

HENRY FIELDING

TOM JONES

Introduction by Dr. Beryl Rowland

COMPLETE AND UNABRIDGED

CONTENTS

Dedication	25
------------	----

BOOK I

Containing as much of the birth of the foundling as is necessary or proper to acquaint the reader with the beginning of this history

CHAPTER	PAGE
1 The introduction to the work, or bill of fare to the feast	29
2 A short description of Squire Allworthy and a fuller account of Miss Bridget Allworthy, his sister	31
3 An odd accident which befell Mr. Allworthy at his return home. The decent behaviour of Mrs. Deborah Wilkins, with some proper animadversions on bastards	32
4 The reader's neck brought into danger by a description; his escape, and the great condescension of Miss Bridget Allworthy	35
5 Containing a few common matters, with a very uncommon observation upon them	37
6 Mrs. Deborah is introduced into the parish with a simile. A short account of Jenny Jones, with the difficulties and discouragements which may attend young women in the pursuit of learning	39
7 Containing such grave matter that the reader cannot laugh once through the whole chapter, unless peradventure he should laugh at the author	42
8 A dialogue between Mesdames Bridget and

	Deborah, containing more amusement but less instruction than the former	45
9	Containing matters which will surprise the reader	47
10	The hospitality of Allworthy; with a short sketch of the characters of two brothers, a doctor and a captain, who were entertained by that gentleman	49
11	Containing many rules, and some examples, concerning falling in love; descriptions of beauty, and other more prudential inducements to matrimony	52
12	Containing what the reader may, perhaps, expect to find in it	55
13	Which concludes the first book; with an instance of ingratitude which, we hope, will appear unnatural	58

Book II

Containing scenes of matrimonial felicity in different degrees of life, and various other transactions during the first two years after the marriage between Captain Blifl and Miss Bridget Allworthy

CHAPTER	PAGE
1 Showing what kind of a history this is; what it is like, and what it is not like	61
2 Religious cautions against showing too much favour to bastards, and a great discovery made by Mrs. Deborah Wilkins	62
3 The description of a domestic government founded upon rules directly contrary to those of Aristotle	64
4 Containing one of the most bloody battles, or rather duels, that were ever recorded in domestic history	67

- | | | |
|---|--|----|
| 5 | Containing much matter to exercise the judgement and reflection of the reader | 71 |
| 6 | The trial of Partridge, the schoolmaster, for incontinency; the evidence of his wife; a short reflection on the wisdom of our law; with other grave matters, which those will like best who understand them most | 75 |
| 7 | A short sketch of that felicity which prudent couples may extract from hatred; with a short apology for those people who overlook imperfections in their friends | 80 |
| 8 | A receipt to regain the lost affections of a wife which hath never been known to fail in the most desperate cases | 84 |
| 9 | A proof of the infallibility of the foregoing receipt in the lamentations of the widow; with other suitable decorations of death, such as physicians, &c., and an epitaph in the true style | 85 |

Book III

Containing the most memorable transactions which passed in the family of Mr. Allworthy, from the time when Tommy Jones arrived at the age of fourteen till he attained the age of nineteen. In this book the reader may pick up some hints concerning the education of children

CHAPTER	PAGE
1	Containing little or nothing 90
2	The hero of this great history appears with very bad omens. A little tale of so low a kind that some may think it not worth their notice. A word or two concerning a squire, and more relating to a gamekeeper and a schoolmaster 91
3	The character of Mr. Square, the philosopher, and Mr. Thwackum, the divine; with a dispute concerning—	96

4	Containing a necessary apology for the author, and a childish incident, which perhaps requires an apology likewise	98
5	The opinions of the divine and the philosopher concerning the two boys; with some reasons for their opinions, and other matters	100
6	Containing a better reason still for the before-mentioned opinions	104
7	In which the author himself makes his appearance on the stage	107
8	A childish incident, in which, however, is seen a good-natured disposition in Tom Jones	108
9	Containing an incident of a more heinous kind, with the comments of Thwackum and Square	110
10	In which Master Blifil and Jones appear in different lights	112

