

SECURITY EXPERTISE

PRACTICE, POWER, RESPONSIBILITY

Edited by Trine Villumsen Berling and
Christian Bueger

NEW SECURITY STUDIES

Security Expertise

Practice, power, responsibility

Edited by Trine Villumsen Berling and Christian Bueger

First published 2015
by Routledge
2 Park Square, Milton Park, Abingdon, Oxon OX14 4RN
and by Routledge
711 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017

Routledge is an imprint of the Taylor & Francis Group, an informa business

© 2015 selection and editorial material, Trine Villumsen Berling and Christian Bueger; individual chapters, the contributors

The rights of the editors to be identified as the authors of the editorial material, and of the authors for their individual chapters, has been asserted in accordance with sections 77 and 78 of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reprinted or reproduced or utilised in any form or by any electronic, mechanical, or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publishers.

Trademark notice: Product or corporate names may be trademarks or registered trademarks, and are used only for identification and explanation without intent to infringe.

British Library Cataloguing-in-Publication Data

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Security expertise : practice, power, responsibility / edited by Trine Villumsen Berling and Christian Bueger.

pages cm

Includes bibliographical references and index.

1. Internal security. 2. National security. I. Berling, Trine Villumsen.

HV6419.S44 2015

355'.033—dc23

2014040815

ISBN: 978-1-138-81911-5 (hbk)

ISBN: 978-1-315-74479-7 (ebk)

Typeset in Baskerville
by HWA Text and Data Management, London

Printed and bound in Great Britain by TJ International Ltd, Padstow, Cornwall

Security Expertise

This volume brings together scholars from different fields to explore the power, consequences and everyday practices of security expertise.

Expertise mediates between different forms of knowledge: scientific and technological, legal, economic and political knowledge. This book offers the first systematic study of security expertise and opens up a productive dialogue between science and technology studies and security studies to investigate the character and consequences of this expertise. In security theory, the study of expertise is crucial to understanding whose knowledge informs security-making and to reflect on the impact and responsibility of security analysis. In science and technology studies, the study of security politics adds a challenging new case to the agenda of research on expertise and policy. The contributors investigate cases such as academic security studies, security think tanks, the collaboration between science, anthropology and the military, transnational terrorism and the ethical consequences of security expertise. Together they challenge our understanding of how expertise works and what consequences it has for security politics and international relations.

This book will be of particular interest to students of critical security studies, sociology, science and technology studies, and IR/security studies in general.

Trine Villumsen Berling is a Post-Doctoral Researcher at the Centre for Advanced Security Theory (CAST), University of Copenhagen, Denmark, and author of The International Political Sociology of Security (Routledge 2015).

Christian Bueger is Reader in international relations at Cardiff University, UK and co-author of International Practice Theory: New Perspectives (2014, with Frank Gadinger).

PRIO New Security Studies

Series Editor: J. Peter Burgess, PRIO, Oslo

The aim of this book series is to gather state-of-the-art theoretical reflexion and empirical research into a core set of volumes that respond vigorously and dynamically to the new challenges to security scholarship.

