies with the BPS syllabus in the topic. No other series bears the BPS seal of approval!

Many of the books are supported by a companion website, featuring additional resource materials for both instructors and students, designed to encourage critical thinking, and providing for all your course lecturing and testing needs.

For other titles in this series, please go to <http://psychsource.bps.org.uk>.

Contributors

Nicolás Alessandroni, CONICET – Universidad Nacional de La Plata, Argentina

Gizelle Anzures, Florida Atlantic University, USA

Robert Atkins, Rutgers University, USA

Cagla Aydin, Cornell University, USA

Julia Benassi, Universidad Nacional del Litoral, Santa Fe, Argentina

J. Gavin Bremner, Lancaster University, UK

Peter Bryant, Oxford University, UK

William M. Bukowski, Concordia University, Canada

Stephen J. Ceci, Cornell University, USA

Nadia Chernyak, Boston University, USA

Alyson Davis, Open University, UK

Margaret Anne Defeyter, Northumbria University, UK

Kirsty Dunn, Lancaster University, UK

Julian (Joe) Elliott, Durham University, UK

Luisa Estrada, Universidad Autónoma de Madrid, Spain

William P. Fifer, New York State Psychiatric Institute, USA; Departments of Psychiatry and Pediatrics, Columbia University, USA

Stanka A. Fitneva, Cornell University, USA

Eirini Flouri, Institute of Education, University of London, UK

Alejo Freire, Children's Mental Health, Ontario, Canada

Neeta Goel, International Initiative for Impact Evaluation, India

Leslie Morrison Gutman, Institute of Education, University of London, UK

Daniel Hart, Rutgers University, USA

Heather M. Hill, St Mary's University, Texas, USA

Ian Hocking, University of Christchurch Canterbury, UK

Scott P. Johnson, UCLA, USA

Stan A. Kuczaj II, Formerly of University of Southern Mississippi, USA

Wendy Lawrenson, Devon, UK (deceased)

Kang Lee, University of Toronto, Canada

Elizabeth Meins, University of York, UK

Peter Mitchell, University of Nottingham, UK

Christine Moon, Pacific Lutheran University, Washington, USA

Darwin Muir, Queen's University, Canada

Sarah H. Norgate, Salford University, UK

Cintia Rodríguez, Universidad Autónoma de Madrid, Spain

Alan Slater, University of Exeter, UK

Peter K. Smith, Goldsmiths College, University of London, UK

Diana S.Y. Tham, Lancaster University, UK

Naomi Winstone, University of Surrey, UK

Tirza H.J. Van Noorden, Radboud University Nijmegen, The Netherlands

Preface to Third Edition

Our aim in producing the third edition of this textbook is to offer a representative, comprehensive, and completely up-to-date 'state of the art' account of human development from conception to adolescence. We appreciated that this needed to be an edited book rather than one written by the two editors, since one can be an expert in one or two fields of study, but not all! By making it an edited book that fulfilled our aims of a comprehensive textbook we first decided the areas that needed covering, specified in detail the topics for each chapter, and then invited some of the world's leading experts to write the chapters. Our invitations were received with enthusiasm, and we have been extremely gratified at the ways in which our authors have responded to our suggestions. The dangers of uneven writing levels, and possible lack of integration of the chapters was dealt with in two ways. First, we gave clear and extensive instructions to our authors as to content and style, and of course carefully edited the chapters. Second, the editorial and production staff at Wiley reviewed each chapter carefully to ensure that the book reads well and coherently as a whole, and is well and appropriately illustrated.

The book is organised chronologically and also thematically, into five parts, each concerned with different aspects of development and each containing three or more chapters. For the third edition our authors have updated their chapters from the second edition, and we have added new chapters where appropriate. Here are brief comments on each part.

Part I: Introduction

In order to put child development into its modern context the student needs to be aware of the many ways that have been developed to explore development, and the theories that have developed from, and have guided this research. These are described in Chapters 1 and 2. One major topic that pervades almost all areas of development is the nature–nurture issue – to what extent do our genetic inheritance and our experiences across the life span influence and determine our development? This topic is explored in detail in Chapter 3.

