

The Bill of Rights

The Bill of Rights

Amendment I

...ing an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government

Amendment II

...ary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms

Amendment III

...be quartered in any house, without the consent of the Owner

Amendment IV

...in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable
But upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, to be seized.

Amendment V

...for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment aval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in connection to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law

STATES' RIGHTS

Edited by Jodie Lynn Boduch

| States' Rights

Jodie Lynn Boduch, Book Editor

GREENHAVEN PRESS

An imprint of Thomson Gale, a part of The Thomson Corporation

THOMSON
—★—™
GALE

Detroit • New York • San Francisco • San Diego • New Haven, Conn.
Waterville, Maine • London • Munich

Bonnie Szumski, Publisher
Helen Cothran, Managing Editor
Scott Barbour, Series Editor

© 2006 Thomson Gale, a part of The Thomson Corporation.

Thomson and Star Logo are trademarks and Gale and Greenhaven Press are registered trademarks used herein under license.

For more information, contact: Greenhaven Press
27500 Drake Rd.
Farmington Hills, MI 48331-3535
Or you can visit our Internet site at <http://www.gale.com>

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

No part of this work covered by the copyright hereon may be reproduced or used in any form or by any means—graphic, electronic, or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, taping, Web distribution, or information storage retrieval systems—without the written permission of the publisher.

Articles in Greenhaven Press anthologies are often edited for length to meet page requirements. In addition, original titles of these works are changed to clearly present the main thesis and to explicitly indicate the author's opinion. Every effort is made to ensure that Greenhaven Press accurately reflects the original intent of the authors. Every effort has been made to trace the owners of copyrighted material.

Cover photograph reproduced by permission of © Kevin Fleming/CORBIS.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS CATALOGING-IN-PUBLICATION DATA

States' Rights / Jodie Lynn Boduch, book editor

p. cm. -- (The Bill of rights)

Includes bibliographical references and index. 0-7377-1935-4 (lib. bdg. : alk. paper)

1. State Rights--History. 2. Federal government--United States--History.
3. United States. Constitution. 10th Amendment--History. I. Boduch, Jodie Lynn. II. Bill of Rights (San Diego, Calif.)

JK311.S725 2006

342.73'042--dc22

2005054543

Printed in the United States of America

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Foreword

"I cannot agree with those who think of the Bill of Rights as an 18th century straightjacket, unsuited for this age. . . . The evils it guards against are not only old, they are with us now, they exist today."

Hugo Black, associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, 1937–1971

The Bill of Rights codifies the freedoms most essential to American democracy. Freedom of speech, freedom of religion, the right to bear arms, the right to a trial by a jury of one's peers, the right to be free from cruel and unusual punishment—these are just a few of the liberties that the Founding Fathers thought it necessary to spell out in the first ten amendments to the U.S. Constitution.

While the document itself is quite short (consisting of fewer than five hundred words), and while the liberties it protects often seem straightforward, the Bill of Rights has been a source of debate ever since its creation. Throughout American history, the rights the document protects have been tested and reinterpreted. Again and again, individuals perceiving violations of their rights have sought redress in the courts. The courts in turn have struggled to decipher the original intent of the founders as well as the need to accommodate changing societal norms and values.

The ultimate responsibility for addressing these claims has fallen to the U.S. Supreme Court. As the highest court in the nation, it is the Supreme Court's role to interpret the Constitution. The Court has considered numerous cases in which people have accused government of impinging on their rights.

In the process, the Court has established a body of case law and precedents that have, in a sense, defined the Bill of Rights. In doing so, the Court has often reversed itself and introduced new ideas and approaches that have altered the legal meaning of the rights contained in the Bill of Rights. As a general rule, the Court has erred on the side of caution, upholding and expanding the rights of individuals rather than restricting them.

An example of this trend is the definition of cruel and unusual punishment. The Eighth Amendment specifically states, "Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted." However, over the years the Court has had to grapple with defining what constitutes "cruel and unusual punishments." In colonial America, punishments for crimes included branding, the lopping off of ears, and whipping. Indeed, these punishments were considered lawful at the time the Bill of Rights was written. Obviously, none of these punishments are legal today. In order to justify outlawing certain types of punishment that are deemed repugnant by the majority of citizens, the Court has ruled that it must consider the prevailing opinion of the masses when making such decisions. In overturning the punishment of a man stripped of his citizenship, the Court stated in 1958 that it must rely on society's "evolving standards of decency" when determining what constitutes cruel and unusual punishment. Thus the definition of cruel and unusual is not frozen to include only the types of punishment that were illegal at the time of the framing of the Bill of Rights; specific modes of punishment can be rejected as society deems them unjust.