The Geopolitics of American Insecurity

Terror, power and foreign policy

Edited by François Debrix and Mark J. Lacy

Security, Risk and the Biometric State

Governing borders and bodies

Benjamin J. Muller

Security and Global Governmentality

Globalization, governance and the state

Edited by Miguel de Larrinaga and

Marc G. Doucet

Critical Perspectives on Human Security

Rethinking emancipation and power in international relations

Edited by David Chandler and Nik Hynes

Securitization Theory

How security problems emerge and dissolve

Edited by Thierry Balzacq

Feminist Security Studies

A narrative approach

Annick T. R. Wibben

The Ethical Subject of Security

Geopolitical reason and the threat against Europe

J. Peter Burgess

Politics of Catastrophe

Genealogies of the unknown

Claudia Aradau and Rens van Munster

Security, the Environment and Emancipation

Contestation over environmental change

Matt McDonald

Securitization, Accountability and Risk Management

Transforming the public security domain

Edited by Karin Svedberg Helgesson and

Ulrika Mörth

Commercialising Security

Political consequences for European military operations

Edited by Anna Leander

Transnational Companies and Security Governance

Hybrid practices in a postcolonial world

Jana Hönke

Citizenship and Security

The constitution of political being

Edited by Xavier Guillaume and Jef Huysmans

Security, Emancipation and the Politics of Health

A new theoretical perspective

João Nunes

Security, Technology and Global Politics

Thinking with Virilio

Mark Lacy

Critical Security and Chinese Politics

The Anti-Falungong Campaign

Juha A. Vuori

Governing Borders and Security

The politics of connectivity and dispersal

Edited by Catarina Kinnvall and Ted Svensson

Contesting Security

Strategies and logics

Edited by Thierry Balzacq

Conflict Resolution and Ontological Security

Peace anxieties

Edited by Bahar Rumelili

Biopolitics of Security

A political analytic of finitude

Michael Dillon

Security Expertise

Practice, power, responsibility

Edited by Trine Villumsen Berling and

Christian Bueger

Notes on contributors

Trine Villumsen Berling is a Post-Doctoral Researcher at CAST, University of Copenhagen, Denmark, and currently a visiting scholar at the NATO Defense College in Rome, Italy. Her research interests include the sociology of expert knowledge and the theory/practice relationship. Publications include The International Political Sociology of Security: Rethinking Theory and Practice (Routledge, 2015), 'Practical reflexivity and political science: Strategies for relating scholarship and political practice' (2013, with Christian Bueger), Political Science and Politics, 46(1): 115–19, 'Beyond the gap: Relevance, fields of practice and the securitizing consequences of (democratic peace) research' (2007, with Christian Bueger), Journal of International Relations and Development, 10(4): 417–48, and 'Science and securitization: Mobilization of scientific facts, the authority of the speaker, and objectivation' (2011), Security Dialogue, 42: 5–6.

Christian Bueger is Reader in international relations in the Department of Politics and International Relations, Cardiff University, Wales. His research interests include contemporary piracy, international security and peacebuilding, theories of practice, and the sociology of (social) science. He is currently working on an ESRC-funded project titled 'Counter-piracy governance: a praxiographic analysis' [ES/K008358/1]. Major publications include International Practice Theory. New Perspectives (2014, with Frank Gadinger), Palgrave Macmillan, 'Making things known: Epistemic practice, the United Nations and the translation of piracy' (forthcoming, 2015), International Political Sociology, doi.10.1111/ips.12073, 'Pathways to practice: praxiography and international politics' (2014), European Political Science Review, 6(3), 383–406, 2014, 'Reassembling and dissecting: International relations practice from a science studies perspective' (2007, with Frank Gadinger), International Studies Perspectives, 8(1): 90–100, and 'Beyond the gap: Relevance, fields of practice and the securitizing consequences of (democratic peace) research' (2007, with Trine Villumsen), Journal of International Relations and Development, 10(4): 417–18. Further information is available at <http://bueger.info>.

Robert Evans is Reader in the School of Social Sciences, Cardiff University, Wales. Research interests include the nature of expertise and its use in policy decisions.

Publications include 'The imitation game as method for exploring knowledge(s) of chronic illness' (2013, with Helen Crocker) Methodological Innovations Online, 8(1): 34–52, Rethinking Expertise (2007, with Harry Collins), University of Chicago Press, 'The third wave of science studies: Studies of expertise and experience' (2002, with Harry Collins), Social Studies of Science, 32(2): 235–95 and 'Experiments with interactional expertise' (2006, with Harry Collins et al.), Studies in History and Philosophy of Science, 37(4): 656–74.

Gil Eyal is Professor in the Department of Sociology, Columbia University, USA. Research interests include sociology of intellectuals and knowledge, in particular as it relates to broader political processes such as Israeli Orientalism and Middle Eastern studies, and their ties to the government and the military. Publications include 'For a sociology of expertise: The social origins of the autism epidemic' (2013), American Journal of Sociology, 118(4): 863–907, The Disenchantment of the Orient: Expertise in Arab Affairs and the Israeli State (2006), Stanford University Press, 'Dangerous liaisons: The relations between military intelligence and Middle Eastern studies in Israel' (2002), Theory and Society, 31(5): 653–93, and 'From the sociology of intellectuals to the sociology of interventions' (2010, with Larissa Buchholz), Annual Review of Sociology, 36(1): 117–37.