Part II: Infancy

The Latin term 'infans' can be literally translated as 'the period without speech'. It is the advancement of the infant during this period, which we know as infancy, that is the starting point of child development, and the four chapters in Part II chart the course of this development. Although birth might seem to be the starting point of infant development, it is becoming increasingly recognised that developments prior to birth have considerable psychological implications. In Chapter 4 we have an account of biological and psychological development from conception to birth. In order to act upon the world infants have to have functioning sensory systems, have to acquire knowledge of the people and objects in their world, and they have to convert this growing knowledge into action. The story of how this development takes place is given in Chapter 5. Infant development takes place at many levels and in many contexts. Chapter 6 begins the story of the infant's development into a social world and considers the development of emotions, with a particular emphasis on the formation of attachments with others. The theme of social development is continued in Chapter 7 with an account of how the infant's early exchanges with others gradually turn into effective communication.

Part III: Childhood

As the period of infancy draws to a close, around 18 months from birth, the early competencies continue to develop and many new aspects of development begin to make their appearance. These many developments are charted in Part III, which covers social and cognitive development. Chapter 8 continues the themes covered in Chapter 7 and explores the developing child's awareness of self and of gender. According to 'the giant of developmental psychology', Jean Piaget, a new stage of thinking emerges around 7 years of age. The preceding cognitive abilities that lead to these changes, the changes themselves, and alternative accounts of them, are given in Chapter 9. Language development, probably a uniquely human accomplishment, is the focus of Chapter 10, and Chapter 11 describes how it is that children learn that others have thoughts, ideas, feelings and beliefs that are often different from their own – that is, they develop a 'theory of mind'. In Western education it is vital that children learn to read and write and develop an understanding of mathematics. How they do so, and the complexities of the tasks facing the child, is the focus of Chapter 12. A vital cognitive ability, one that underlies all development, is our memory. Memory development is discussed in Chapter 13, along with its social implications – in particular, how reliable is memory, how truthful are children, how suggestible are they, and do they make reliable eye witnesses? Development takes place within the social network that surrounds the child, and as childhood progresses beyond infancy peer groups and peer relations become of great importance. This theme is explored in Chapter 14, which considers the topic of play and how it develops in the context of peer relations. Chapter 15 continues the theme of social interactions and asks how development of prosocial and antisocial behaviour takes place, and how the child's understanding of moral issues and concerns develops.

Part IV: Adolescence

The two chapters in Part IV give an account and overview of the major cognitive and social changes that take place in adolescence. In Chapter 16 the authors describe developments in perception and attention, memory, intelligence and reasoning. Piaget presented evidence that a major change in thinking develops in adolescence, known as formal operational reasoning. The authors describe and evaluate Piaget's account, and go beyond his theory to give alternative accounts of adolescent reasoning and thinking. Adolescence is often thought of as a period of turmoil as the individual copes with raging hormones and the changes that accompany the transition from child to adult. The many aspects of social development that accompany adolescence are considered in Chapter 17, including such themes as storm and stress, the role of the family and of peer groups, developing independence, and romantic relationships.

Part V: Practical issues

There are, of course, many practical issues that accompany child development, and three of these important issues are considered here. Chapter 18 discusses the educational implications of what we have learned about children's development. Two major theoreticians whose work has had a major impact on educational thinking – Jean Piaget and Lev Vygotsky – are discussed in detail, and many other issues which include peers, educational practice and the role of the parents. Although it is our hope that children will grow up in a happy, supportive environment, this is not always the case. Chapter 19 demonstrates how vital it is to develop an understanding of the effects different adverse experiences may have on children's development, but also to understand the other side of the coin, children's resilience in the face of these adverse events. One of the major social problems that can dramatically affect children's school experiences is that of bullying. It is, sadly, all too common for children who are bullied to experience great misery, and we have long been aware that programmes are necessary in order to reduce the effects of bullying. Chapter 20 describes bullies and their victims, and outlines effective school-based intervention programmes that can help to overcome some of the problems. Many of the chapters in this book focus exclusively on 'normally developing' children, that is, those who are following a typical pattern of development. However, much can be learned by studying the development of children whose development is atypical. Chapter 21 considers different senses in which development can be thought of as being atypical, contrasting cases of delayed or accelerated development with cases in which development is qualitatively different or deficient in specific areas. It then goes on to review evidence regarding development of individuals with Williams syndrome, Down's syndrome, autism and ADHD, and also children with sensory deficits. Such studies are particularly important on two counts – their outcomes impact on practice and intervention with children with disabilities, and have implications for our understanding of development in general.

Pedagogical features and dedicated website

The book comes with a range of pedagogical features that contribute to the students' learning experience. Each chapter begins with an overview and the key concepts that are highlighted in the text. The chapters end with discussion points that focus on the important issues that have been raised, and with suggestions for further reading for those who wish to expand and develop their knowledge of the area. The book has a dedicated website that contains among other things: brief details of all authors and co-authors; all figures and tables, which can be downloaded for PowerPoint presentations. For instructors who adopt the text there is password-protected access to 420 multiple-choice questions – 20 for each chapter – and for students a sample of 10 multiple-choice questions for each chapter is given in the website.

