Notes on contributors

Professor Manmohan Agarwal is the Reserve Bank of India Chair at the Centre for Development Studies, Thiruvananthapuram, Kerala, India. He retired as Professor from Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi, India after 30 years, and as Adjunct Senior Fellow with the Institute of Chinese Studies. He was Senior Fellow at the Centre for International Governance Innovation (CIGI), Waterloo, Canada, where he worked on issues of the world economy including the G20 and South–South cooperation. He also worked for The World Bank and International Monetary Fund (IMF). His research focused on international and development economics. More recently he worked on the role of current account imbalances in generating the 2008 crisis, the impact of the crisis on developing countries, the G20 and macro coordination, and the role of developing countries in the G20. In development economics, apart from South–South cooperation, he is working on Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) and aid architecture, including Southern development cooperation.

Professor Hany Besada is Regional Adviser, African Mineral Development Centre (AMDC) at the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA); Research Professor, Institute of African Studies, Carleton University, Ontario, Canada; Senior Fellow, Centre on Governance, University of Ottawa, Canada; Senior Research Manager, Africa Business Group, a trade and investment consulting firm in Johannesburg, South Africa; and Senior Governance Specialist with ACT-for-Performance in Ottawa, Canada. Until recently, he was Theme Leader, Governance of Natural Resources, North–South Institute in Ottawa, Canada, and Research Specialist on the UN High Level Panel Secretariat Post-2015 Development Agenda, UN Development Programme (UNDP) in New York. He was also Programme Leader and Senior Researcher at the Centre for International Governance Innovation (CIGI), Waterloo, Canada, and Principal Researcher, Business in Africa, South African Institute of International Affairs (SAIIA), Johannesburg, South Africa. He has authored 70 peer-reviewed scholarly papers and over 70 opinion pieces.

Aniket Bhushan is Senior Researcher at the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs (NPSIA), Carleton University, Canada. He has worked with Canada's leading international development policy think-tank, working at the intersection of data, technology and international development. Has over six years' experience in project management, conducting policy analysis, and liaising with international institutions, foundations, civil society and stakeholders in developing countries. He has extensive knowledge and experience in areas including open data standards, social media big data, data management and visualisation platforms and open source software development, and their applications to international development data. His research interests include fiscal mobilisation in developing countries, international finance, the impact of big data and open data on research in international affairs and development. He was, until late 2014, Senior Researcher at the North-South Institute, Ottawa, Canada with the Governance for Equitable Growth programme, and led the Canadian International Development Platform.

Cristina D'Alessandro is currently Professor at the Paris School of International Affairs (Sciences Po), Paris. She holds a PhD in Geography from the Université François-Rabelais de Tours, France, and has more than 15 years' experience in development in Africa. Her teaching, research and publication activity focuses on Sub-Saharan Africa, and more particularly on urban issues, regional integration and regionalisms, natural resource governance, territorial governance, institutional capacity building and leadership. She publishes in French, English and Italian, and is an international scholar with experience in three continents – Africa, Europe and America. She also serves as an adviser and expert for international organisations and institutions working in Africa.

Fatima Denton is Director of the Special Initiatives Division of the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA) in Addis Ababa, Ethiopia. She previously led the International Development Research Centre's (IDRC) research on adaptation strategies. Fatima joined IDRC in 2006 after working as a senior energy planner with the UN Environment Programme (UNEP) in Denmark. She also worked with the energy programme of Enda Tiers Monde in Senegal on issues such as sustainable development and climate change vulnerability and adaptation, as well as food security, local governance, water and energy poverty in the Sahel. She has written articles on energy poverty, gender and energy, and climate change adaptation. She is lead author for the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, and was also a member of UNEP's Scientific Technical Advisory Panel. Fatima holds a PhD in Political Science and Development Studies from the University of Birmingham, UK.