BOOK IV

Containing the time of a year

CHAPTER	PAGE
1	Containing five pages of paper 115
2	A short hint of what we can do in the sublime, and a description of Miss Sophia Western 117
3	Wherein the history goes back to commemorate a trifling incident that happened some years since; but which, trifling as it was, had some future consequences 119
4	Containing such very deep and grave matters that some readers, perhaps, may not relish it 122
5	Containing matter accommodated to every taste 124
6	An apology for the insensibility of Mr. Jones to all the charms of the lovely Sophia; in which, possibly, we may in a considerable degree lower his character in the estimation of those men of wit and gallantry who approve the heroes in most of our modern comedies	129

7	Being the shortest chapter in this book	132
8	A battle sung by the muse in the Homeric style, and which none but the classical reader can taste	133
9	Containing matters of no very peaceable colour	137
10	A story told by Mr. Supple, the curate. The penetration of Squire Western. His great love for his daughter, and the return to it made by her	140
11	The narrow escape of Molly Seagrim, with some observations for which we have been forced to dive pretty deep into Nature	143
12	Containing much clearer matters; but which flow from the same fountain with those in the preceding chapter	147
13	A dreadful accident which befell Sophia. The gallant behaviour of Jones, and the more dreadful consequences of that behaviour to the young lady; with a short digression in favour of the female sex	149
14	The arrival of a surgeon. His operations, and a long dialogue between Sophia and her maid	152

BOOK V

Containing a portion of time somewhat longer than half a year

CHAPTER	PAGE
1	Of the serious in writing, and for what purpose it is introduced
2	In which Mr. Jones receives many friendly visits

	during his confinement; with some fine touches of the passion of love scarce visible to the naked-eye	160
3	Which all who have no heart will think to contain much ado about nothing	164
4	A little chapter, in which is contained a little incident	166
5	A very long chapter, containing a very great incident	168
6	By comparing which with the former, the reader may possibly correct some abuse which he hath formerly been guilty of in the application of the word love	174
7	In which Mr. Allworthy appears on a sick-bed	179
8	Containing matter rather natural than pleasing	183
9	Which, among other things, may serve as a comment on that saying of Aeschines that "drunkenness shows the mind of a man, as a mirror reflects his person"	187
10	Showing the truth of many observations of Ovid and of other more grave writers who have proved beyond contradiction that wine is often the forerunner of incontinency	191
11	In which a simile in Mr. Pope's period of a mile introduces as bloody a battle as can possibly be fought without the assistance of steel or cold iron	193
12	In which is seen a more moving spectacle than all the blood in the bodies of Thwackum and Blifil, and of twenty other such, is capable of producing	196

Book VI

Containing about three weeks

CHAPTER	PAGE
1 Of love	200

2	The character of Mrs. Western. Her great learning and knowledge of the world, and an instance of the deep penetration which she derived from those advantages	202
3	Containing two defiances to the critics	207
4	Containing sundry curious matters	210
5	In which is related what passed between Sophia and her aunt	212
6	Containing a dialogue between Sophia and Mrs. Honour, which may a little relieve those tender affections which the foregoing scene may have raised in the mind of a good-natured reader	215
7	A picture of formal courtship in miniature, as it always ought to be drawn, and a scene of a tenderer kind, painted at full length	218
8	The meeting between Jones and Sophia	221
9	Being of a much more tempestuous kind than the former	223
10	In which Mr. Western visits Mr. Allworthy	227
11	A short chapter; but which contains sufficient matter to affect the good-natured reader	230
12	Containing love-letters, &c.	232
13	The behaviour of Sophia on the present occasion, which none of her sex will blame who are capable of behaving in the same manner. And the discussion of a knotty point in the court of conscience	236
14	A short chapter, containing a short dialogue between Squire Western and his sister	239

Book VII

Containing three days

CHAPTER	PAGE
1	A comparison between the world and the stage 241

2	Containing a conversation which Mr. Jones had with himself	244
3	Containing several dialogues	246
4	A picture of a country gentlewoman taken from life	250
5	The generous behaviour of Sophia towards her aunt	252
6	Containing great variety of matter	254
7	A strange resolution of Sophia, and a more strange stratagem of Mrs. Honour	258
8	Containing scenes of altercation of no very uncommon kind	262
9	The wise demeanour of Mr. Western in the character of a magistrate. A hint to justices of peace concerning the necessary qualifications of a clerk; with extraordinary instances of paternal madness and filial affection	265
10	Containing several matters natural enough, perhaps, but low	268
11	The adventure of a company of soldiers	272
12	The adventure of a company of officers	275
13	Containing the great address of the landlady, the great learning of a surgeon, and the solid skill in casuistry of the worthy lieutenant	281
14	A most dreadful chapter indeed, and which few readers ought to venture upon in an evening, especially when alone	285
15	The conclusion of the foregoing adventure	290

