Aunty Cake loved having parties.

You may be wondering why she was called Aunty Cake. Perhaps she looked like a cake?

Well, no. Look:

It was because of her wonderful cakes!

Aunty Cake baked delicious cakes. She was also very kind – and very, very forgetful!

On Monday, it was cold but she forgot her hat and her gloves.

Tuesday was wet but she couldn't find her umbrella.

On windy Wednesday, she could not see her scarf anywhere.

The rain on Thursday was terrible. It was cold and the wind was howling. Poor Auntie Cake couldn't find her umbrella, her scarf or her gloves!

But she did have her hat!

The wind blew her hat along the street, over the hedge, into the park and up into a cherry tree.

whoosh!

Aunty Cake shook the branches of the tree. Ripe cherries tumbled down all over her.

The cherries fell into her pockets and hung from her buttons. When at last her hat came down, it looked quite amazing!

Plip! Plop!

“Please don't pick the fruit!” a stern voice growled.

“Oh,” said Aunty Cake. “I wasn’t. It’s just that the wind ...

my hat ...

the cherries ...”

The police officer didn’t let her explain.

“What is your name and address?” she asked.

“My name is Aunty Cake.” But Aunty Cake was so flustered that she forgot her address.

A crowd gathered.

“Aunty Cake! That’s not a proper name,” said a girl in pearls.

“She’s a cherry thief!” shouted a mean lady in green.

Poor Aunty Cake said nothing.

“No! Wait!” called out a small boy with a big smile. “She is Aunty Cake. And she wouldn’t steal anything! She gives things to people. She even makes the cakes for our football matches!”

“If Aunty Cake is a thief, then I am a penguin,” joked the boy’s dad.

“Oh, really? Sorry, madam,” said the police officer.

Aunty Cake followed the boy and his dad.

“Thank you very much,” she said. “I don’t think I know you, do I?”
