编者的话

英语扩充词汇阅读欣赏系列(1~3 册)现已面世,这是为配合"英语扩充词汇阶梯阅读系列"(《英语扩充词汇阶梯阅读系列"(《英语扩充词汇阶梯阅读系列"1998年获得全国高校出版社优秀畅销书奖和陕西省优秀双效书奖,深受读者的喜爱,产生了较好的社会效应。这两个系列相辅相成,相得益彰。我们尤其希望该阅读欣赏系列能为进一步巩固扩大读者的英语词汇和加强提高读者的英语水平起到较好的作用。

 而达到东西文化的交流和贯通。一种语言是一个民族人民历史、文化、生活的反映和载体,没有对该民族人民历史、文化、生活的了解,学习语言就成了无源之水、无本之木,想学好它只能是缘木求鱼而已。因此,本阅读欣赏系列给您提供了丰富广博的人文知识,是可供您选择的最佳英语阅读教材。

参加本系列书籍编纂的编者大多都参加了 "英语扩充词汇阶梯阅读系列"的编写工作,从而 保证了两套系列书在选材风格上的一致性。为 了便于读者更准确地理解原文,本系列书在练习 设置上除词汇练习外,又增加了阅读理解练习, 因而使练习形式更加丰富和充实。

需要指出的是,"英语扩充词汇阅读欣赏系列"(1~3 册)重在扩展学生的知识面,扩大英语词汇量及掌握地道的英语,并不体现阶梯性,因此,具有中级英语水平(相当于大学英语四级)的读者可随意选读。

最后,我们真诚地希望我们的努力能得到广 大新老读者的厚爱,使之也和"英语扩充词汇阶 梯阅读系列"一样成为您英语学习方面的进身之 阶。

书籍编纂不仅需要扎实的外语功力,而且需要深厚的文化底蕴,无奈编者才疏学浅,虽尽心尽力错误亦在所难免,敬请读者涵谅。

1 A Fable for Tomorrow 明天的寓言

明天是什么样子?这里作者描绘了一幅凄凉惨淡的荒芜景象。这并非危言耸听,那些遭到污染的地区不就是佐证吗?

There was once a town in the heart of America where all life seemed to live in harmony with its surroundings¹. The town lay in the midst of a checkerboard² of prosperous farms, with fields of grain and hillsides of orchards where, in spring, white clouds of bloom drifted above the green fields. In autumn, oak(栎) and maple(枫) and birch(桦) set up a blaze of color that flamed and flickered across a backdrop of pines(松) 3 . Then foxes barked in the hills and deer silently crossed the fields, half hidden in the mists of the fall mornings.

Along the roads, laurel(桂), viburnum and alder, great ferns and wild flowers delighted the traveler's eye⁴ were places of beauty, where countless birds came to feed on the berries and on the seed heads of the dried weeds rising above the snow. The countryside was, in fact, famous for the abundance and variety of its bird life, and when the flood of migrants was pouring through in spring and fall people traveled from great distances to observe them. Others came to fish the streams, which flowed clear and cold out of the hills⁵ and contained shady pools where trout lay. So it had been from the days many years ago when the first settlers raised their horses, sank their wells, and built their barns.

Then a strange blight(枯萎病) crept over the area and everything began to change. Some evil spell⁶ had settled on the community: mysterious maladies swept the flocks of chickens; the cattle and sheep sickened and died. Everywhere was a shadow of death. The farmers spoke of much illness among their families. In the town the doctors had become more and more puzzled by new kinds of sickness appearing among their patients. There had been several sudden and unexplained deaths not only among adults but even among children, who would be stricken suddenly while at play and die within a few hours.

There was a strange stillness. The birds, for example—where had they gone? Many people spoke of them, puzzled and disturbed. The feeding stations in the backyards were deserted. The few birds seen anywhere were moribund(垂死的); they trembled violently and could not fly. It was a spring without voices. On the mornings that had once throbbed with the dawn chorus of robins, catbirds, doves, jays, wrens⁷, and scores of other bird voices there was now no sound; only silence lay over the fields and woods and marsh. On the farms the hens brooded, but no chicks hatched. The farmers complained that they were unable to raise any pigs—the litters (猪恩) were small and the young survived only a few days. The apple trees were coming into bloom but no bees droned among the blossoms, so there was no pollination (传播花粉) and there would be no fruit.

The roadsides, once so attractive, were now lined with browned and withered vegetation as though swept by fire. These, too, were silent, deserted by all living things. Even the streams were now lifeless. Anglers no longer visited them, for all the fish had died.

In the gutters under the eaves and between the shingles of the roofs⁸, a white granular powder still showed a few patches. Some weeks before it had fallen like snow upon the roofs and the lawns, the fields and streams.

No witchcraft(魔法), no enemy action had silenced the rebirth of new life in this stricken world. The people had done it themselves.