Hugh Gusterson is Professor of Anthropology and International Relations at the George Washington University, USA. His main research interests include militarism, anthropology of science, public anthropology, international security and nuclear weapons. His publications include Nuclear Rites: A Weapons Laboratory at the End of the Cold War (1996), University of California Press, and People of the Bomb: Portrait's of America's Nuclear Complex (2004), University of Minnesota Press.

Saul Halfon is Associate Professor in the Department of Science and Technology in Society, Virginia Tech, USA. Research interests include expertise and the politics of demography and population, the international politics of food and risk, and science and law. His publications include 'Encountering birth: Negotiating expertise, networks, and my STS self' (2010), Science as Culture, 19(1): 61–77, The Cairo Consensus: Demographic Surveys, Women's Empowerment, and Regime Change in Population Policy (2006), Lexington Books, 'The disunity of consensus: International policy coordination as socio-technical practice' (2006), Social Studies of Science, 36(5): 783–807 and 'Reconstructing Iraq: Merging discourses of security and development' (2007, with Benjamin Sovacool), Review of International Studies, 33(2): 223–43.

Piki Ish-Shalom is Director, the Leonard Davis for International Relations and Associate Professor in the Department of International Relations, Hebrew University of Jerusalem, Israel. He is the author of Democratic Peace: A Political Biography (2013), Michigan University Press.

Richard Jackson is Professor and Deputy Director at the National Centre for Peace and Conflict Studies (NCPACS), University of Otago, New Zealand. Research interests include the nature, causes and resolution of organized forms of contemporary political violence. He has published 9 books, including Contemporary Debates on Terrorism (2012, with Samuel Justin Sinclair), Routledge, Terrorism: A Critical Introduction (2011, with Lee Jarvis, Jeroen Gunning and Marie Breen Smyth), Palgrave, and Critical Terrorism Studies: A New Research Agenda (2009, with Marie Breen Smyth and Jeroen Gunning), Routledge. His most recent publication is a research-based novel entitled, Confessions of a Terrorist: A Novel (2014), Zed.

James G. McGann is Director, Think Tanks and Civil Societies Program, Lauder Institute and Senior Lecturer of International Studies at the University of Pennsylvania, USA. His research interests include the challenges facing think tanks, policy-makers, international organizations and philanthropic institutions. Publications include Global Think Tanks: Policy Networks and Governance (2010), Routledge, Think Tanks and Civil Societies: Catalysts for Ideas and Action (2006, edited with Kent Weaver), Transaction, and Think Tanks and Policy Advice in the United States: Academics, Advisors and Advocates (2007), Routledge.

Thomas Osborne is a Professor in the School of Sociology, Politics and International Studies, University of Bristol, UK. His research interests include historical studies of social and cultural theory and the sociology of knowledge. Publications include 'Authority, convention and political community' (2013) Journal of Political Power, 6(1): 127–31, The Structure of Modern Cultural Theory (2008), Manchester University Press, 'On mediators: Intellectuals and the ideas trade in the knowledge society' (2004), Economy and Society, 33(4): 430–47 and Aspects of Enlightenment (1998), UCL Press.

Grace Pok is an independent web designer who lives in New York City, USA.

Mikkel Vedby Rasmussen is a Professor at the University of Copenhagen. He is currently on leave working on policy development in the Danish Ministry of Defence. Rasmussen has previously headed the Centre for Military Studies and the Danish Institute for Military Studies in Copenhagen. Research interests include risk theory and the changing nature of war, as well as the defence policies of Denmark, EU and NATO. He was published widely on security and defence matters, including The Risk Society at War (2006), Cambridge University Press.

Judith Reppy is Professor Emerita in the Department of Science and Technology Studies, Cornell University, USA. Research interests include military technology, government policies for science and technology and economics of innovation. Her publications include Getting to Zero (2001, edited with Catherine Kelleher), Stanford University Press, 'Classifying knowledge, creating secrets:

Government policy for dual-use technology' (2011, with Jonathan Felbinger) in Susan Maret (ed.) Government Secrecy: Special Issue of Research in Social and Public Policy Perspectives 19, 277–299, Emerald Publishing Group, 'Secrecy and knowledge production' (1999), Peace Studies Program Occasional Papers and 'Managing dual-use technology in an age of uncertainty' (2006), The Forum: A Journal of Applied Research in Contemporary Politics, 4(1).

