

Sustainable Development, International Criminal Justice, and Treaty Implementation

Edited by

Sébastien Jodoin and Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger

CAMBRIDGE

Sustainable Development, International Criminal Justice, and Treaty Implementation

Edited by

SÉBASTIEN JODOIN

Yale School of Forestry & Environmental Studies
Centre for International Sustainable Development Law

MARIE-CLAIRE CORDONIER SEGGER

International Development Law Organization
Lauterpacht Centre for International Law
Centre for International Sustainable Development Law

CAMBRIDGE
UNIVERSITY PRESS

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

Cambridge, New York, Melbourne, Madrid, Cape Town,
Singapore, São Paulo, Delhi, Mexico City

Cambridge University Press

32 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10013-2473, USA

www.cambridge.org

Information on this title: www.cambridge.org/9781107032934

© Cambridge University Press 2013

This publication is in copyright. Subject to statutory exception and to the provisions of relevant collective licensing agreements, no reproduction of any part may take place without the written permission of Cambridge University Press.

First published 2013

Printed in the United States of America

A catalog record for this publication is available from the British Library.

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

Sustainable development, international criminal justice, and treaty implementation / Sébastien Jodoin, Yale University, School of Forestry & Environmental Studies, Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger Centre for International Sustainable Development Law, editors.

pages cm
Includes index.

ISBN 978-1-107-03293-4 (hardback)

1. Sustainable development – Law and legislation. 2. International criminal law. 3. Environmental law, International. I. Jodoin, Sébastien, 1982– editor of compilation. II. Cordonier Segger, Marie-Claire, 1973– editor of compilation.

K3585.s865 2013

344.04'6–dc23 2012051701

ISBN 978-1-107-03293-4 Hardback

Cambridge University Press has no responsibility for the persistence or accuracy of URLs for external or third-party Internet Web sites referred to in this publication and does not guarantee that any content on such Web sites is, or will remain, accurate or appropriate.

List of Editors, Contributors, and Editorial Assistants

EDITORS

Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger is a leading international jurist in the field of sustainable economic development. She serves as Head of Economic Law for the International Development Law Organization, spearheading legal programs on climate finance and green economy, natural resources governance, and sustainable trade and investment. Pro bono, she is also a Councillor of the World Future Council, a Visiting Professor for the University of Chile, an Affiliated Fellow at the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law at Cambridge University, Senior Director of the Centre for International Sustainable Development Law (CISDL), Rapporteur of the Sustainable Resources Governance Committee of the International Law Association, and Co-Lead of the World Bank's Environment and Natural Resources Law Thematic Working Group, among other roles. She has authored or edited 14 books, including Sustainable Development Law (OUP 2004), Sustainable Development in World Trade Law (Kluwer 2005), and Sustainable Development in World Investment Law (Kluwer 2010); and more than 80 papers in five languages. She holds a BA Hons, degrees in common and civil law from McGill University where she held Millennium and Wainwright Scholarships, a master's degree from Yale University where she held a Teaching Fellowship; and a doctorate in international law from Oxford University, where she held Chevening and SSHRC awards.

Sébastien Jodoin is a PhD Candidate, Trudeau Scholar, and SSHRC Doctoral Fellow at the Yale School of Forestry & Environmental Studies and a member of the Governance, Environment, and Markets Initiative at Yale. He also serves as a Lead Counsel with the Centre for International Sustainable Development Law and directs the One Justice Project, which seeks the recognition, investigation, and prosecution of serious forms of economic, social, and environmental harm as crimes under domestic and international law. Jodoin previously worked with the Canadian Centre for International Justice, Amnesty International Canada, and the United Nations International Criminal Tribunals for Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia. He holds graduate degrees in law, international law, and international relations from McGill University, the London School of Economics, and the University of Cambridge and has been called to the bar in Ontario. Sébastien has received numerous awards and honours, including the 2012 Public Scholar Award from the Yale Graduate School of Arts & Sciences, a John Humphrey Fellowship in Human Rights from the Canadian Council on International Law, and a Public Interest Law Articling Fellowship from the Law Foundation of Ontario.

CONTRIBUTORS

Rt. Hon. Sir Dennis C. M. Byron is the President of the Caribbean Court of Justice. He also serves as President of the Commonwealth Judicial Education Institute and is a former President of the United Nations International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and a former Chief Justice of the Eastern Caribbean Supreme Court. In 2000, Justice Byron was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II and was appointed a member of Her Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council. In 2004, he was appointed as an Honorary Bencher of the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple.