Overview

In summary, Introduction to Developmental Psychology, Third Edition has been written by a group of internationally known and respected authors who are at the forefront of research, and they give an unrivalled high level of expertise and insight across all topics. The result is an outstanding and authoritative ‘state of the art’ chronicle of human development from conception to adolescence, which gives a stimulating account of theories, findings, and issues in this fascinating area. The text is designed for a broad range of readers, and in particular those with little prior exposure to psychology. The comprehensive coverage and emphasis on core topics in human development make it an excellent text for introductory students. We owe enormous thanks to our authors, and to Wiley.

Alan Slater and Gavin Bremner

Brief Contents

List of Contributors	xxi
Preface to Third Edition	xxiii
PART I INTRODUCTION	1
1 The Scope and Methods of Developmental Psychology Alan Slater, Scott P. Johnson and Darwin Muir	3
2 Theories and Issues in Child Development Scott P. Johnson, Alan Slater and Ian Hocking	41
3 The Nature–Nurture Debate Alan Slater	79
PART II INFANCY	107
4 Prenatal Development Christine Moon and William P. Fifer	109
5 Perception, Knowledge and Action in Infancy J. Gavin Bremner, Kirsty Dunn and Diana S.Y. Tham	143
6 Emotional Development and Attachment Relationships Elizabeth Meins	183
7 Early Social Interactions with People and Objects Cintia Rodriguez, Julia Benassi, Luisa Estrada, and Nicolás Alessandroni	213
8 The Development of Self and Gender Wendy Lawrenson	259
PART III CHILDHOOD	303
9 Cognitive Development Margaret Anne Defeyter	305
10 The Development of Language Heather M. Hill and Stan A. Kuczaj II	341
11 Acquiring a Theory of Mind Peter Mitchell	381
12 Reading and Mathematics in Developmental Psychology Peter Bryant	407

13	Memory Development and Eyewitness Testimony Stephen J. Ceci, Stanka A. Fitneva, Cagla Aydin and Nadia Chernyak	439
14	Play and the Beginnings of Peer Relationships Peter K. Smith	477
15	Prosocial Tendencies, Antisocial Behaviour and Moral Development in Childhood Daniel Hart, Neeta Goel and Robert Atkins	511
PART IV ADOLESCENCE		541
16	Cognitive Development in Adolescence Kang Lee, Gizelle Anzures and Alejo Freire	543
17	Social Development Tirza H.J. Van Noorden and William M. Bukowski	577
PART V PRACTICAL ISSUES		611
18	Educational Implications Alyson Davis and Naomi Winstone	613
19	Risk and Resilience in Development Leslie Morrison Gutman and Eirini Flouri	645
20	Social Problems in Schools Peter K. Smith and Julian Elliott	683
21	Atypical Development Sarah Norgate	715
Glossary		751
Names Index		785
Subject Index		805

Contents

List of Contributors Preface to Third Edition

xxi
xxiii

PART I INTRODUCTION

1

1	The Scope and Methods of Developmental Psychology	3
	Alan Slater, Scott P. Johnson and Darwin Muir
	Introduction	5
	Studying Changes with Age	6
	Concepts of Human Development	6
	'Folk' theories of development: Punishment or praise?	6
	Defining development according to world views	8
	Ways of Studying Development	10
	Designs for studying age-related changes	10
	Research methods	15
	Beyond Common Sense: The Importance of Research Evidence	29
	Social policy implications of child
	development research	31
	Developmental Functions: Growing and Changing	32
	Continuous function (a) – increasing ability	32
	Continuous function (b) – decreasing ability	33
	Discontinuous (step) function	34
	U-shaped functions	35
	Comparing developmental functions	36
	Summary and Conclusions	37
	Discussion Points	38
	Suggestions for Further Reading	38
	References	39
2	Theories and Issues in Child Development	41
	Scott P. Johnson, Alan Slater and Ian Hocking
	Introduction	44
	Motor Development	44
	Maturation theories	45
	Dynamic systems theory	47
	Cognitive Development	50
	Piaget's theory of development	50
	Developmental psychology before Piaget	51
	Fundamental aspects of human development,
	according to Piaget	51
	The four stages of cognitive development	52

