The Ant and the Dove

One day an ant went down to the river bank to get a drink of water.

Suddenly the ant was swept away by the current of the river, and was just about to drown!

A colorful illustration of a white dove with pink-tinted wings flying over a blue river. The dove is carrying a large green leaf in its beak. A small black ant is clinging to the underside of the leaf, looking up at the dove. The background features a green hillside with a pink butterfly and a tree branch with green leaves in the top left corner.

A dove was sitting on a tree by the bank of the river. She saw this and sent a leaf falling down into the water.

The ant climbed aboard the leaf and was carried safely to the shore.

Shortly after this a bird hunter came by with some twigs to try and trap the dove.

Upon seeing this, the ant went up to the man as he stood under the tree and bit him on the foot!

A small, brown tree stump is located on the left side of a green, rolling hill. The hill is covered in grass and small white flowers. In the background, there are more green hills and a small red flower with white petals.

This hurt so much that the man dropped the twigs, making a loud sound that tipped off the dove. The dove flew away, thus avoiding capture.