BOOK VIII

Containing above two days

	lous, being much the longest of all of our introductory chapters	294
2	In which the landlady pays a visit to Mr. Jones	299
3	In which the surgeon makes his second appearance	302
4	In which is introduced one of the pleasantest barbers that was ever recorded in history, the Barber of Baghdad nor he in Don Quixote not excepted	304
5	A dialogue between Mr. Jones and the barber	307
6	In which more of the talents of Mr. Benjamin will appear, as well as who this extraordinary person was	310
7	Containing better reasons than any which have yet appeared for the conduct of Partridge, an apology for the weakness of Jones, and some farther anecdotes concerning my landlady	313
8	Jones arrives at Gloucester and goes to the Bell; the character of that house and of a pettifogger which he there meets with	316
9	Containing several dialogues between Jones and Partridge, concerning love, cold, hunger, and other matters; with the lucky and narrow escape of Partridge as he was on the very brink of making a fatal discovery to his friend	320
10	In which our travellers meet with a very extraordinary adventure	324
11	In which the Man of the Hill begins to relate his history	331
12	In which the Man of the Hill continues his history	338
13	In which the foregoing story is farther continued	342
14	In which the Man of the Hill concludes his history	348
15	A brief history of Europe, and a curious discourse between Mr. Jones and the Man of the Hill	353

Book IX

Containing twelve hours

CHAPTER	PAGE
1 Of those who lawfully may, and of those who may not, write such histories as this	357
2 Containing a very surprising adventure indeed, which Mr. Jones met with in his walk with the Man of the Hill	361
3 The arrival of Mr. Jones with his lady at the inn; with a very full description of the Battle of Upton	364
4 In which the arrival of a man-of-war puts a final end to hostilities, and causes the conclusion of a firm and lasting peace between all parties	368
5 An apology for all heroes who have good stomachs, with a description of a battle of the amorous kind	372
6 A friendly conversation in the kitchen, which had a very common, though not very friendly, conclusion	375
7 Containing a fuller account of Mrs. Waters, and by what means she came into that distressful situation from which she was rescued by Jones	379

Book X

In which the history goes forward about twelve hours

CHAPTER	PAGE
1 Containing instructions very necessary to be perused by modern critics	383

2	Containing the arrival of an Irish gentleman, with very extraordinary adventures which ensued at the inn	385
3	A dialogue between the landlady and Susan the chambermaid, proper to be read by all inn-keepers and their servants; with the arrival and affable behaviour of a beautiful young lady, which may teach persons of condition how they may acquire the love of the whole world	389
4	Containing infallible nostrums for procuring universal disesteem and hatred	393
5	Showing who the amiable lady and her unamiable maid were	395
6	Containing, among other things, the ingenuity of Partridge, the madness of Jones, and the folly of Fitzpatrick	399
7	In which are concluded the adventures that happened at the inn at Upton	402
8	In which the history goes backward	406
9	The escape of Sophia	409

Book XI

Containing about three days

CHAPTER	PAGE
1 A crust for the critics	415
2 The adventures which Sophia met with after her leaving Upton	418
3 A very short chapter, in which, however, is a sun, a moon, a star, and an angel	424
4 The history of Mrs. Fitzpatrick	425
5 In which the history of Mrs. Fitzpatrick is continued	430

6	In which the mistake of the landlord throws Sophia into a dreadful consternation	434
7	In which Mrs. Fitzpatrick concludes her history	436
8	A dreadful alarm in the inn, with the arrival of an unexpected friend of Mrs. Fitzpatrick	442
9	The morning introduced in some pretty writing. A stage-coach. The civility of chambermaids. The heroic temper of Sophia. Her generosity. The return to it. The departure of the company and their arrival at London; with some remarks for the use of travellers	447
10	Containing a hint or two concerning virtue, and a few more concerning suspicion	451

