

The SAGE Handbook of
Intellectual Property

Edited by Matthew David and Debora Halbert

The SAGE Handbook of Intellectual Property

Edited by Matthew David
and Debora Halbert

 SAGE reference

Los Angeles | London | New Delhi
Singapore | Washington DC

Los Angeles | London | New Delhi
Singapore | Washington DC

SAGE Publications Ltd
1 Oliver's Yard
55 City Road
London EC1Y 1SP

SAGE Publications Inc.
2455 Teller Road
Thousand Oaks, California 91320

SAGE Publications India Pvt Ltd
B 1/1 1 Mohan Cooperative Industrial Area
Mathura Road
New Delhi 110 044

SAGE Publications Asia-Pacific Pte Ltd
3 Church Street
#10-04 Samsung Hub
Singapore 049483

Editor: Chris Rojek
Assistant editor: Gemma Shields
Production editor: Shikha Jain
Copyeditor: Rosemary Campbell
Proofreader: Katie Forsythe
Indexer: Matthew David and Debora Halbert
Marketing manager: Michael Ainsley
Cover design: Wendy Scott
Typeset by: Ceveo Publisher Services
Printed and bound by CPI Group (UK) Ltd,
Croydon, CR0 4YY [for Antony Rowe]

At SAGE we take sustainability seriously. Most of our products are printed in the UK using FSC papers and boards. When we print overseas we ensure sustainable papers are used as measured by the Egmont grading system. We undertake an annual audit to monitor our sustainability.

Editorial arrangement © Matthew David and Debora Halbert 2015

- Chapter 1 © Anne Barron 2015
Chapter 2 © Sarah Louisa Phythian-Adams 2015
Chapter 3 © Shubha Ghosh 2015
Chapter 4 © Debora Halbert 2015
Chapter 5 © Daniel Gervais 2015
Chapter 6 © Peter K. Yu 2015
Chapter 7 © Salvador Millaleo and Hugo Cadenas 2015
Chapter 8 © Alex Perullo and Andrew J. Eisenberg 2015
Chapter 9 © Margaret Chon 2015
Chapter 10 © Chris Rojek 2015
Chapters 11 and 12 © Rosemary J. Coombe, Sarah Ives and Daniel Huizenga 2015
Chapter 13 © Chidi Oguamanam 2015
Chapter 14 © Colin Darch 2015
Chapter 15 © Lillian Álvarez 2015
Chapter 16 © Lee Edwards, Bethany Klein, David Lee, Giles Moss and Fiona Philip 2015
Chapter 17 © Dave O'Brien 2015
Chapter 18 © Jyh-An Lee 2015
Chapter 19 © Pradip Ninan Thomas 2015
Chapter 20 © Lisa Dobbin and Martin J. Zeilinger 2015
Chapter 21 © Raizel Liebler 2015
Chapter 22 © Claudy Op den Kamp 2015
Chapter 23 © John Tehranian 2015
Chapter 24 © Matthew David, Andrew Kirton and Peter Millward 2015
Chapter 25 © Matthew David and Natasha Whiteman 2015
Chapter 26 © Natasha Whiteman 2015
Chapter 27 © Greg Lastowka 2015
Chapter 28 © Jessica Silbey 2015
Chapter 29 © Uma Suthersanen 2015
Chapter 30 © Ian Brown 2015
Chapter 31 © Andrew Kirton 2015
Chapter 32 © David S. Wall 2015
Chapter 33 © Colin Darch 2015
Chapter 34 © Graham Duffield 2015
Chapter 35 © Susanna H.S. Leong 2015
Chapter 36 © Jake Dunagan 2015
Chapter 37 © William R. Kramer 2015
Chapter 38 © Matthew Rimmer 2015

Apart from any fair dealing for the purposes of research or private study, or criticism or review, as permitted under the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act, 1988, this publication may be reproduced, stored or transmitted in any form, or by any means, only with the prior permission in writing of the publishers, or in the case of reprographic reproduction, in accordance with the terms of licences issued by the Copyright Licensing Agency. Enquiries concerning reproduction outside those terms should be sent to the publishers.

Library of Congress Control Number: 2014940531

British Library Cataloguing in Publication data

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

ISBN 978-1-4462-6634-2

The SAGE Handbook of
Intellectual Property

SAGE was founded in 1965 by Sara Miller McCune to support the dissemination of usable knowledge by publishing innovative and high-quality research and teaching content. Today, we publish more than 750 journals, including those of more than 300 learned societies, more than 800 new books per year, and a growing range of library products including archives, data, case studies, reports, conference highlights, and video. SAGE remains majority-owned by our founder, and on her passing will become owned by a charitable trust that secures our continued independence.

