For my parents

Acknowledgements

My warmest thanks go to John Finnis and Jeffrey Hackney for their unfailing assistance and encouragement as supervisors of my research at Oxford. Their advice and critical comments were invaluable to me in the production of the thesis which is now published. In a more general way, the discussions I had with them enriched my knowledge and broadened my perspectives, bringing to my attention many issues which otherwise would have eluded me entirely. I would also like to thank my examiners, Bernard Rudden and A.W.B. Simpson, whose perceptive questions and thoughtful suggestions prompted me to make substantial additions to the conclusions. F. M. Brookfield, Judy Fudge, Paul McHugh, Brian Slattery, and Ursula Tarkowski also read drafts of various parts of this work and made helpful and much appreciated comments. On the financial side, I am very grateful to the Commonwealth Scholarship Commission and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada for generously funding my research. Finally, I would like to thank my wife, Madeleine Hélie, for her constant support, and for deciphering and patiently typing and retyping the manuscript, a task which, in this age of wordprocessing technology, few would so willingly undertake.