Bernadette Dia Kamgnia is Acting Director of the African Development Institute, African Development Bank. Prior to joining the Bank, she was Associate Professor of Economics (Agrégé des Sciences Economiques) at the University of Yaoundé II, Cameroon. She was coordinator of the Master's and PhD training programmes of the new PTCI (Programme de Troisième Cycle Inter Universitaire en Economie) of Conférence des Institutions d'Enseignement et de Recherche Economiques et de Gestion en Afrique (CIEREA), an international non-governmental organisation, based in Ouagadougou, Burkina Faso. Until November 2007, she was manager of the Campus for Francophone Africa of the African Economic Research Consortium (AERC) collaborative PhD programme at the University of Yaounde II, Cameroon, as well as Vice-Dean in charge of the academic affairs of the Faculty of Economics and Management. Since May 2009, she has been involved in the Political Economy and Sectorial Issues Thematic Group of the AERC Research Network. Since 2007 she has also provided reviews for AERC research proposals.

George Kararach is a Ugandan political economist and currently Economic Affairs Officer at the Macroeconomic Policy Division of the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (UNECE) and Senior Consultant in the Strategy and Operations Policy Department, African Development Bank. He holds a PhD in Economics from Leeds University, UK. Earlier in his career of over 20 years, George worked for the UN Children's Fund (UNICEF), the UN Development Programme (UNDP), and taught economics at Leeds, Middlesex and Luton Universities. He has just published four books: Macroeconomic policy and the political limits of reform programmes in developing countries (Africa Research and Resource Forum); Rethinking development challenges for public policy: Insights from contemporary Africa (with Kobena Hanson and Timothy Shaw, Palgrave Macmillan); Economic management in a hyperinflationary environment: The political economy of Zimbabwe, 1980-2008 (with Rapheal Otieno, Oxford University Press); and Development policy in Africa: Mastering the future? (Palgrave Macmillan). His other most recent research work includes the development of the Green Growth Index for Africa (GGIA) in collaboration with the Statistics Department of the African Development Bank.

Abbi Mamo Kedir is Economic Affairs Officer in the forecasting section of the Macroeconomic Policy Division of the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA). He started working in the Ministry of External Economic Co-operation in Ethiopia after finishing his BA degree in Economics before moving on to teach in the Department of Economics at Addis Ababa University. Before he joined the UNECA, and after finishing his PhD studies, he worked in different capacities in the UK, including as a Research Fellow (University of Nottingham, 2002) and as an Assistant Professor (University of Leicester, 2003-13). In addition, he served as a consultant to The World Bank, Department for International Development (DfID), African Development Bank and USAID. His expertise is in development economics and applied econometrics. He is currently working, inter alia, on tax compliance on Africa and development finance, as well as on the empirical link between debt and growth in Africa.

Dr Frannie A. Léautier is Chair and Co-Founding Partner of Mkoba Private Equity, a growth capital fund for small and medium enterprises in Africa. She is former World Bank Vice President and Chief of Staff to the President. She holds several board director positions – PTA Bank, African Economic Research Consortium (AERC), Nelson Mandela Institute for Science & Technology, editorial board of the Journal of African Trade (JAT), and UONGOZI Institute. She serves on the Visiting Committees at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) Corporation and on the Advisory Board of Women's World Banking. She was Co-Chair for World Economic Forum (WEF) Africa, and is a member of the WEF Global Agenda Councils. She has a Master's and PhD from MIT; a BSc in Civil Engineering from the University of Dar es Salaam; and graduated from Harvard University's Executive Programme. She holds an honorary degree in Humane Letters from North Central College. She was Distinguished Professor at Sciences Po, Paris, and is well published, with several well-acclaimed books, including Leadership in a globalized world: Complexity, dynamics and risks (Palgrave Macmillan).

Kemi Medu has a PhD from the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs, Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada.

Victor Murinde is Professor of Development Finance, Birmingham Business School, University of Birmingham, UK. He lectured at Makerere, Cardiff Business School, Bradford University, Loughborough and Manchester Universities. He provides advisory services to governments, companies and international organisations, including The World Bank, United Nations (UN), UN Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD), Kuwait Institute of Scientific Research, African Development Bank and Caribbean Development Bank. He has held the distinguished Hallsworth Senior Research Fellowship at the Institute for Development Policy and Management, University of Manchester, UK, 2001-02, received generous research grants from the European Commission, Department for International Development (DfID), Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) and the Leverhulme Trust, and been Visiting Professor at the Cardiff Business School and Professor Extraordinary, University of Stellenbosch Business School, South Africa. He was, until recently, Director of the African Development Institute, African Development Bank, Tunis. His current research interests include emerging financial markets, capital structure and dividend policy, bank performance and risk, flow-of-funds, financial development and poverty reduction.

