Judges, Law and War

International courts and judicial bodies play a formative role in the development of international humanitarian law. Judges, Law and War examines how judicial bodies have influenced the substantive rules and principles of the law of armed conflict, and studies the creation, application and enforcement of this corpus of laws. Specifically, it considers how international courts have authoritatively addressed the meaning and scope of particular rules, the application of humanitarian law treaties and the customary status of specific norms. Key concepts include armed conflicts and protected persons, guiding principles, fundamental guarantees, means and methods of warfare, enforcement and war crimes. Consideration is also given to the contemporary place of judicial bodies in the international lawmaking process, the challenges presented by judicial creativity and the role of customary international law in the development of humanitarian law.

SHANE DARCY is a lecturer at the Irish Centre for Human Rights at the National University of Ireland Galway.

Established in 1946, this series produces high quality scholarship in the fields of public and private international law and comparative law. Although these are distinct legal sub-disciplines, developments since 1946 confirm their interrelations.

Comparative law is increasingly used as a tool in the making of law at national, regional and international levels. Private international law is now often affected by international conventions, and the issues faced by classical conflicts rules are frequently dealt with by substantive harmonisation of law under international auspices. Mixed international arbitrations, especially those involving state economic activity, raise mixed questions of public and private international law, while in many fields (such as the protection of human rights and democratic standards, investment guarantees and international criminal law) international and national systems interact. National constitutional arrangements relating to “foreign affairs”, and to the implementation of international norms, are a focus of attention.

The series welcomes works of a theoretical or interdisciplinary character, and those focusing on the new approaches to international or comparative law or conflicts of law. Studies of particular institutions or problems are equally welcome, as are translations of the best work published in other languages.

Acknowledgments

Writing a book is an individual undertaking for the most part, but the contribution of others to this endeavour has been significant and is most deserving of recognition. My academic home, the Irish Centre for Human Rights at the National University of Ireland Galway, is a collegial and intellectually engaging environment, and I wish to thank my colleagues, in particular William Schabas, Ray Murphy and Kathleen Cavanaugh, as well as the enthusiastic students on our various post-graduate programmes. The book itself was completed during a period of sabbatical leave during which I was a visiting scholar at the Centre for Public, International and Comparative Law at the University of Queensland and the Human Rights Program at Harvard Law School. I am most grateful to Jennifer Corrin at Queensland and Mindy Roseman at Harvard who facilitated my visits, and to the staff at the TC Beirne School of Law and Harvard's Human Rights Program for making me feel most welcome.

I would also like to thank a number of people with whom I discussed the subject matter of the book and who graciously read and commented on its chapters: William Schabas, Ray Murphy, Michael Kearney, John Reynolds, Edel Hughes, Iain Scobbie, Anthony Cullen and Michelle Farrell. Their responses greatly enriched the work, as did those of the Cambridge University Press reviewers. Elizabeth Spicer and Richard Woodham were most helpful during the review and production process. Excellent research assistance was provided by Adam Grieser, Rachel Sanchez, Pauline Perez, Jennifer Morrissey, Julie Coleman and Katherine Graham. I also wish to gratefully acknowledge the funding received from the Millennium Fund at the National University of Ireland Galway, the Royal Irish Academy and the British Academy for the Humanities and Social Sciences.

Finally, this book would not have been possible without the love and support of my wife Anna-Marie. She has been a constant source of encouragement and reassurance, and I am forever in her debt. This book is dedicated to her.