Los Angeles | London | Washington DC | New Delhi | Singapore

此为试读, 需要完整PDF请访问: www.ertongbook.com

Figures and Tables

FIGURES

2.1	The monopoly problem	33
32.1	John Does sued for alleged file-sharing	618
36.1	Saatchi and Saatchi ad for University of Ghent 'Derf Denken' campaign	699
36.2	IFTF's artefact portrays a future technology that can automatically record and copyright thoughts	704

TABLES

18.1	Examples of institutional forms in the proprietary and the commons environments	338
18.2	FOSS foundations	340
30.1	Economic impact of copyright infringement	572

Notes on the Editors and Contributors

THE EDITORS

Matthew David teaches sociology at Durham University. His interests are in sharing and digital media. He is the author of Peer to Peer and the Music Industry: The Criminalization of Sharing (SAGE, 2010), Social Research: An Introduction (2nd Edition, with Carole D. Sutton, SAGE, 2011), Science in Society (Palgrave, 2005), and Knowledge Lost in Information (with David Zeitlyn and Jane Bex, Office of Humanities Press, 1998). He has also recently completed editing (with Peter Millward, SAGE, 2014) a four-volume collection on Researching Society Online. His most recent work in the area of file-sharing, live-streaming and new media has been published in The British Journal of Sociology, The European Journal of Social Theory, Sport in Society and Crime, Media, Culture, as well as in the Oxford Handbook of Internet Studies (Dutton ed., 2013). His research on other aspects of science and technology in society has been published recently in Current Sociology, International Sociology and Sociology Compass.

Debora Halbert is an Associate Professor of Political Science at the University of Hawai'i at Manoa where she teaches futures studies, public policy, and courses in law and society. In addition to being Department Chair for the political science department, Halbert is a faculty affiliate with the Hawaii Research Center for Futures Studies.

The bulk of her academic publications deal with intellectual property in the digital world, with an even more targeted focus on copyright law. Her most recent book, The State of Copyright: The Complex Relationships of Culture Creation in a Globalized World was published with Routledge in 2014. Her previous books include Intellectual Property in the Information Age: The Politics of Expanding Ownership Rights (Quorum, 1999) and Resisting Intellectual Property (Routledge, 2005). She has also published numerous articles on intellectual property as it relates to politics, culture, technology and the law. Her work on intellectual property is situated more broadly within a concern and interest in digital politics, the impact of information technology, and the future impacts of technology on social structures including politics, law and education. Thus, issues of file-sharing, privacy, digital politics, digital democracy, technology futures, and the concept of neuropolitics define additional research interests.

Halbert was recently a visiting scholar with Lund University's Pufendorf Institute working with members of the Lund Internet Institute on privacy, security and Internet issues. She continues to collaborate with LUii on these issues.

THE CONTRIBUTORS

Lillian Álvarez graduated in Law from the University of Havana in 1985. She has worked as a legal advisor in areas of foreign trade and investment and has 20 years' experience in the sphere of culture. She has worked as an advisor in the Cuban Ministry of Culture, in the National Center of Author's Rights and as a professor in the National Center of Higher Education for Culture in which she has given postgraduate courses in different aspects of Rights in Culture. She writes on author's rights as well as cultural rights, cultural diversity, trade treaties and other issues. Her articles have been published in journals and alternative websites. Her book, Author? Rights: The Debate Today was published in Ciencias Sociales (Social Sciences, 2006), Havana. This book engages an anti-hegemonic view on the issues. She won the Prize of Criticism of Social Sciences in her country. She has collaborated as a professor in the Latin American Program of Education at a Distance in Social Sciences (PLED). She has also participated in the Copy South Project. Currently she works in a network of intellectuals, artists and social fighters, 'In Defense of Humanity', collaborating on the subjects of access to knowledge, culture and the environment. As a poet she has published the books: Ni el aire ni el espejo (Neither the air nor the mirror; Editorial Extramuros, 2002); Ya los reyes no existen (The kings no longer exist; Editorial Abril, 2011), and Como un cristal temblando (Like a shimmering crystal; a personal anthology currently in press).

Anne Barron is an Associate Professor (Reader) in the Law Department at the London School of Economics, UK. Her current work centres on the relationships between public spheres, information capitalism and intellectual property rights.