Benjamin O'Bright is a PhD student in Political Science and International Relations at Dalhousie University in Halifax, Canada. His research focuses on the leveraging off-the-shelf consumer technology for achieving human security, successful post-conflict reconstruction, gaps in institutional governance and generalised development. Ben holds a combined BA in Political Science and Legal Studies from Carleton University, Canada, where he studied the pre-Edward Snowden use of digital media sources by intelligence agencies for data collection, and an MSc in the Politics and Government of the European Union (EU) from the London School of Economics and Political Science. His MSc dissertation focused on the reflection of core EU institutional values in member state digital media policies. Between 2007-13 he was a lead researcher with the Landon Pearson Resource Centre for the Study of Childhood and Children's Rights, the London-based Eden Stanley Group, and Junior Researcher at the North-South Institute, Ottawa, Canada.

Natasha Pirzada works with the United Nations Capital Development Fund (UNCDF) LoCAL (Local Climate Adaptive Living) Facility, Bangkok, Thailand. She is excited to be able to contribute towards development in the least developed countries through small infrastructure projects such as the building of roads, bridges and dams that make a dynamic impact on the livelihoods of rural communities. She believes that local economic development and the climate go hand in hand, and that partnerships of the federal government with provincial and local municipal authorities are vital if climate finance is to reach grassroots levels. Natasha has worked, lived and travelled extensively throughout North America, the Middle East and North Africa and South Asia. She holds an MA in Environmental Studies from the University of Waterloo in Canada and a BA in Government from Georgetown University in Washington, DC, US.

Dr Leah McMillan Polonenko is Lecturer at Emirates Aviation University, Dubai, United Arab Emirates. Prior to that she was Assistant Professor of International Development at Tyndale University College and Seminary, Toronto, Canada. Leah received her PhD from Balsillie School of International Affairs, Wilfrid Laurier University, Canada. Her most recent work has looked at the impact of global social policies on local development. Her publication, The impact of global education policy: Missing out on the 'local' in Southeastern Africa (Library and Archives Canada: Ottawa), examines the impact of the Education for All policy in Malawi, Tanzania and Zambia, exhibiting her passion to merge international development policy into sustainable practice. She is committed to maintaining research projects that connect research with policy and practice, with the overarching goal of alleviating the challenges of poverty, inequality and under-development. Leah has also researched the possibility for improved socioeconomic and environmental practices in natural resource governance in Sub-Saharan Africa.

Yiagadeesen Samy is Associate Professor and Associate Director (MA programme) at the Norman Paterson School of International Affairs, Carleton University, Ottawa, Canada. He holds a PhD in Economics and his broad research interests are in the areas of international trade and development economics. He has published widely on various issues such as trade and labour standards, foreign direct investment, small island developing states, state fragility, aid effectiveness, domestic resource mobilisation and income inequality. He co-authored a book on fragile states published by Routledge in 2009, and co-edited the 2013 edition of Canada among nations on Canada–Africa relations. Some of his recent peer-reviewed publications have appeared or are forthcoming in the Journal of Conflict Resolution, Canadian Journal of Development Studies, Third World Quarterly and International Interactions.

Timothy M. Shaw is Visiting Research Professor, and for last three years (2012–15), Foundation Director of the PhD in Global Governance and Human Security, McCormack Graduate School, University of Massachusetts, Boston, US, and also Adjunct Professor at both Carleton and Ottawa Universities, Canada. He has been Professor and Director at the Institute of International Relations, University of the West Indies, St Augustine, Trinidad; Associate Research Fellow, United Nations University Comparative Regional Integration Studies, Bruges; and distinguished Research Associate, North-South Institute, Ottawa, Canada. He previously directed the Institute of Commonwealth Studies, University of London, UK, where he remains Professor Emeritus. Since 1 February 2013, he has been an Assigned Professor at the Faculty of Social Science, Aalborg University, Denmark. He is also Visiting Professor at Mbarara and Stellenbosch Universities in Africa, and has received an honorary degree of Doctor of Letters at the University of St Andrews, Scotland. He currently edits an international political economy book series for both Ashgate Publishing and Palgrave Macmillan.

