Introduction for the Teacher

The ten Workbooks of You Too Can Speak English series contain a wide variety of writing exercises and dictation quizzes designed to reinforce the oral work done with the basic text and recorded materials. They are also meant to provide a welcome change of pace and activity in the class period.

The lessons of the Workbooks exactly parallel those of the basic texts and are fully integrated with them. Just as in the textbooks, every 5th and 10th lesson is designed for review and has a different format. The general layout for each workbook is the following:

Lessons 1-4 and 6-9

Exercise 1: a dictation quiz to be given in class and corrected on the spot. Exercises 2 & 3: writing exercises to be given as homework and corrected in the following class.

Lessons 5 and 10

Exercises 1—4: dictation quizzes meant to test mastery of the new patterns introduced in the four previous text lessons. These are given in class and corrected on the spot.

Exercise 5: a homework exercise to be corrected in the following class.

The pages in the students' workbooks are perforated so that homework can be conveniently handed in. However, correction done orally or on the blackboard is quicker and easier, and students can benefit much more from this kind of self-correction.

EXERCISE • 2 HOMEWORK: PARAGRAPH WRITING

a) Study this passage and then do the exercises that follow.

Practicing English

Liu Li is Chinese and she goes to junior high school. She's a third year student. She's studying English and she likes it very much. She takes the train to school every day and she always studies her conversation book on the way.

When the train stops at a station, Miss Liu looks at the platform carefully. She is looking for foreigners. When a foreigner gets on the train, she always goes to him and practices her English.

She can't have very long conversations because she can only speak a little. But it's a good way to practice what she knows, and maybe learn something new, too.

| | Is Liu Li a junior high school student? |
|---|--|