Lisa Stampnitzky is Lecturer in Social Studies in the Committee on Degrees in Social Studies, Harvard University, USA. Research interests include the intersections of expertise, politics and policy, and the role of narratives in political discourse. Her publications include Disciplining Terror: How Experts Invented 'Terrorism' (2013), Cambridge University Press, 'Disciplining an unruly field: Terrorism studies and theories of scientific/intellectual production' (2011), Qualitative Sociology, 34(1): 1–19, and 'How does "culture" become "capital"? Cultural and institutional struggles over "character and personality" at Harvard' (2006), Sociological Perspectives, 49(4): 461–81.

Ole Wæver is Professor, Department of Political Science, University of Copenhagen, Denmark, Director of Centre for Resolution of International Conflicts, and founder and former Director of the Centre for Advanced Security Theory (CAST). His research interests include theories of international relations and security, sociology of science, religion in international relations, climate change, conflict analysis and the role of national identity in foreign policy. Books include Security: A New Framework for Analysis (1998, Chinese 2002, Czech 2006, with Barry Buzan and Jaap de Wilde), Lynne Rienner, Regions and Powers: The Structure of International Security (2003, Chinese and Persian translations 2009, with Barry Buzan), Cambridge University Press, International Relations Scholarship Around the World (2009, edited with Arlene B. Tickner), Routledge, Climate change: Global Risks, Challenges and Decisions (2011, with Katherine Richardson et al.), Cambridge University Press.

Acknowledgements

This book bears the mark of a host of different people, institutions and conferences. Taking its point of departure in a shared research interest concerning the relation between security politics and knowledge practices, the project started as a series of conversations about the inadequacy of the current understanding of security expertise between the two editors. Later, the conversations developed into a research project which was made possible by the funding of the Centre for Advanced Security (CAST) directed by Ole Wæver at the University of Copenhagen. By hosting and funding a workshop on Security Expertise in June 2011 we were able to bring together a group of ‘experts’ on ‘expertise’ from diverse disciplines: social theory, anthropology, science and technology studies (STS) and security studies. We spent two and a half days in vibrant discussions about what security expertise is, how it is practised, and with what effects. The workshop made us realize how productive the connections between these different disciplines are, and the book is a reflection of this dialogue. A year later, we organized a roundtable at the joint BISA/ISA conference in Edinburgh with the participation of Mikkel Vedby Rasmussen and Didier Bigo. The crowded conference room told us that there is not only a great interest in the subject of security expertise. Questions raised made clear that understanding security expertise will require ongoing efforts, which go well beyond what can be done in a single volume. We are grateful to the contributors to this volume for agreeing to engage in this project on a subject which – despite an obvious common-sense understanding of it by the general public – is slippery, contradictory and elusive. This book is the result of these discussions.

A number of people helped us along the way. Jonathan Felbinger, Anine Hagemann, Jonas Hagmann, Jorn Richert and Columba Peoples took part in the workshop and shared their input with the group. Henrik Breitenbauch, Ulrik Pram Gad, Karen Lund Petersen and Vibeke Schou Tjalve acted as chairs during the workshop and provided a security studies input to the very diverse discussions. Asger Petersen and Sune Petersen at CAST provided invaluable research assistance at various stages of the project. They both worked with dedication and a professionalism which can only be commended.

Working on this book also benefited from a range of dialogues with colleagues with an interest in knowledge production, the relation of science and policy, and the role of experts in international relations. Conversations with Signe Blaabjerg Christoffersen, Cecilie Glerup, Felix Grenier, Inanna Hamati-Ataya, Peter Marcus Kristensen, Anna Leander, Maximilian Mayer, Len Seabrooke, Ole Jacob Sending, Peer Schouten, Nisha Shah, Jeppe Strandsbjerg and Casper Sylvest have greatly contributed to developing the arguments of the book,

Further, we are grateful for the support of the Judith Reppy Institute for Peace and Conflict Studies at Cornell University in the initial stages of publishing this book and to the Department of Politics and International Relations at Cardiff University and the NATO Defense College for giving the editors an institutional and academic home during the process of completing this book.