James Wakiaga is currently Senior Economist for the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), Ethiopia. He previously served in a similar position in Zimbabwe from 2009–13. Prior to this, he worked at Kenya's Ministry of Foreign Affairs and served at the Kenya Embassy in Washington DC, with a liaison role on matters pertaining to The World Bank, International Monetary Fund (IMF), US Congress and the US Treasury Department. He has contributed to several knowledge products on poverty, Millennium Development Goals (MDGs), human development and economic growth, with a focus on Africa. He is also a member of the External Reviewers Group and Strategic Studies Group for the African capacity indicators report.

Karolina Werner is a PhD candidate in Global Governance at Balsillie School of International Affairs, Wilfrid Laurier University, Waterloo, Canada. Prior to entering the PhD programme, Karolina worked as a project manager at the Centre for International Governance Innovation (CIGI) in Ontario, Canada, where she was affiliated with the African Initiative. Before that, she was at the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) and the International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis, both situated in Austria. She has an MA in Peace and Conflict Studies, and an HBS in Peace and Conflict Studies and Psychology. Karolina's interests lie primarily in conflict issues in Africa, and international conflict mediation and grassroots approaches to conflict transformation.

Kristen Winters was, until October 2014, a Research Assistant at the North-South Institute, Ottawa, Canada.

This volume brings together fresh insights from leading scholars and practitioners from both the North and the South on the emerging features of public policy conversations around Africa and the post-2015 development agenda. These consist of old and recurrent problems, for example, the legacy of leadership in African development; issues of agency and political economy – especially the importance of social voice and social inclusion; enhancing governance of all types including that of trans-boundary resources such as water and land; the primacy of resource mobilisation, programme execution and management; and the importance of striking strategic partnerships as well as good management of endowments such as the discovery of new resource wealth.

The completion of this volume has hinged on the support of numerous individuals, whose time and dedication made the compilation process a success. In particular, Kristen Winters, the book project's coordinator, has been instrumental in providing the necessary leadership, critical management and coordination of the entire process from start to finish. The book would not have been possible without her attention to detail, sharp editorial skills, strong research experience and critical project management. She was ultimately responsible for the final touching and compilation of the various chapters, and ensured quality control throughout the entire publication process. The timely assembly of the volume was made possible through the efforts of Ben O'Bright, University of Ottawa researcher, who assisted with some of the editorial work and research that went behind the book.

The book's editors would like to especially acknowledge the contribution of Homi Kharas, Joe Ingram, Caroline Andrew, Eric Champagne, Blair Rutherford, Nicole Rippin, Franklyn Lisk, Stuart Croft, David, Jiajun Xu, Molly Elgin-Cossart, Karina Gerlach, Akopyan, Lisa John, Haroon Bhorat, Anthony Barzey, Amos Cheptoo, Siaka Coulibaly, Gibson Ghuveya, Kobena Hanson, Harry Kojwang, Steve Kayizzi-Mugerwa, John Loxley, Sydney Mabika, Fewstancia Munyaradzi, Takawira Mvuma, Muthuli Ncube, Elias Ngalande, Floribert Ngaruko, Dominique Njinkeu, George Omondi, Michael Plummer, Malcolm Sawyer, John Halligan, Severine Rugumamu and Robert Nantchouang. We thank each of them for their commitment and support.

The project's institutional partners have also been integral players in the creation of this volume. Specifically, the cooperation of the African Development Bank, University of Ottawa Centre on Governance, Carleton University Institute of African Studies and the University of Massachusetts, Boston, facilitated the production process, and without their support, the project may have never gotten off the ground.
