There are three dogs in a small town. They have different colours. One of them is black. The others are brown and white. So people call them Black, Brown and White.

These three dogs are good friends. They often play games together. Today Black asks Brown and White, "Do you enjoy running a race?" "Yes, I do," answers Brown. White says, "I like running races very much. Shall we run a race today?" "Hey, that's a good idea!" Black shouts happily. "Let's run to the hill over there. It's about 6,000 metres away from here." "OK. Let's run a 6,000-metre race," Brown and White say. Their race will begin at 9:00 a. m.

"Dogs are going to run a race at 9 o'clock in the morning!" That's good news for all the animals in the town. Pigs, sheep, cats and chickens all come out to the field. Cats ask, "Can we take part in the race?" "No, no," the dogs say, "you can't." So all the other animals can only watch the dogs.

At 9:00 a. m. the 6,000-metre race begins. And the three dogs run to the hill at once. Usually Black runs 1,000 metres in 100 seconds. Brown can do it in 105 seconds. White can run 3,000 metres in 270 seconds. So today Black gets to the hill at 9:10 a. m. He gets there after White, but before Brown.