Ian Brown is Associate Director of Oxford University's Cyber Security Centre and Professor of Information Security and Privacy at the Oxford Internet Institute. His research is focused on information security, privacy-enhancing technologies, and Internet regulation. He is an ACM Distinguished Scientist and BCS Chartered Fellow, and a member of the Information Commissioner's Technology Reference Panel. Since 1998 Dr Brown has variously been a trustee of Privacy International, the Open Rights Group, the Open Knowledge Foundation and the Foundation for Information Policy Research, and an adviser to Greenpeace, the Refugee Children's Consortium, Amnesty International and Creative Commons UK. He has consulted for the United Nations, Council of Europe, OECD, US Department of Homeland Security, JP Morgan, Credit Suisse, Allianz, McAfee, BT, the BBC, the European Commission, the Cabinet Office, Ofcom, and the National Audit Office.

Professor Brown's work has been covered by the BBC, CNN, CBC, Al Jazeera, and numerous newspapers and magazines. He has written for The Financial Times, Daily Telegraph, New Statesman and Guardian. In 2004 he was voted one of the 100 most influential people in the development of the Internet in the UK over the previous decade.

Hugo Cadenas is Assistant Professor in the Department of Anthropology at the University of Chile, has a PhD in Sociology at the University Ludwig Maximilian of Munich, Germany, a Master degree in Anthropology and Development at the University of Chile and a Bachelor in Social Anthropology at the same University. His areas of research include sociology of law, theory of social systems, anthropological theory, culture theory and socio-environmental issues. He is currently the editor of the journal of social sciences Revista Mad – Universidad de Chile.

Margaret Chon has been an active scholar and teacher of intellectual property and critical theory since joining the Seattle University School of Law faculty in 1996. She is currently the Donald & Lynda Horowitz Professor for the Pursuit of Justice, and was formerly Associate Dean for Research. She is the author of over 50 articles, book chapters and review essays on both intellectual property and on race. Professor Chon explores the global governance dimensions of intellectual property, especially their distributional consequences and social justice implications. Her immediate research projects include examining the role of certification marks in ensuring quality through global value networks, and exploring the role of public-private partnerships in providing access to IP-protected goods. Additional biographical information can be found at: www.law.seattleu.edu/faculty/faculty-profiles/margaret-chon.

Rosemary J. Coombe is the Tier One Canada Research Chair in Law, Communication and Culture at York University in Toronto, where she teaches in the Communication and Culture Joint PhD/MA Programme, the Sociolegal Studies Graduate Programme and the graduate program in Anthropology. She holds a joint PhD. in law and anthropology from Stanford University and publishes widely in anthropology, law and sociolegal studies. Her work addresses the social and cultural implications of intellectual property, the protection of traditional knowledge and traditional cultural expressions, the politics of cultural heritage and cultural property protections and the intersection of these with international human rights practices. Her forthcoming book, The Knowledge Economy and its Cultures, explores the political work that cultural inscriptions are accomplishing under conditions of neoliberalism. Her scholarship may be found at www.yorku.ca/rcoombe

Colin Darch is presently a researcher in the Democratic Governance and Rights Unit in the Faculty of Law at the University of Cape Town. In a career spanning over 40 years he has worked in universities and research centres in Ethiopia, Tanzania, Mozambique, Zimbabwe and Brazil. He holds a doctorate in social and economic analysis from the University of Bradford in the United Kingdom. Apart from his interest in intellectual property issues, Darch has written extensively on access to information, and is the co-author, with Peter G. Underwood, of Freedom of Information in the Developing World: The Citizen, the State and Models of Openness (Oxford: Chandos, 2010).

Lisa Dobbin holds an MA in Communication and Culture, an interdisciplinary program run jointly by York and Ryerson Universities in Toronto. Her writing has been published in a number of outlets and she is an editor of the forthcoming volume, Archives in Visual Art and Theory: Estonia and Beyond (Estonian Academy of Arts, 2015).

Jake Dunagan is Global Foresight Lead at verynice design studio, a social enterprise based in LA and Austin, TX. He is a founder, and remains an affiliate, of the Governance Futures Lab at the Institute for the Future. Jake's work has been centred on the concept of social invention and especially how institutions, organizations and societies are adapting to the Neurocentric Age, a time of unprecedented capacity to view and modify the mind. He has helped create new political systems design tools and structures of citizen participation, as well as led research in comprehensive cognitive design, judicial foresight, kids' technologies, and the future of work. Jake also creates visual media, interactive experiences, and public projects that inject alternative visions of the future into the mental ecology of the present.

