This series is a mini-library that is an indispensable resource for any serious researcher of private international law or conflict of laws. It brings together in separate thematic volumes those private international law writings which were path-breaking at their time and remain classic to date. Each volume is constructed and edited by a distinguished contemporary scholar under the direction of the series editor. The series provides in-depth coverage of the three traditional branches of private international law, namely, jurisdiction, choice of law, and recognition and enforcement of judgments, but also covers arbitration and topics that straddle the permeable boundary between private and public law.

International Sales Law

Edited by Franco Ferrari and Clayton P. Gillette

'Taking a complete and accurate approach to the subject, this collection provides an exhaustive picture of the law relating to the international import/export contracts applicable to world trade.'

'Adopting a comparative stance, these volumes give the reader a comprehensive understanding of the worldwide legal approach toward the CISG, and provide a valuable guide to the understanding of both the application and the interpretation of that law, thus being a must-read not only for students, but also for practitioners and researchers studying and working in the field of international sales law.'

Francesco Cortesi, Judge, Italian Supreme Court

This authoritative collection presents carefully selected scholarly articles that describe and examine the principles of international sales law, as set forth in the United Nations Convention on Contracts for the International Sale of Goods (CISG). These seminal pieces reflect various viewpoints of authors from different countries and legal systems, and offer a range of distinct methodological approaches to legal analysis. Together with an original introduction by the editors, these volumes provide the reader with both an international and an interdisciplinary perspective on the CISG and its application.