BOOK XII

Containing the same individual time with the former

CHAPTER	PAGE
1 Showing what is to be deemed plagiarism in a modern author, and what is to be considered as lawful prize	455
2 In which, though the squire doth not find his daughter, something is found which puts an end to his pursuit	457
3 The departure of Jones from Upton, with what passed between him and Partridge on the road	459
4 The adventure of a beggar-man	463
5 Containing more adventures which Mr. Jones and his companion met on the road	466
6 From which it may be inferred that the best things are liable to be misunderstood and misinterpreted	470
7 Containing a remark or two of our own, and many more of the good company assembled in the kitchen	472

8	In which Fortune seems to have been in a better humour with Jones than we have hitherto seen her	476
9	Containing little more than a few odd observations	480
10	In which Mr. Jones and Mr. Dowling drink a bottle together	482
11	The disasters which befell Jones on his departure for Coventry, with the sage remarks of Partridge	486
12	Relates that Mr. Jones continued his journey, contrary to the advice of Partridge, with what happened on that occasion	488
13	A dialogue between Jones and Partridge	495
14	What happened to Mr. Jones in his journey from St. Albans	499

Book XIII

Containing the space of twelve days

CHAPTER	PAGE
1 . An invocation	502
2 What befell Mr. Jones on his arrival in London	504
3 A project of Mrs. Fitzpatrick, and her visit to Lady Bellaston	508
4 Which consists of visiting	510
5 An adventure which happened to Mr. Jones at his lodgings, with some account of a young gentleman who lodged there, and of the mistress of the house and her two daughters	512
6 What arrived while the company were at breakfast, with some hints concerning the government of daughters	517

7	Containing the whole humours of a masquerade	521
8	Containing a scene of distress, which will appear very extraordinary to most of our readers	525
9	Which treats of matters of a very different kind from those in the preceding chapter	529
10	A chapter which, though short, may draw tears from some eyes	532
11	In which the reader will be surprised	534
12	In which the thirteenth book is concluded	539

Book XIV

Containing two days

CHAPTER		PAGE
1	An essay to prove that an author will write the better for having some knowledge of the subject on which he writes	542
2	Containing letters and other matters which attend amours	545
3	Containing various matters	549
4	Which we hope will be very attentively perused by young people of both sexes	552
5	A short account of the history of Mrs. Miller	555
6	Containing a scene which we doubt not will affect all our readers	558
7	The interview between Mr. Jones and Mr. Nightingale	562
8	What passed between Jones and old Mr. Nightingale, with the arrival of a person not yet mentioned in this history	566
9	Containing strange matters	571
10	A short chapter, which concludes the book	574

Book XV

In which the history advances about two days

CHAPTER	PAGE
1 Too short to need a preface	576
2 In which is opened a very black design against Sophia	577
3 A further explanation of the foregoing design	580
4 By which it will appear how dangerous an advocate a lady is when she applies her eloquence to an ill purpose	584
5 Containing some matters which may affect, and others which may surprise, the reader	585
6 By what means the Squire came to discover his daughter	590
7 In which various misfortunes befall poor Jones	594
8 Short and sweet	599
9 Containing love-letters of several sorts	601
10 Consisting partly of facts, and partly of observations upon them	606
11 Containing curious, but not unprecedented, matter	609
12 A discovery made by Partridge	611

Book XVI

Containing the space of five days

CHAPTER	PAGE
1 Of prologues	615
2 A whimsical adventure which befell the squire, with the distressed situation of Sophia	616

3	What happened to Sophia during her confinement	622
4	In which Sophia is delivered from her confinement	625
5	In which Jones receives a letter from Sophia, and goes to a play with Mrs. Miller and Partridge	629
6	In which the history is obliged to look back	634
7	In which Mr. Western pays a visit to his sister, in company with Mr. Blifil	637
8	Schemes of Lady Bellaston for the ruin of Jones	639
9	In which Jones pays a visit to Mrs. Fitzpatrick	642
10	The consequence of the preceding visit	645

Book XVII

Containing three days

CHAPTER		PAGE
1	Containing a portion of introductory writing	649
2	The generous and grateful behaviour of Mrs. Miller	650
3	The arrival of Mr. Western, with some matters concerning the paternal authority	653
4	An extraordinary scene between Sophia and her aunt	658
5	Mrs. Miller and Mr. Nightingale visit Jones in the prison	662
6	In which Mrs. Miller pays a visit to Sophia	664
7	A pathetic scene between Mr. Allworthy and Mrs. Miller	667
8	Containing various matters	669
9	What happened to Mr. Jones in the prison	674
