PREFACE

THIS volume, the sixth in the series of British Institute Studies in International and Comparative Law, contains some of the working papers, revised and edited, which were submitted to an International Conference on the Expansion of the European Communities organised by the Institute in Dublin in October 1970.

The Institute takes this opportunity of acknowledging its indebtedness to the work of all the contributors to this Conference, which was held under the auspices of the Institute and of the Faculties of Law of Trinity College, Dublin, and of University College, Dublin. The Conference could not have been held without the most active co-operation and support from within Ireland; it was made possible by a generous subvention from the Government of the Republic of Ireland, and that Government's Department of Justice, as well as the Honourable Society of King's Inns, the Incorporated Law Society of Ireland and other bodies gave much appreciated assistance.

The British Institute wishes to thank all the contributors to this volume and to record its indebtedness to the present editors as well as to the members of the Conference Organising Committee—Senator Mary Robinson, Mr. John Temple Lang, Dr. N. March Hunnings, Professor K. R. Simmonds, and Mrs. Jane Welch.

Since the Conference, and even since the preparation of the Editors' introduction to this volume, events have moved quickly. An enlargement of the Communities is now a matter of urgent and immediate concern to both the applicant countries and to the existing member States. The legal problems studied at the Dublin meetings last year have not been overshadowed by more recent political considerations; on the contrary, they are more topical and more worthy of extended analysis.