Graham Dutfield is a law professor at the University of Leeds, where he is Director of the LLM in Intellectual Property Law. His research on intellectual property crosses several disciplines, including law, history, politics and philosophy. More general scholarly interests include the law, the science and business of creativity and technical innovation from the enlightenment to the present, especially in the life sciences. Other research areas include intellectual property and access to knowledge, human rights, sustainable development, health, agriculture, genetics, biotechnology, traditional knowledge and bioprospecting. His most recent books are Knowledge Management and Intellectual Property (with S. Arapostathis, Edward Elgar, 2013), Intellectual Property and Human Development: Current Trends and Future Scenarios (with T. Wong, Cambridge University Press, 2010), and Intellectual Property Rights and the Life Science Industries: Past, Present and Future, 2nd edition (World Scientific Publishing, 2009).

Lee Edwards is Associate Professor in Communication and PR in the School of Media and Communication, University of Leeds. She is author of Power, Diversity and Public Relations (Routledge, 2014), co-author of Understanding Copyright: Intellectual Property in the Digital Age (SAGE, 2015), and co-editor of Public Relations, Society and Culture: Theoretical and Empirical Explorations (Routledge, 2011). She has published widely on public relations and the operation of power.

Andrew J. Eisenberg received his PhD in ethnomusicology from Columbia University in 2009, and is currently Visiting Assistant Professor of Music at NYU Abu Dhabi. He has carried out extensive research on sound and social relations in Mombasa, Kenya, with the support of Fulbright Hays and the Social Science Research Council; and on the music recording industry in Nairobi, Kenya, under the auspices of the European Research Council-funded 'Music, Digitisation, Mediation' research programme. Among his recent publications is the article 'Hip Hop and Cultural Citizenship on Kenya's "Swahili Coast"' (Africa 82:4), which won the 2013 Richard Waterman prize from the Popular Music Section of the Society for Ethnomusicology. He is now completing a monograph based on his research in Mombasa, Kenya, entitled Sound and Citizenship: Islam, Aurality, and Social Belonging on the Kenyan Coast.

Daniel Gervais is a Professor of Law at Vanderbilt Law School where he focuses on international intellectual property law and is the Director of the Vanderbilt Intellectual Property Program. He spent 10 years researching and addressing policy issues on behalf of the World Trade Organization (WTO), the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO), the International Confederation of Societies of Authors and Composers (CISAC) and Copyright Clearance Center, Inc. (CCC). He is the author of The TRIPS Agreement: Drafting History and Analysis (Sweet & Maxwell, 2010), a leading guide to the treaty that governs international intellectual property rights. Before joining Vanderbilt Law School in 2008, Professor Gervais was acting dean of the Common Law Section at the University of Ottawa, where he also served as vice-dean for research and received funding for his research from the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada and from the Ontario Ministry of Research and Innovation. Before entering the academy, he practised law with Clark Woods and as a partner with the technology law firm BCF in Montreal. He also served as a consultant and legal officer at the WTO, as Head of the Copyright Projects section of the WIPO, and as vice-president of international relations at CCC. In addition, he chaired the sectoral work on culture, communications and information at the Canadian Commission for UNESCO, and was a consultant with the Paris-based Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development. Professor Gervais is a panellist (domain name) at the WIPO Arbitration and Mediation Centre. He has been a visiting professor at numerous international universities, a visiting scholar at Stanford Law School, and is a visiting lecturer at the University of Amsterdam. In 2012 he was the Gide Loyrette Nouel Visiting Chair at Sciences Po Law School in Paris. He is editor-in-chief of the peer-reviewed Journal of World Intellectual Property and editor of www.tripsagreement.net/.

Shubha Ghosh is the Vials Research Fellow and George Young Bascom Professor of Business Law and Elvehjem-Bascom Professor of Law at the University of Wisconsin. He has authored numerous scholarly articles and book chapters as well as several books in the fields of intellectual property, competition law and policy, international law and legal theory. At UW, Professor Ghosh currently teaches Intellectual Property, the Transactional Intellectual Property Seminar, and rotates among Patent, Copyright, and International Intellectual Property. Professor Ghosh has also worked with the World Intellectual Property Organization on the relationship between traditional knowledge and legal systems. Professor Ghosh's book Identity and Invention (focusing on human genome patenting and personalized medicine) was published by Cambridge University Press in 2012. He is researching a second book project comparing copyright and patent law in colonial India with developments in copyright and patent law since Independence in 1947. The book project is being considered for publication by Oxford University Press. Professor Ghosh is an author of numerous casebooks and teaching materials, including Transactional Intellectual Property (Lexis-Nexis 2012), now in its second edition.