Riane Eisler is President of the Center for Partnership Studies, keynotes conferences worldwide, consults for governments and businesses, and pioneered the extension of human rights to 'women's rights' and 'children's rights'. Her books have been translated into 30 languages and include The Real Wealth of Nations, offering a new conceptual framework for economics, and The Chalice and the Blade, a new reading of our past and present, and the possibilities for our future.

Matthew Gillett is a Legal Officer in the Office of Prosecutor of the UN International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. He previously worked in the Trial Chambers in the United Nations International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and in the Office of the Prosecutor at the International Criminal Court.

Dr. Maja Göpel is a political economist with a focus on institutionalism that combines theory and practice in her engagement for fair and sustainable societies. Since November 2006, Maja has worked with the World Future Council, first as Campaign Manager for Climate and Energy issues and now as Director of Future Justice. Maja holds a Ph.D. in Global Political Economy in the field of World Trade and has studied at the universities of Siegen, Sevilla, Fribourg, Hamburg, York (Toronto), and Kassel.

Alexandra R. Harrington is a Visiting Assistant Professor of Law at Albany Law School and a D.C.L. candidate at the McGill University Faculty of Law. She is also an Associate Fellow at the Centre for International Sustainable Development Law.

Jarrold Heburn is a candidate for a DPhil in international law at the University of Oxford and a Legal Research Fellow with the Centre for International Sustainable Development Law. He has experience in the Competition group of the Australian corporate law firm Mallesons Stephen Jaques. He holds an LLB from the University of Melbourne and BCL and MPhil degrees from the University of Oxford.

Prof. Fannie Lafontaine is a Professor in the Law Faculty of Laval University and the Director of the International Criminal and Humanitarian Law Clinic. She previously worked inter alia at the United Nations (OHCHR) and at the International Commission of Inquiry on Darfur. She has published mainly in the fields of international criminal law, Canadian criminal law, and international and Canadian human rights law; she is the author of the book Prosecuting Genocide, Crimes against Humanity and War Crimes in Canadian Courts (Carswell 2012).

Prof. Lisa J. Laplante is a human rights lawyer who worked with the Peruvian Truth and Reconciliation Commission. She is a Visiting Law Professor at Marquette University and a project director with Praxis: An Institute for Social Justice. She has worked with Human Rights First, Human Rights Watch, the International Institute of Human Rights in Costa Rica, and the Center for International Justice and Law in Costa Rica. She holds a BA from Brown University, an MEd from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, and a JD from New York University School of Law, where she was a Root-Tilden-Kern Public Interest Scholar.

Prof. Frédéric Mégret is an Associate Professor of Law at the McGill University Faculty of Law, where he serves as the Canada Research Chair on the Law of Human Rights and Legal Pluralism and the Director of the McGill Clinic for the Sierra Leone Special Court. He has worked for the International Committee of the Red Cross, assisted the defence counsel of one of the accused before the UN International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda, and was a member of the French delegation at the Rome conference that created the International Criminal Court. Professor Mégret has also advised the Liberian government on the design of a human rights vetting procedure for its armed forces.

Salim A. Nakhjavani is Assistant Co-Prosecutor at the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia and Senior Lecturer at the Faculty of Law of the University of Cape Town, South Africa, where he conducts research and teaches international criminal law and public international law.

Dr. Roger O'Keefe is a Senior Lecturer in Law and the Deputy Director of the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law at the University of Cambridge, as well as a Fellow of Magdalene College, Cambridge. He has published and lectured widely on international criminal law and on the international legal protection of cultural property. His book, The Protection of Cultural Property in Armed Conflict (Cambridge University Press 2006), has recently been reissued in paperback.

Ken Roberts is a Canadian lawyer called to the bar of Ontario. He has worked at the United Nations International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia since 1998, where he has held positions including Deputy Registrar and Senior Legal Officer in Chambers. He has published a number of articles in the area of international criminal law and is Chairperson of the Board of Directors of the NGO International Criminal Law Services Foundation.

Pubudu Sachithanandan is an Associate Trial Attorney in the Office of the Prosecutor of the International Criminal Court, where he has worked since 2003. Previously, he worked as a research assistant at the University of Heidelberg and the University of Colombo. He holds an LLB and an LLM in public international law from the University of London and an MSt in international human rights from the University of Oxford.

Prof. Charles Séguin is an Assistant Professor in environmental economics at the Université du Québec in Montréal. He holds a PhD in natural resource economics from the University of California, Berkeley, and holds degrees in economics from McGill University and Queen's University.