Information Processing Approaches	54
Cognitive development in infancy	55
Cognitive development in childhood	56
Connectionism and brain development	57
Summary	58
Comparing information-processing approaches with Piaget's approach	58
Social-Cognitive Development	59
Vygotsky	59
Behaviourism and social learning theory	59
Ethology and Evolution	62
Evolution	62
The ethological approach	63
Emotional Development	64
Attachment theory – John Bowlby and Mary Ainsworth	64
Psychoanalytic Theories	66
Sigmund Freud – The founder of psychoanalysis	66
The five psychosexual stages	66
Problems with Freudian theory	67
Psychoanalysis, then and now: An overview	68
Modern psychoanalysts – Anna Freud and Erik Erikson	69
Humanistic Theory – Abraham Maslow	69
Abraham Maslow's hierarchy of needs	69
Putting It all Together – Different Theories for Different Needs	70
Gender development	71
Issues in Child Development	73
The nature–nurture issue	73
Stability versus change	73
Continuity versus discontinuity	74
Summary and Conclusions	74
Discussion Points	74
Suggestions for Further Reading	75
References	75
3 The Nature–Nurture Debate	79
Alan Slater
Introduction	81
Precocial and altricial species	82
Nativism and empiricism	83
Cognitive Development	83
The start of it all: The first intelligence test	84
What is intelligence – one ability or several?	85
Intelligence test items	86
Controversies and issues in intelligence	87
Heritability	88
Heritability estimates	88
Genetic Contributions to Cognitive Growth	89
Familial resemblance	89
Missing heritability	91
Gene × environment interaction (G×E)	91

Environmental Influences on Cognitive Development	92
Adoption studies	92
The Flynn effect	98
Compensatory Education	98
Poverty and malnutrition	98
Head Start and Sure Start	99
Summary and Conclusions	101
Discussion Points	102
Suggestions for Further Reading	102
References	103

PART II INFANCY 107

4 Prenatal Development 109

Christine Moon and William P. Fifer
Introduction	112
The Brain, the Spinal Cord and the Emergence of Mind	113
Processes and sequencing of brain development	113
Development of the cerebral cortex	114
Behavioural organisation	115
Sensations	118
Touch	118
The chemosensory system	118
The vestibular system	120
The visual system	121
The auditory system	124
Prenatal and Transnatal Auditory Learning	127
Learning about mother's voice and language	128
Summary	129
Risks to Foetal Development	129
Effects of exposure to psychoactive substances	130
Nutrition and foetal development	131
Effects of maternal stress	132
Prenatal Development of Postnatal Functions: The Bridge to Infancy	133
Summary and Conclusions	133
Discussion Points	134
Suggestions for Further Reading	135
References	135

5 Perception, Knowledge and Action in Infancy 143

J. Gavin Bremner, Kirsty Dunn and Diana S.Y. Tham
Introduction	145
Visual Perception from Birth to Six Months	146
Early limitations of vision: Are they really a problem?	146
How can we investigate infant perception?	147
Shape perception in newborns	148
Newborns perceive a three-dimensional world	150
Perceptual development in the first six months	150
Summary	153

Infants' Perception of People	153
Face perception	154
Discriminating between faces	155
Preference for attractive faces	156
Perceptual narrowing and face processing specialisation	157
Imitation	158
Voice perception	159
Voice and speech discrimination	160
Summary	161
Infants' Knowledge of the World	161
Jean Piaget and the development of object permanence	162
Later Work on Infant Cognition	163
The violation of expectation technique	163
Evidence of object knowledge: The 'drawbridge study' and others	163
Young infants reason about the number of objects in an event	166
Young infants discriminate different numbers of items	167
Summary	169
Object Search Revisited	169
Search failure is not due to lack of motor skill	169
Seeking an explanation of the A not B error	170
Summary and Conclusions	174
Early knowledge	174
Early knowledge does not guide action	174
Remodelling Piaget's account	175
Discussion Points	175
Suggestions for Further Reading	176
References	176
6 Emotional Development and Attachment Relationships	183
Elizabeth Meins
Introduction	185
Emotional Development	186
Expressing and recognising emotional expressions	186
Infant discrimination of facial expressions	188
Emotion understanding	191
Emotion understanding tasks	192
Emotion regulation	196
Attachment Relationships	197
Bowlby's theory of attachment	197
Mary Ainsworth and the strange situation procedure	199
Internal working models and the Adult Attachment Interview	204
Longitudinal stability in attachment security	205
Summary and Conclusions	206
Emotional competence in infancy	206
Later emotional competence	207
Attachment theory	207
Discussion Points	207
Suggestions for Further Reading	208
References	208