Daniel Huizenga is a doctoral student in Socio-Legal Studies at York University. His research focuses on indigenous and customary land rights in South Africa, with a particular interest in how discourses of 'indigenous' and 'customary' are used by advocates, non-governmental organizations and legal practitioners. He received his BA in International Development Studies from Trent University in 2008 and his MA in Socio-Legal Studies from York University in 2010.

Sarah Ives addresses the connections between race, indigeneity, and natural resources in South Africa in her research. Based on 14 months of ethnographic fieldwork in the rural Western Cape between 2009 and 2013, her dissertation, 'Tea Stories: Cultivating Indigeneity in South Africa's Western Cape', explored the political, social and ecological relations in the farming of rooibos tea. Her current project examines race theory, politics and activism in a time of climate change. This research complements her previous work on ethnicity, television and development in South Africa. She received her doctorate in Anthropology from Stanford in 2014 and her Masters degree in Geography from the University of Washington in 2006. In 2014 Sarah will serve as a Postdoctoral Fellow in Stanford's 'Thinking Matters' program in liberal education.

Andrew Kirton is a Lecturer in the Department of Sociology, Social Policy & Criminology at the University of Liverpool. His analyses of the development of 'anti-file-sharing legislation' and of conflicts surrounding the circulation of intellectual property online reflect a broad interest in the relationship between culture, media and economy.

Bethany Klein is Senior Lecturer in Media and Communication in the School of Media and Communication, University of Leeds. She is author of As Heard on TV: Popular Music in Advertising (Ashgate, 2009) and co-author of Understanding Copyright: Intellectual Property in the Digital Age (SAGE, 2015).

William R. Kramer has a BS in wildlife biology, an MA in Environmental Policy and a PhD in Political Science (Futures Studies). He has worked as a wildlife biologist for the Smithsonian Institution and the US Fish and Wildlife Service as Chief of the Branch of Endangered Species Recovery and Consultation. He subsequently taught biology and bioethics. His interests in astrobiology brought him to the University of Hawaii where he completed his dissertation regarding the relationship between bioethics and concepts of the ownership of life in the context of space exploration. As part of that work, he spent two weeks in a Mars simulation habitat in the high desert of Utah, provided mission support for NASA's Hawaii Space Exploration Analog and Simulation, and lectures at the International Space University in Strasbourg, France and elsewhere on a range of astrobiology and bioethics topics. He lives in Kailua, Hawaii.

Greg Lastowka is a Professor of Law at Rutgers School of Law-Camden and co-director of the Rutgers Institute for Information Policy & Law. He teaches and researches in the areas of intellectual property and Internet law. He is the author of Virtua! Justice (Yale University Press, 2010).

David Lee is Lecturer in Cultural Industries and Communication in the School of Media and Communication, University of Leeds. He has published articles on creative labour and cultural policy in such journals as Media, Culture and Society, International Journal of Cultural Policy and Television and New Media.

Jyh-An Lee teaches Copyright, Patent, Intellectual Property Law, and Internet Law in the Faculty of Law at The Chinese University of Hong Kong. He holds a JSD from Stanford Law School and an LLM from Harvard Law School. Dr Lee is currently an advisory committee member for Copyright Amendment in the Taiwan Intellectual Property Office (TIPO) at the Ministry of Economic Affairs, and a member of the advisory board of the European Center for E-Commerce and Internet Law in Vienna. Before starting his academic career, he was a practising lawyer in Taiwan specializing in technology and business transactions.

Susanna H.S. Leong is an Associate Professor at the NUS Business School, National University of Singapore. Susanna received her LLB (Hons) from the National University of Singapore and her LLM (with Merit) from University College London, University of London. She teaches business-related law courses to undergraduate and graduate business students. Her research interests are in intellectual property and technology-related laws. She has published in several international and local academic journals. She is also the author of Intellectual Property Law of Singapore (Academy Publishing, 2013). Susanna is the Vice-Dean, Graduate Studies Office, NUS Business School. She is a Senior Fellow at the Intellectual Property Academy of Singapore. She is a member of the WIPO Domain Name Panel and a member of The Regional Centre for Arbitration, Kuala Lumpur (RCAKL) Panel. She is also a member of the Singapore Copyright Tribunal.

Raizel Liebler is the Head of Faculty Scholarship Initiatives at The John Marshall Law School and is a Berkman Center for Internet & Society at Harvard University Affiliate starting in Fall 2015. Raizel frequently presents and writes about the interaction between new, disruptive technologies and the law, including focusing on intellectual property, copyright, and rights of publicity. Her work has been cited by the California Supreme Court and in the New York Times. She is the founding editor of a well-regarded blog about technology and popular culture at The Learned Fangirl (www.thelearnedfangirl.com/).

