PREFACE

IN Spite of civil war, flood, plague, famine and a world war, the Christian missionary work in China has continued and increased. This is the reason for another issue of the CHINA MISSION YEAR BOOK.

The Book aims to give some description of the background of the missionary effort, and therefore the articles on the political and economical development of the country have a place. Moreover, the facts described in these articles are also a help or hindrance to the progress of the missionary work. So also it was necessary that the Book should this year contain chapters on the great floods in North China and on the plague epidemic.

Each year it is planned that the Book shall contain one section which will be the distinctive feature of that issue. This year Part II is noteworthy as describing recent developments in ecclesiastical organization. Special mention might also be made of Part IV, which is a summary of the present situation as regards Christian Literature in China, and an indication of the large development anticipated in this department.

The arrangement of the contents of the Book follows the lines fixed in earlier years. The only exceptions to this are chapters XLIII and XLIV in Part VIII, which should have been placed in Parts III and IV, but to have done so would have delayed too much the publication of the whole Book.

The date of the publication of the Book has been deliberately changed from August to December. The period covered in each issue will be approximately from October to September of each year.

The number of pages this year is necessarily smaller than in previous years. Patriotic considerations have urged the conservation of paper here as well as in Western lands. The greatly increased cost of paper has also prompted this reduction in size in order that it might not be necessary to raise the price of the Book. However, no important topic has been omitted on this account. The reduction has been accomplished by holding very fast to the rule to admit no chapter which did not have a direct relation to the work of the past year. The chapter on "The Place of Woman in Protestant Missionary Work in China" is not an exception to this rule in a year when in many parts of the world the place of women has had much consideration. At such a time it is right to consider what women missionaries have done in China.

The China Continuation Committee is responsible for the CHINA MISSION YEAR BOOK only in that it appoints the Editorial Committee and the Editor. When articles in the book are the expression of the policies or the views of the China Continuation Committee, this fact is made clear; in all other cases, the writer of the paper is alone responsible for the opinion expressed.

To all the forty-two writers of these chapters, the editors would express their genuine appreciation of all their work. Many of these chapters contain the results of much research, and some of them of years of careful observation. It is the hearty coöperation of many busy workers that makes possible the publication of the YEAR BOOK. It would be invidious to mention a few where all have given of their best. Special acknowledgment, however, is due to the Rev. C. L. Boynton; who, as in previous years, has read all the proofs and is responsible for the typographical appearance of the book, as well as for the statistical tables. The Rev. M. T. Stauffer, Secretary of the Special Committee on Survey and Occupation, has prepared the charts, making graphic some of these statistics. The Index is also his work.
