PREFACE

The Christian Literature Society again returns thanks to all who have contributed to the contents of the China Mission Year Book for 1914. The number of topics to be handled is not likely to diminish, and the tendency of the book to become over-grown and unwieldy has all along been steadily resisted. In any event it was never intended to treat of every topic every year. Of course some subjects of outstanding importance and perennial interest must always find a place, but other subjects are to be found scattered over the previous Year Books where they can be looked up by those who wish.

The following among other topics were described in the Year Book of 1913 and are omitted in this volume:—

- Christian Endeavour.
- The Door of Hope.
- School for the deaf at Chefoo
- The Tsinanfu Institute of the B.M.S.
- The International Institute.
- Work among Foreigners in China.
- Work of the Y.W.C.A.
- Leading Colleges of China.

We have been compelled to reluctantly omit the following articles, and also some of the usual appendices from lack of space. They may be used next year. Our apologies are due to the writers.

- Industrial Education.
- The Chinese Woman Doctor, by Dr. Tsao.
- Some aspects of Literary Work, by Dr. Speicher.
- Work for the unlettered masses, by Professor Tung.
- Mission Presses in China, by C. M. Meyers.
- Among the Women of Peking, by Mrs. Ament.
- Chinese Students' Organisations Abroad, by David T. Yui.
- Chinese Christian Publications.

We have the following promises for next year:—

- The Jubilee Year of the China Inland Mission.
- Successful Village Missions, English, American and German.
- Work among Chinese Abroad.
- Survey of the Chinese Secular Press.

In the Statistical Table an attempt has been made to make it more complete, and also to classify the returns according to the Report of the Committee on Missionary Statistics to the Edinburgh Continuation Committee at its meeting at The Hague, November, 1913. (See Notes on Statistics, following the Directory). Many thanks are due to the Secretary of the China Continuation Committee for very valuable suggestions in regard to the arrangement and classification of these Statistics and also for the instructive diagrams based on these figures. It is hoped that this may serve as the beginning of more uniformity and accuracy in Mission Statistical Returns.

Some articles of the present Year Book have been with our permission reprinted elsewhere. The Year Book is glad to extend the circulation of such material by giving authors this privilege.

D. MACGILLIVRAY.
