We often see dogs put their tongues out in summer. But at first the dogs didn't do so.

Many, many years ago, the dog was very bad. He never did a good deed. On a summer day a dog went into a forest. When he saw the forest was beautiful and clean, a bad idea came to him. Then he brought a lot of dirty things to the forest and put them everywhere. What he did was seen by a monkey who hid behind a big tree. He didn't tell anyone what the dog did because he did not know why the dog did so. Several days later, it got hotter and hotter, and the dirty things became rotten. The air smelt terrible. Many animals fell ill. All the other animals became angry and tried to find out who had done it and punish him. The monkey knew how bad the dog was. So he told the other animals the truth. They caught up with the dog and made him eat all the dirty things and make the forest clean. Ever since then the dog became much more honest than before. To remember this he puts his tongue out in summer.

Dick was an English painter, he painted beautiful pictures.

Once the king of England asked him to paint some pictures on the walls of the palaces.

Several workers came and made a big platform. Then Dick began to paint. He worked with a man who helped him.

At the end of the year the pictures were ready, they were beautiful. Dick looked for a long time. How beautiful they were! He took one step back and looked again. Now the pictures were more beautiful.

He took another step, then another, until he was at the very edge of the platform. But he didn't know it. He thought of only his pictures.

The worker who helped him saw everything. "What shall I do?" he thought, "Dick is at the very edge of the platform. If I cry out, he will take another step and will fall down to the stone floor, it will kill him." The worker quickly took a pot of paint, tan to a picture and threw the paint at the picture, "What are you doing?" cried the painter running back to his picture.

One Way Street

One day a Frenchman went to New York. He didn't know a word of English. When he arrived in New York, he took a bus to a hotel.

It was Saturday, and the Frenchman decided to go out for a walk. He left the hotel and went out into the street.

As he went down the street, he suddenly remembered that he didn't know the name of the street. So he decided to write it down. He looked at the wall near the corner of the street. There he saw some English words and copied them down in his notebook. "Now I know the name of this street," he said to himself. "It will be easy for me to come back to the hotel."

He walked for a long time in the city. Then he felt tired and wanted to go back to his hotel. He took the notebook out of his pocket and showed the name of the street to a young man. The young man read the words in the notebook and looked at the Frenchman. He didn't know what he wanted.

Then the Frenchman decided to ask someone else. He stopped a young woman and showed her the words in his notebook. The young woman didn't know what the Frenchman wanted, either. Then the Frenchman saw a policeman. The policeman knew some French, when the Frenchman showed him the words in his notebook and asked him where that street was, the policeman laughed, for these were the words in the Frenchman's notebook: One Way Street—it was not the name of the street.

Although everyone enjoys Christmas Day, it is especially enjoyed by children, who get very happy because of the presents they are going to receive. Small children believe that their presents are bought by Father Christmas. Father Christmas is a kind old man who, the children are told, lives at the North Pole. He travels through sky and enters by climbing down the chimney. When small children go to bed on Christmas Eve, they put a stocking at the end of their beds. Their parents told them not to look at Father Christmas or he will not give them anything. When they wake up, they find their stockings filled with presents.

The Shirt

Once a king felt unhappy and asked a wise old man how he could feel happy.

"That's very simple," the old man said. "You just put on the shirt of a happy man and you'll be happy."

The king believed the old man and began to look for a happy man. He visited professors, doctors and others. But they all said they were not happy.

One day he saw a poor peasant working in the field. The man was singing all the time and looked every happy. The king came up to him and asked, "Are you happy, my good man?"

"Yes, quite happy," answered the peasant. "Can you sell me your shirt?" asked the king. "My shirt?" the peasant answered in surprise. "But I haven't got a shirt. Indeed (的确) I never had one."
