Winter Boy is rescued by the Red Army.

As the Red Army cadre Wu Hsiu-chu caresses the welts on Winter Boy's face, the tearful lad looks up at the red star on Wu's army cap.

Winter Boy joins the Children's Corps.

Winter Boy overhears his father tell his mother:
"Our main force is going, but the Party will still be here, the guerrillas will still be here. They'll go on leading our folk to keep up the fight."

Winter Boy chokes the landlord Hu and shouts:
"Come, quick! The landlord's running away!"

Father gives Winter Boy a bright red-star insignia.

"The Red Army will return."

While mother makes her solemn pledge on admission to the Communist Party, Winter Boy spontaneously raises his small fist.

Winter Boy and Uncle Sung are shocked to see the enemy soldiers surround the house where Mother is.

Mother's heroic death ignites in the lad's mind a burning hatred for the enemy.

"I'll do whatever the Party wants me to do!"
Winter Boy replies firmly when asked to work as apprentice at the Maoyuan Rice Shop.

"If we had wings like an eagle, we could fly all the way north to Yenan and see Chairman Mao. Wouldn't that be grand?"

Winter Boy goes to his new place of work.