Another way that the Courts have interpreted the Bill of Rights to expand individual liberties is through the process of "incorporation." Prior to the passage of the Fourteenth Amendment, the Bill of Rights was thought to prevent only the federal government from infringing on the rights listed in the document. However, the Fourteenth Amendment, which was passed in the wake of the Civil War, includes the words, “. . . nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.” Citing this passage, the Court has ruled that many of the liberties contained in the Bill of Rights apply to state and local governments as well as the federal government. This process of incorporation laid the legal foundation for the civil rights movement—most specifically the 1954 Brown v. Board of Education ruling that put an end to legalized segregation.

As these examples reveal, the Bill of Rights is not static. It truly is a living document that is constantly being reinterpreted and redefined. The Bill of Rights series captures this vital aspect of one of America’s most cherished founding texts. Each volume in the series focuses on one particular right protected in the Bill of Rights. Through the use of primary and secondary sources, the right’s evolution is traced from colonial times to the present. Primary sources include landmark Supreme Court rulings, speeches by prominent experts, and editorials. Secondary sources include historical analyses, law journal articles, book excerpts, and magazine articles. Each book also includes several features to facilitate research, including a bibliography, an annotated table of contents, an annotated list of relevant Supreme Court cases, an introduction, and an index. These elements help to make the Bill of Rights series a fascinating and useful tool for examining the fundamental liberties of American democracy.

Contents

Foreword	9
Introduction	12

Chapter 1: Early Debates Regarding State and Federal Powers

1. The Creation of the Tenth Amendment	17
Charles F. Hobson
The balance of state and federal power was one of the most debated issues when the American leaders devised the Constitution, and the Tenth Amendment was created to appease both sides.
2. The States' Rights Debate from Colonial Times to the Early Nineteenth Century	32
Richard E. Ellis
Even though the Tenth Amendment acknowledged states' rights, disagreements between Federalists and Anti-Federalists pervaded politics in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries.

Chapter 2: Supreme Court Interpretations of the Tenth Amendment

1. The Tenth Amendment Does Not Entitle States to Reject Federal Institutions	44
John Marshall
In McCulloch v. Maryland (1819), the Supreme Court upheld the constitutional legitimacy of a national bank and declared that states cannot tax the federal government.
2. The Tenth Amendment Limits the Authority of Congress	56
William Rufus Day
In Hammer v. Dagenhart (1918), the Court declared that Congress is not authorized to regulate the labor laws of states.
3. The Tenth Amendment Does Not Deprive the Federal Government of Authority	66

Harlan Fiske Stone

In United States v. Darby (1941), the Court overturned Hammer v. Dagenhart and ruled that the federal government is authorized to regulate state labor laws.

Chapter 3: Major Conflicts Over States' Rights

1. The Nullification Crisis of 1832–1833 78

Bernard A. Weisberger

In the early 1830s, southern leader John C. Calhoun led a movement championing the right of states to nullify federal laws that the states' citizens deemed unconstitutional.

2. Secession Challenges the Tenth Amendment 84

Daniel Farber

The secession of the Southern states not only started the Civil War, but it also launched debates about the Constitution, the Union, and state sovereignty.

3. Invoking State Sovereignty to Resist Federal Civil Rights Laws 98

Yasuhiro Katagiri

The civil rights movement gained the support of the federal government, but some states, such as Mississippi, responded by invoking state sovereignty.

Chapter 4: Modern Perspectives on the State-Federal Relationship

1. The Federal and State Roles in Same-Sex Marriage Laws 107

Cass R. Sunstein

The Supreme Court has not interfered in the Massachusetts ruling on same-sex marriage because the federal system respects each state's culture.

2. Federal Drug Laws Trump State Statutes 115

Jan Crawford Greenburg

In Raich v. Ashcroft (2005), the Supreme Court maintained that federal antidrug laws supersede state regulations concerning medical marijuana use.

3. Education Reform Sparks Debate over the Federal Government's Role Alexandra Marks Some states argue that the No Child Left Behind Act, a federal education reform, interferes with a state's control over its own school systems and fails to achieve its goals.	121
Appendix A: The Origins of the American Bill of Rights	126
Appendix B: Supreme Court Cases Involving States' Rights	129
For Further Research	134
Index	138

| States' Rights

Other Books in the Bill of Rights series:

Freedom from Cruel and Unusual Punishment

Freedom from Unfair Searches and Seizures

Freedom of Assembly and Petition

Freedom of Religion

Freedom of Speech

Freedom of the Press

Property Rights

The Right Against Self-Incrimination

The Right to a Fair Trial

The Right to a Trial by Jury

The Right to Bear Arms

The Right to Due Process

| States' Rights

Jodie Lynn Boduch, Book Editor

GREENHAVEN PRESS

An imprint of Thomson Gale, a part of The Thomson Corporation

THOMSON
——TM
GALE

Detroit • New York • San Francisco • San Diego • New Haven, Conn.
Waterville, Maine • London • Munich

Bonnie Szumski, Publisher
Helen Cothran, Managing Editor
Scott Barbour, Series Editor

© 2006 Thomson Gale, a part of The Thomson Corporation.