This town does not actually exist, but it might easily have a thousand counterparts in America or elsewhere in the world. I know of no community that has experienced at the misfortunes I describe. Yet every one of these disasters has actually happened somewhere, and many real communities have already suffered a substantial number of them. A grim specter has crept upon us almost unnoticed⁹, and this imagined tragedy may easily become a stark reality we all shall know.

2 In Amy's Eyes 在艾米的眼里

小艾米生长在社会激烈动荡的时代里。越战,水门事件,种族歧视,民权运动,性解放,父母离异等相继发生。目睹在这样社会背景下成长起来的她,她的父亲思潮起伏,感慨万端。

On the dresser(梳妆台) in Amy's empty bedroom was a music box with Snoopy¹ on the lid, a gift when she was four or five. She had outgrown it years before and yet could never bear to part with it. It connected her to simple days.

I picked it up the evening after she departed for college. Her bedroom haunted me with its silence², its unaccustomed tidiness, with the odd souvenirs(纪念品) from a childhood that was now history. But it was the music box that caught my eye³. I opened it and the plaintive song played automatically. Surprising me, I remembered, tears filling my eyes, the small child holding the box before she went to sleep. When I saw that she had placed my Marine Corps ribbons from Vietnam⁴ inside, I wept like a fool.

I had not seen the ribbons in ten years. When Amy was small, she wore them to school, picking out one or a few to match a jacket or a sweater. It perplexed her mother and caused her teacher to think I was a militarist at a time when virulent antimilitarism was de rigueur. But even at five she could read inside my heart. She had conceived a way to show her loyalty on an issue that was drowning me in pain.

At a time when right and wrong had canceled each other out, when the country was in chaos and I was struggling with the wreckage of my life⁶, my daughter was my friend. At three, she comforted me, asking the right questions when I learned that my closest friend in law school had died. At five, she tried to take care of me when, badly shaken by the suicide of a young veteran(老兵), I retreated to a remote campsite. At ten as her class cheered the return of our hostages from I-ran, she lectured them on the difficult home coming of our Vietnam veterans.

Amy's childhood years have formed her view of the world, but like so many compatriots, her life echoed with the turmoil of her elders. Amy has been treated to a view that government is corrupt and unfair. This was fed by continuous debates over civil rights,! the Vietnam war, Watergate and the Iran - contra affair.

Amy grew up listening to the disagreements of her parents, both before and after their divorce. She learned what it meant to be a "latchkey kid," cared for by phone. 9 She heard those who had celebrated the drug culture tell her "just say no" at about the time that high-school dealers started wearing beepers to class. She knows that the generation that flaunted (炫耀) sexual freedom is queasy now, what with abortion to common among teenagers and the illegitimacy rate triple that of 20 years ago.

The greatest legacy of the babyboom generation's early adulthood has been that it asked all the right questions but resolved nothing. Raised by parents whose sacrifices during the Great Depression and World War purchased for us the luxury of being able to question, we all understood the standards from which some of us were choosing to deviate(背离).

But driven by disagreement, we have encouraged our children to believe that there are no touchstones (试金石), no true answers, no commitments worthy of sacrifice. That for every cause there is a counter-cause. That for every reason to fight there is a reason to run. That for every yin there is a yang. 10

How will our children react to this philosophical quagmire(困境)? My bet is that they will surprise us with their stability, that they will perhaps be slower to make commitments, but more serious when they do.

Someone who has bounced between two parents will not marry with the thought that we can always get a divorce if it doesn't work. Someone who has viewed the nightmarish results of political policies and recreational activities that were rather innocently begun will be more careful to consider the implications of new seductions (诱惑) at the outset. In the end, just as my tiny daughter eased my personal turmoil years ago, she and her contemporaries may become the arbiters of the generation that spawned them. ¹¹

Thinking of these things as I sat in the quiet of her bedroom listening to the yellow music box that still reminds me of the adoration in Amy's eyes, I understood another truth: we, the members of a creative, sometimes absurd, always narcissistic(自我陶醉)postwar generation, will soon receive a judgment. Whatever it is, our children have earned the right to make it.

3 To the Victor Belongs the Language 语言属于胜者

"胜者王侯败者贼",孰"王"孰"贼"依孰胜而定。"革命"是褒意还是贬意道理亦是这样。读过此篇,您会感悟到中西文化不乏异曲同工之妙。

Language is the road map of a culture. It tells you where its people come from and where they are going. A study of the English language reveals a dramatic history and astonishing versatility. It is the language of survivors, of conquerors, of laughter.

A word is more like a pendulum than a fixed entity(实体). It can sweep by your ear and through its very sound suggest hidden meanings, preconscious associations¹. Listen to these words: blood, tranquil, democracy. Besides their literal meanings, they carry associations that are cultural as well as personal.

One word can illustrate this idea of meaning in flux: "revolution" The word enters English in the 14th century from the Latin via French. (At least that's when it was first written; it may have been spoken earlier.) Revolution means a