Prof. Gerry Simpson holds a Chair of Law at the University of Melbourne Law School and is a Professor of Public International Law at the London School of Economics and Political Science. He is the author of Great Powers and Outlaw States (awarded the American Society of International Law's annual prize for Pre-eminent Contribution to Creative Legal Scholarship) and the recently published Law, War and Crime: War Crimes Trials and the Reinvention of International Law.

Alain-Guy Tachou-Sipowo is a candidate for an LLD in international law at Laval University in Québec; a contributor to the Institute of Security Studies of Pretoria, South Africa; and a research and teaching assistant to the Peace and Security Program of the Institut Québécois des Hautes Études Internationales.

EDITORIAL ASSISTANTS

Hannah Cochrane currently serves as Legal and Research adviser to the New Zealand Immigration and Protection Tribunal. She previously interned with the International Federation for Human Rights and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda and holds a J.D. from Pace University School of Law.

Geraint Edwards is currently Head of Policy at an EU legal affairs company in Brussels. Previously he was Maitre de Langues at the Law Faculty of the University of Angers in France, teaching English and European law.

Katherine Loftis currently serves as a Legal Officer with the One Justice Project and as an Associate Fellow with the Centre for International Sustainable Development

Law. She holds a BCL and LLB as well as an MA in English literature from McGill University.

Megan McKee holds a JD from the University of Pittsburgh School of Law and a BA from McGill University. She is currently a senior editor and editorial board member at JURIST Legal News & Research.

Nathalie Senst is a lawyer in Toronto. She holds an LLB from the University of Ottawa. Through her passion for human rights and development, she has lived and worked in both Cambodia and Tanzania.

Foreword

Rt. Hon. Sir Dennis C. M. Byron

The challenges facing the world are immense and unprecedented. If overuse in recent years has rendered this statement hackneyed, its urgency cannot be overstated. As the global population continues to expand, the planet's ecosystems teeter on the brink of irreversible collapse. Meanwhile, millions of people continue to live in dire poverty, struggling to meet their basic needs despite expanded economic activity that has greatly increased the wealth and material well-being of some segments of the population.

It is not only the scale of the challenges facing us that is unprecedented; it is also their increasing interconnectedness. From the current crisis in the global financial system to the devastating effects of climate change, the interrelated nature of the factors determining sustainable development is undeniable. Sadly, the diagnostic posed by the Brundtland Commission on Environment and Development is as accurate today as it was 25 years ago when it was first posed, because the world continues to face a series of interlocking global crises in the fields of environment, development, and energy that are 'rapidly closing the options for future generations'.¹

In this context, it is clear that the challenge of achieving sustainable development raises fundamental questions of justice on a global scale. How can we ensure that the fruits of development are shared equitably, while also sustaining the ecosystems on which all life depends? What should be our response to individuals, corporations, or governments that seriously infringe on the human rights of others, destroy the basic conditions that make development possible, or carry out gross environmental destruction? What responsibilities do current generations have toward generations to come? Such questions touch on different conceptions of justice – distributive, retributive, and restorative.

¹ Brundtland Commission, Our Common Future: Report of the World Commission on Environment and Development (2007), 8.

The connection to distributive justice is clear. Many of the earth's resources are finite, and those that are not are being taxed to the limit. Experts predict a future increasingly marred by resource conflicts, and the gap between the rich and the poor continues to grow. The question of how to achieve a fair and socially just allocation of resources, both among and between generations, is thus one of the most pressing of our time.

But it is increasingly evident that we must also consider aspects of retributive and restorative justice to address the challenges posed by sustainable development. The last hundred years have seen the rise of international criminal law in the wake of the Second World War – from the Nuremberg and Tokyo tribunals, to the international tribunals for the former Yugoslavia, Rwanda, Sierra Leone, and Cambodia and the International Criminal Court. Nevertheless, the tools of international criminal law have remained underdeveloped and undertheorised with respect to their connection to development, and sustainability, and social justice. And yet it can be argued that serious violations of economic, social, and cultural rights and environmental destruction on a large scale often spring from the intentional acts of individuals, rather than from systemic causes alone, and these behaviours may be morally reprehensible enough for individual criminal liability to attach to their perpetrators. Individual criminal liability therefore holds tremendous potential to strengthen the rule of law by ensuring compliance with the global norms and fundamental rights that underpin it. After all, as propounded in a famous dictum of the International Military Tribunal in Nuremberg, international crimes are 'committed by men, not by abstract entities, and only by punishing individuals who commit such crimes can the provisions of international law be enforced'.