Thomson and Star Logo are trademarks and Gale and Greenhaven Press are registered trademarks used herein under license.

For more information, contact: Greenhaven Press
27500 Drake Rd.
Farmington Hills, MI 48331-3535
Or you can visit our Internet site at <http://www.gale.com>

ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

No part of this work covered by the copyright hereon may be reproduced or used in any form or by any means—graphic, electronic, or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, taping, Web distribution, or information storage retrieval systems—without the written permission of the publisher.

Articles in Greenhaven Press anthologies are often edited for length to meet page requirements. In addition, original titles of these works are changed to clearly present the main thesis and to explicitly indicate the author's opinion. Every effort is made to ensure that Greenhaven Press accurately reflects the original intent of the authors. Every effort has been made to trace the owners of copyrighted material.

Cover photograph reproduced by permission of © Kevin Fleming/CORBIS.

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS CATALOGING-IN-PUBLICATION DATA

States' Rights / Jodie Lynn Boduch, book editor
p. cm. -- (The Bill of rights)
Includes bibliographical references and index. 0-7377-1935-4 (lib. bdg. : alk. paper)
1. State Rights--History. 2. Federal government--United States--History.
3. United States. Constitution. 10th Amendment--History. I. Boduch, Jodie Lynn. II. Bill of Rights (San Diego, Calif.)
JK311.S725 2006
342.73'042--dc22

2005054543

Printed in the United States of America
10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Contents

Foreword	9
Introduction	12

Chapter 1: Early Debates Regarding State and Federal Powers

1. The Creation of the Tenth Amendment	17
Charles F. Hobson

The balance of state and federal power was one of the most debated issues when the American leaders devised the Constitution, and the Tenth Amendment was created to appease both sides.

2. The States' Rights Debate from Colonial Times to the Early Nineteenth Century	32
Richard E. Ellis

Even though the Tenth Amendment acknowledged states' rights, disagreements between Federalists and Anti-Federalists pervaded politics in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries.

Chapter 2: Supreme Court Interpretations of the Tenth Amendment

1. The Tenth Amendment Does Not Entitle States to Reject Federal Institutions	44
John Marshall

In McCulloch v. Maryland (1819), the Supreme Court upheld the constitutional legitimacy of a national bank and declared that states cannot tax the federal government.

2. The Tenth Amendment Limits the Authority of Congress	56
William Rufus Day

In Hammer v. Dagenhart (1918), the Court declared that Congress is not authorized to regulate the labor laws of states.

3. The Tenth Amendment Does Not Deprive the Federal Government of Authority	66
---	----

Harlan Fiske Stone

In United States v. Darby (1941), the Court overturned Hammer v. Dagenhart and ruled that the federal government is authorized to regulate state labor laws.

Chapter 3: Major Conflicts Over States' Rights

1. The Nullification Crisis of 1832–1833 78

Bernard A. Weisberger

In the early 1830s, southern leader John C. Calhoun led a movement championing the right of states to nullify federal laws that the states' citizens deemed unconstitutional.

2. Secession Challenges the Tenth Amendment 84

Daniel Farber

The secession of the Southern states not only started the Civil War, but it also launched debates about the Constitution, the Union, and state sovereignty.

3. Invoking State Sovereignty to Resist Federal Civil Rights Laws 98

Yasuhiro Katagiri

The civil rights movement gained the support of the federal government, but some states, such as Mississippi, responded by invoking state sovereignty.

Chapter 4: Modern Perspectives on the State-Federal Relationship

1. The Federal and State Roles in Same-Sex Marriage Laws 107

Cass R. Sunstein

The Supreme Court has not interfered in the Massachusetts ruling on same-sex marriage because the federal system respects each state's culture.

2. Federal Drug Laws Trump State Statutes 115

Jan Crawford Greenburg

In Raich v. Ashcroft (2005), the Supreme Court maintained that federal antidrug laws supersede state regulations concerning medical marijuana use.

3. Education Reform Sparks Debate over the Federal Government's Role	121
Alexandra Marks
Some states argue that the No Child Left Behind Act, a federal education reform, interferes with a state's control over its own school systems and fails to achieve its goals.
Appendix A: The Origins of the American Bill of Rights	126
Appendix B: Supreme Court Cases Involving States' Rights	129
For Further Research	134
Index	138