Salvador Millaleo is Assistant Professor at the Center of Studies on Informatic Law at the University of Chile. He is a lawyer and possesses a doctorate (DPhil) in Sociology from the University of Bielefeld, Germany. He was a research fellow at the University of Bielefeld and at the Max Planck Institute for Foreign and International Criminal Law in Freiburg. His research topics currently include sociology of law, Internet regulation and society, cyberpolitics, digital activism, intellectual property and traditional knowledge.

Peter Millward is Senior Lecturer in Sociology at Liverpool John Moores University. He has published widely in the field of the sociology of sport, with particular interests in broadcasting rights, transnational business patterns and fan movements in association football. His most recent monograph is The Global Football League: Transnational Networks, Social Movements and Sport in the New Media Age (Palgrave, 2011).

Giles Moss is Lecturer in Media Policy in the School of Media and Communication, University of Leeds. His research focuses on media policy and the relationship between media and politics. He is co-author of Understanding Copyright: Intellectual Property in the Digital Age (SAGE, 2015) and has published articles in a range of journals including New Media & Society, The Journal of Information Technology & Politics and Political Studies.

Dave O'Brien is a lecturer in Cultural and Creative Industries at City University London. He specializes in cultural value and urban cultural policy issues and has a PhD in Sociology from the University of Liverpool. His most recent book, Cultural Policy, was published by Routledge in 2014. His next book, How Government Works, will be published by Palgrave in 2015.

Chidi Oguamanam obtained his legal training in Ife and Lagos in South Western Nigeria, before completing advanced degrees in law at the University of British Columbia. He is called to the Bar in Nigeria and Canada. With strong legal practice experience, he consults extensively with firms, NGOs, States, and intergovernmental and subnational bodies. He is a professor at the Centre for Law, Technology and Society in the Faculty of Law, University of Ottawa. His interdisciplinary research interests focus on various legal and policy issue linkages to intellectual property law, especially in the areas of biotechnology, biodiversity, genetic resources, pharmaceuticals, agricultural knowledge systems, food security and food systems; public health law and policy; indigenous peoples and indigenous knowledge; and human rights and the global governance of knowledge in development contexts. Widely published in law and interdisciplinary platforms, he is the author of International Law and Indigenous Knowledge (University of Toronto, 2006), Intellectual Property in Global Governance (Routledge, 2012), and co-editor of Innovation and Intellectual Property: Collaborative Dynamics in Africa (University of Cape Town, 2013), and Knowledge and Innovation in Africa: Scenario for the Future (University of Cape Town, 2013).

Claudy Op den Kamp is a PhD candidate at Transtechnology Research, Plymouth University, UK, finalizing a research project investigating the relationship between copyright ownership, digitization of archival film and the construction of film history. She is a graduate of the University of Amsterdam (Film and Television Studies) and the University of East Anglia (Film Archiving). She has worked as Haghefilm Conservation's Account Manager in Amsterdam and prior to that as a Film Restoration Project Leader at the Nederlands Filmmuseum. Currently, she works as a research assistant at the University of Zurich on a research project for the digitization and restoration of archival film.

Alex Perullo is an Associate Professor of Anthropology and African studies at Bryant University (USA). He has published two books on Tanzanian music: Live from Dar es Salaam:

Popular Music and Tanzania's Music Economy (2011) and Artistic Rights: Copyright Law for East African Musicians, Artists, Writers, and Other Authors (2012). He has also published articles in academic journals and edited volumes on migration, youth cultures, ageing and popular music in Africa. He is currently working on a book that examines ownership, rights and music in Tanzania, Ghana and the African diaspora.

Fiona Philip is currently a Research Fellow on the AHRC-funded project Parachive: Open Access Community Storytelling and the Digital Archive in the School of Media and Communication, University of Leeds. She was previously Postdoctoral Research Assistant for the ESRC-funded project Communicating Copyright: An Exploration of Copyright Discourses in the Digital Age.

Sarah Louisa Phythian-Adams researches and lectures in economics at the University of Liverpool. Her research interests are particularly focused on Arts & Cultural Economics and the impact of the creative industries sector, as well as behavioural economics and other applications of economic theory in 'non-standard' markets.