Christian Bueger acknowledges the support from the Economic and Social Research Council [ES/K008358/1].

Contents

List of figures	ix
List of tables	x
Notes on contributors	xi
Acknowledgements	xv
1 Security expertise: an introduction	1
TRINE VILLUMSEN BERLING AND CHRISTIAN BUEGER
2 What is expertise? Technical knowledge and political judgement	19
ROBERT EVANS
3 What is security expertise? From the sociology of professions to the analysis of networks of expertise	37
GIL EYAL AND GRACE POK
4 In defence of security	60
THOMAS OSBORNE
5 The history and social structure of security studies as a practico-academic field	76
OLE WÆVER
6 Think tanks in security and international affairs	107
JAMES G. MCGANN
7 Producing knowledge for the military: experts and amateurs in the national security community	125
JUDITH REPPY

8	Contesting human security expertise: technical practices in reconfiguring international security	141
	SAUL HALFON
9	Problematic knowledge: how 'terrorism' resists expertise	158
	LISA STAMPNITZKY
10	On wolves, squirrels and pandas: the characters of strategy experts	172
	MIKKEL VEDBY RASMUSSEN
11	On how to be a collective intellectual: critical terrorism studies and the countering of hegemonic discourse	186
	RICHARD JACKSON
12	Ethics, expertise and human terrain	204
	HUGH GUSTERSON
13	Away from the heart of darkness: transparency and regulating the relationships between security experts and security sectors	228
	PIKI ISH-SHALOM
	Index	245

Figures

3.1	Frequency of appearance of 'Expertise' and 'Expert' in Google Books from 1800 to 2000	40
5.1	Evolving in-betweenness of security studies in the USA	98
6.1	Total think tank and SIA think tank emergence over time (1900–2012)	114
6.2	Percentage of concentrations globally by security type	116
6.3	Percentage of global SIA think tanks by staff size	118

Tables

2.1	Periodic table of expertises	28
3.1	Dimensions of the contrast between the sociology of expertise and the sociology of professions	38
3.2	Characteristics of spaces between fields as spaces of opportunity	45
6.1	Traditional and non-traditional security foci (TTCSP definitions)	112
6.2	Structural orientation (TTCSP definitions)	113
6.3	Top 12 states (excluding US) with highest number of security think tanks	115
9.1	Three newly problematic dimensions of ‘terrorism’ discourse	166
9.2	‘Insurgency’ versus ‘terrorism’	166

1 Security expertise

An introduction

Trine Villumsen Berling and Christian Bueger

The study of security expertise

We live in an age of expertise. Expertise is a key resource in the formulation of policies and experts are powerful shadow players in the political process. We meet them every day in the news where they analyse and comment on recent events and trends. Experts identify what is important and what deserves attention. They are called upon to reduce uncertainty and to solve public or judicial controversies. They provide evidence for policy and frames of references to interpret trends, patterns or the behaviour of actors. Expertise mediates between different forms of knowledge: scientific and technological knowledge, legal and economic knowledge, or political knowledge.

When a crisis situation breaks out, whether it is a major accident, a catastrophic event, an environmental disaster, a terrorist attack or a military conflict, experts explain to us what has happened and what should be done next. They suggest different courses of action, and whether these are justified or not and what should be prioritized. Experts also provide means to identify what is dangerous and what is not. They develop indices and statistics, for instance, on state failure and military spending, and tell us what country or problem requires extra attention and care. Through risk assessments, experts decide whether an alert status should be moved from yellow to orange or even red, what priorities security strategies should focus on, whether you should take off your shoes at an airport security check point, or which country you should travel to and which you better avoid. These experts that define what is risky and what a threat is, what should be dealt with as a security issue and what not, are a special breed of experts – they are security experts. Some of these experts sit in universities and do security studies. Others work in think tanks or in the bureaucracies of foreign and defence ministries or international organizations, such as the EU, NATO or the UN. Understanding how security experts and processes of security expertise shape security practice is the task of our following discussions. We investigate the nature, institutionalization and practice of security expertise.

That security expertise has only recently become a major analytical focus is somehow surprising. Governments are surrounded by circles of security experts and security problems, such as civil wars, terrorism, international interventions