Once two good friends were spending their holidays in the country. One day they went for a walk in a forest (树林). They loved its fresh air (新鲜空气) and the beautiful trees. When they were sitting under a large tree for a rest, they suddenly found an elephant (象) standing by. The animal was not happy with the strangers. These two men were afraid and began to run. The elephant ran after them. Finally, one of the two climbed up a tree and the other jumped into a hole. Soon the man who jumped into the hole came out. Very quickly the elephant drove him back into the hole. Soon the man came out again, and it drove him right back. This went on five or six times.

The man in the tree, who was very angry, finally cried to his friend in the hole, "You fool! Stay in the hole for a while. Otherwise (否则) it will keep us here all day."

As the other came out of the hole, he said, "That's all right for you say that, but there is a bear (熊) in this hole."