Matthew Rimmer is an Australian Research Council Future Fellow, an Associate Professor and Associate Director of Research at the ANU College of Law, and an Associate Director of the Australian Centre for Intellectual Property in Agriculture. He holds a BA (Hons) and a University Medal in literature, and a LLB (Hons) from the Australian National University. Rimmer received a PhD in law from the University of New South Wales for his dissertation on 'The Pirate Bazaar: The Social Life of Copyright Law'. He is a member of the ANU Climate Change Institute and a director of the Australian Digital Alliance. Dr Rimmer has published widely on copyright law and information technology, patent law and biotechnology, access to medicines, the plain packaging of tobacco products, clean technologies and traditional knowledge.

Dr Rimmer is the author of Digital Copyright and the Consumer Revolution: Hands off my iPod (Edward Elgar, 2007), Intellectual Property and Biotechnology: Biological Inventions (Edward Elgar, 2008) and Intellectual Property and Climate Change: Inventing Clean Technologies (Edward Elgar, 2011). He edited the collection, Patent Law and Biological Inventions (Federation Press, 2006), and co-edited the collections, Incentives for Global Public Health: Patent Law and Access to Essential Medicines (Cambridge University Press, 2010) and Intellectual Property and Emerging Technologies: The New Biology (Edward Elgar, 2012). Dr Rimmer was also a chief investigator in an Australian Research Council Discovery Project, 'Gene Patents In Australia: Options For Reform' (2003–2005), an Australian Research Council Linkage Grant, 'The Protection of Botanical Inventions' (2003), and an Australian Research Council Discovery Project, 'Promoting Plant Innovation in Australia' (2009–2011). He is currently the holder of an Australian Research Council Future Fellowship, 'Intellectual Property and Climate Change: Inventing Clean Technologies' (2011–2015).

Chris Rojek is Professor of Sociology at City University, London. He is the author of many books, the most recent of which are Pop Music, Pop Culture (Polity, 2011), Fame Attack: The Inflation of Celebrity and its Consequences (Bloomsbury, 2012) and Event Power (SAGE, 2013).

Jessica Silbey is a Law Professor at Suffolk University Law School in Boston, teaching in the areas of intellectual property and constitutional law. Professor Silbey's scholarly interests and expertise is in the cultural analysis of law, exploring the law beyond its doctrine to the contexts and processes in which legal relations develop and become significant for everyday actors. Professor Silbey has published widely in the field of law and film, exploring how film is used as a legal tool and how it becomes an object of legal analysis in light of its history as a cultural object and art form. Her books include The Eureka Myth: Creators, Innovators and Everyday Intellectual Property (Stanford University Press, 2015) and Law and Justice on the Small Screen (Hart Publishing, 2012). Professor Silbey received her BA from Stanford University and her JD and PhD (Comparative Literature) from the University of Michigan. After clerking for Judge Robert E. Keeton in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts and Judge Levin Campbell in the United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, she practised law in the disputes department of the Boston office of Foley Hoag LLP, focusing on intellectual property, bankruptcy and reproductive rights.

Uma Suthersanen holds a Chair in International Intellectual Property Law at Queen Mary, University of London. She is a Co-Director of Queen Mary Intellectual Property Research Institute, an Executive Committee Member of the British Literary and Artistic Copyright Association (having been the Chairman and Vice-Chairman from 2006–2013); an Executive Committee Member of the Association Littéraire et Artistique Internationale; and a Visiting Fellow of the Intellectual Property Academy of Singapore. She holds an LL.B (Hons) from the National University of Singapore, and an LL.M and Ph.D from Queen Mary, University of London. She edits the European Copyright and Design Reports (Sweet & Maxwell), and is a Founding Editor of the Queen Mary Perspectives in Intellectual Property series (Edward Elgar). She has written extensively on copyright and design laws, and her books include Design Law in the European Union and United States (Sweet & Maxwell, 2010), and Global Intellectual Property Law (Edward Elgar, 2008, with G. Dutfield). She is currently working on the 2nd edition of Global Intellectual Property Law, as well as on a monograph on cultural heritage and intellectual property rights (based on a UK Arts and Humanities Research Council grant, 2010–2012). She is the director of teaching modules in International and Comparative Copyright and Design Laws, and in Global Intellectual Property Law, both in the London and Paris LL.M programmes.