A restorative conception of justice may also provide important insights for the field of sustainable development. International criminal processes aimed at truth, reconciliation, and accountability in the wake of crimes and conflicts may support the conditions for sustainable development in the future, and the concepts underpinning sustainable development may, in turn, inform the practice of international criminal tribunals. Indeed, although the contributions of international courts and tribunals to global justice cannot be underestimated, the future of international criminal justice necessarily lies at the domestic level through the effective prosecution of international crimes, strengthened legal systems, and enhanced opportunities for the rule of law and justice.

Bringing together these different conceptions of justice in the service of sustainable development is vital to mounting a robust response to the challenges we face. This book offers exciting perspectives on this integration, providing wide-ranging analyses of the intersections between sustainable development and international criminal justice by leading scholars and practitioners in these fields. As such, it makes an important contribution towards developing a conceptual basis to underpin future thinking in this domain. It interrogates the boundaries of criminalisation as a means to tackle the challenges of sustainable development and explores future directions to end impunity for egregious acts and conduct that are so crucial in securing a sustainable and just future for all. The contributions in this book also offer original reflections on the linkages between the objectives and means of achieving sustainable development and the pursuit of international criminal justice. These reflections probe the limitations of international law's fragmented response to the complex and interrelated problems that bedevil us at the intersections of criminality, sustainability, and development.

In his opening argument at the International Military Tribunal in Nuremberg, Justice Jackson, Counsel for the United States, declared as follows:

The privilege of opening the first trial in history for crimes against the peace of the world imposes a grave responsibility. It is a responsibility that the wrongs which we seek to condemn and punish have been so calculated, so malignant, and so devastating, that civilization cannot tolerate their being ignored, because it cannot survive their being repeated.²

By exploring the fundamental linkages between international criminal justice and sustainable development, this book offers powerful insights into a broader range of wrongs that we should seek to address, as well as a broader range of means for restoring peace to the world. I am hopeful that some of the ideas presented in this book will be taken up by others for the benefit of present and future generations.

² "Opening Statement before the International Military Tribunal," Trial of the Major War Criminals before the International Military Tribunal (Nuremberg: IMT, 1947), 98.

Acknowledgments

The World Future Council and the Centre for International Sustainable Development Law provided significant support for the production of this volume, and the assistance of both institutions is gratefully acknowledged. We are particularly grateful to Jakob von Uexkell, Justice Christopher Weeramantry, and Dr. Maja Göpel who, in the World Future Council's project on future justice and on crimes against future generations, were enthusiastic supporters of the research that has been included in this volume and the many related initiatives, meetings, and reports that have accompanied it over the last four years.

We must also thank many former judges and colleagues at the International Criminal Tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda, who were very supportive of this research. We are pleased that a few of them were able to contribute chapters to this volume.

We dedicate this book to our spouses, Sebastien's loving and supportive wife, Sarah, who endured quite a few lonely evenings and weekends in The Hague, Arusha, Cambridge, Ottawa, and New Haven so that he could work on this book; and Marie-Claire's brilliant and kind husband, Markus, whose companionship and patience have proven beyond measure over the years.

Sébastien Jodoin
Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger

Table of Abbreviations

CISDL	Centre for International Sustainable Development Law
ECCC	Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia
ECHR	European Court of Human Rights
ICC	International Criminal Court
ICCPR	International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights
ICESCR	International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights
ICJ	International Commission of Jurists
ICJ	International Court of Justice
ICL	International Criminal Law
ICTR	International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda
ICTY	International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia
IGOs	Intergovernmental Organizations
IHL	International Humanitarian Law
ILA	International Law Association
IMT	International Military Tribunal
IPCC	Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change
JCE	Joint Criminal Enterprise
JPOI	Johannesburg Plan of Implementation
MEA	Multilateral Environmental Agreements
NGOs	Non-governmental Organizations
OAS	Organization of American States
OECD	Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development
SCSL	Special Court for Sierra Leone
SPSC	Special Panel for Serious Crimes in East Timor
STL	Special Tribunal for Lebanon
TRC	Truth and Reconciliation Commission
UNCBD	United Nations Convention on Biological Diversity
UNCCD	United Nations Convention to Combat Desertification

UNCED	United Nations Conference on Environment and Development
UNDP	United Nations Development Programme
UNEP	United Nations Environment Programme
UNESCO	United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization
UNFCCC	United Nations Framework Convention on Climate Change
UNGA	United Nations General Assembly
UNSC	United Nations Security Council
WFC	World Future Council
WHO	World Health Organization
WSSD	World Summit on Sustainable Development

SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT, INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL JUSTICE, AND TREATY IMPLEMENTATION

Sustainable Development, International Criminal Justice, and Treaty Implementation provides a serious and timely perspective on how the implementation of international criminal law can protect the interests of future generations. With contributions from leading academics and international lawyers, this volume examines how the principles and practices of international criminal law can contribute to sustainable development in their elaboration, interpretation, and implementation, and vice versa. Debates canvass the potential and limitations of international criminalisation as a means for protecting the basic foundations of sustainable development; the role of existing international crimes in penalising serious forms of economic, social, environmental, and cultural harm; the indirect linkages that have developed between sustainable development and various mechanisms of criminal accountability and redress; and innovative proposals to broaden the scope of international criminal justice. With its rigorous and innovative arguments, this book provides a unique and urgent contribution to current debates on the future of global justice and sustainability.

Sébastien Jodoin is a PhD Candidate, Trudeau Scholar, and SSHRC Doctoral Fellow at the Yale School of Forestry & Environmental Studies and a member of the Governance, Environment, and Markets Initiative at Yale. He also serves as a Lead Counsel with the Centre for International Sustainable Development Law and directs the One Justice Project, which seeks the recognition, investigation, and prosecution of serious forms of economic, social, and environmental harm as crimes under domestic and international law. Jodoin previously worked with the Canadian Centre for International Justice, Amnesty International Canada, and the United Nations International Criminal Tribunals for Rwanda and the former Yugoslavia. He most recently received the 2012 Public Scholar Award from the Yale Graduate School of Arts and Sciences for conducting research 'that engages and betters the world at large'.

Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger is an international lawyer, scholar, and executive in the field of sustainable development. She is Head of Economic Law for the International Development Law Organisation (IDLO), an intergovernmental organisation headquartered in Rome, Italy, with a unique mandate for rule of law and development. Through the IDLO, she provides legal advice and technical assistance on the negotiation and implementation of international treaties on sustainable development to countries in the Americas, Africa, and Asia Pacific and to the United Nations. Dr Cordonier Segger also serves, pro bono, as Councillor of the World Future Council, Rapporteur for the International Law Association's Committee on Sustainable Resources Governance, Senior Director of the Centre for International Sustainable Development Law (CISDL), Affiliated Fellow in the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law at Cambridge University, and Visiting Professor in the University of Chile Faculty of Law. She has published more than 80 papers and 14 books on sustainable development law and policy in five languages, and is co-editor of the Cambridge University Press series on Treaty Implementation for Sustainable Development. She holds a DPhil (Oxon), MEM (Yale), BCL and LLB (McGill), and BA Hons (Carl).

TREATY IMPLEMENTATION FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

Over the past three decades, a series of international treaties have entered into force to address pressing global concerns of social and economic development and environmental protection. On climate change, biodiversity and biosafety, desertification, agriculture and seeds, and trade and investment liberalisation, new regimes have been established to implement global commitments related to sustainable development, many with nearly universal membership. Successful domestic implementation of these international treaty regimes is one of the most significant challenges facing international law today. Although much has been written on the content and form of treaty law, there is relatively little that examines the transition from international legal theory and treaty texts to domestic regulation and practice.

This series of books addresses this need and provides a serious contribution to ongoing global debates by conducting a detailed analysis of how myriad new treaty regimes that cover the future's most pressing concerns can be made to work in practice.

Series Editors:

Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger

Markus Wilhelm Gehring

Volumes in the Series:

Legal Aspects of Implementing the Cartagena Protocol on Biosafety

edited by Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger, Frederic Perron-Welch, and Christine Frison (2013)

Sustainable Development, International Criminal Justice, and Treaty Implementation

edited by Sébastien Jodoin and Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger (2013)

Contents

List of Editors, Contributors, and Editorial Assistants	page xi
Foreword	xvii
Rt. Hon. Sir Dennis C. M. Byron
Acknowledgments	xxi
Table of Abbreviations	xxiii
 PART I: ACCOUNTABILITY AND SUSTAINABILITY IN INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE
1 Introduction: The Sustainability of International Criminal Justice	3
Sébastien Jodoin and Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger
2 International Law, Criminal Justice, and Sustainable Development	17
Marie-Claire Cordonier Segger
3 Crime, Structure, Harm	36
Gerry Simpson
4 The Case for a General International Crime against the Environment	50
Frédéric Mégret
 PART II: SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT AND INTERNATIONAL CRIMES
5 Environmental Damage and International Criminal Law	73
Matthew Gillett	