John Tehranian is an academic, attorney and author. He is the Irwin R. Buchalter Professor of Law at Southwestern Law School and has previously served as a tenured Professor of Law at the University of Utah, S.J. Quinney College of Law, and as a Visiting Professor of Law at Loyola Law School. A graduate of Harvard University and Yale Law School, he is the author of dozens of articles and two books, Whitewashed (NYU Press, 2009) and Infringement Nation (Oxford University Press, 2011). He is also a founding partner of One LLP, an intellectual property and entertainment law firm where he has litigated numerous high-profile intellectual property lawsuits, including those involving Madonna, Don Henley, B.B. King, Bettie Page, Jimi Hendrix and Perez Hilton, among others. In 2013, Variety's 'Legal Impact Report' recognized John as one of the world's top 50 entertainment lawyers. A frequent commentator for the broadcast and print media, he has spoken at numerous international conferences and his work has been widely cited, from testimony before Congress and decisions of the Israeli courts to amicus briefs before the United States Supreme Court and in such leading publications as the Yale Law Journal and Harvard Law Review.

Pradip Ninan Thomas is currently the Acting Head of School, School of Journalism & Communication, University of Queensland, Brisbane. He has written extensively on the political economy of communication, including a three-volume series on the media in India published by SAGE between 2010 and 2012. His latest publication is 'Public Sector Software and the Revolution: Digital Literacy in Communist Kerala', Media, Culture & Society 36(2): 258 (2014).

David S. Wall is Professor of Criminology at Durham University where he researches and teaches cybercrime, identity crime, policing and intellectual property crime. He has a sustained track record of funded research in these areas from the EU FP6 and FP7, ESRC, EPSRC, AHRC and other funders, he has also published a wide range of 40+ articles and 10+ books on these subjects which include: Cybercrime and the Culture of Fear: Policing the Reassurance Gap in Cybersecurity (Springer, forthcoming), Policing Cybercrime (Palgrave, 2014), Cybercrime: The Transformation of Crime in the Information Age (Polity, 2007, 2nd edn, 2015), Crime and Deviance in Cyberspace (ed., Ashgate, 2009), Cyberspace Crime (ed., Ashgate, 2003) and Crime and the Internet (ed., Routledge, 2001). He is an Academician of the Academy of Social Sciences (AcSS), a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts (FRSA) and was a member of the ESRC Grants Assessment Panel 2009–2012. He is the Head of the School of Applied Social Sciences at Durham University and was formerly Head of the School of Law (2005–2007) and Director of the Centre for Criminal Justice (2000–2005) at the University of Leeds.

Natasha Whiteman is Lecturer in Media and Communication at the University of Leicester. She received her PhD from the Institute of Education, University of London. Her research interests include the study of media fandoms and videogame cultures on the Internet and the ethics of contemporary media audiences. She is the author of Undoing Ethics: Rethinking Practice in Online Research (Springer, 2012).

Peter K. Yu holds the Kern Family Chair in Intellectual Property Law and is the founding director of the Intellectual Property Law Center at Drake University Law School. He has served as Wenlan Scholar Chair Professor at Zhongnan University of Economics and Law in Wuhan, China, and as a visiting professor of law at the University of Haifa, the University of Hong Kong, the University of Strasbourg, and Washington and Lee University. Born and raised in Hong Kong, Professor Yu is a leading expert in international intellectual property and communications law. A prolific scholar and an award-winning teacher, he is the author or editor of five books and more than 100 law review articles and book chapters. He serves as the general editor of The WIPO Journal published by the World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO). Professor Yu has spoken at events organized by WIPO, the International Telecommunication Union, the UN Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), the Chinese, US and EU governments and at leading research institutions from around the world. His lectures and presentations have spanned more than 25 countries on six continents, and his publications have appeared in Chinese and English and have been translated into Arabic, French, Hausa, Japanese, Persian, Portuguese, Spanish and Vietnamese.

Martin J. Zeilinger is a media scholar and practitioner whose work focuses on digital remix culture and practices of appropriation. He holds a PhD in Comparative Literature from the University of Toronto, and was the SSHRC Banting Postdoctoral Fellow in Law & Culture at York University from 2011–2013. Currently, he teaches at the University of Toronto and at the Ontario College for Art & Design (OCAD) University, and is a faculty member at the International Summer Institute for the Cultural Study of Law held annually at Osnabrück University, Germany. He is co-editor of Dynamic Fair Dealing (University of Toronto Press, 2014), an interdisciplinary volume on the IP challenges faced by digital practitioners. His work on the interplay between intellectual property law and contemporary cultural practices has also been published in MIT's Journal for Computer Music (2014), in the Journal of the International Association for the Study of Popular Music (2012), and in the books Sampling Media (Oxford University Press, 2014), The Perils of Pedagogy (McGill-Queen's UP, 2013), and Eyes Everywhere (Routledge, 2012). As part of his curatorial practice in digital media, he is co-director and co-curator of the annual Vector Game+Art Convergence Festival.